MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

A message from the House by Mr. Eden, Assistant Clerk:

Mr. President—I am directed to inform the Senate that the House of Representatives has adopted the following preamble and joint resolution, in the adoption of which I am instructed to ask the concurrence of the Senate, to wit:

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 23.

WHEREAS, An Act was passed by the Forty-third General Assembly amending the general election law of this State, entitled, "An Act to provide for the use of voting machines at elections for casting, registering, recording and counting ballots or votes; also creating a board of voting machine commissioners and defining its duties." (Approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903.)

SEC. 430. SUBMISSION OF QUESTION OF ADOPTING VOTING MACHINE—CONSTRUCTION OF MACHINE—REQUIREMENTS SPECIFIED]. SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That anybody or board of public officials, or any officer or officers charged by law with the duty of providing material and supplies for holding an election or elections in any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State, may at any general or special election submit a proposition to the qualified voters thereof to adopt a voting machine or voting machines, and whenever a majority of the electors of any such city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division voting upon said proposition shall have declared therefor, may purchase or lease a voting machine or voting machines for any or all of the election precincts for which he, it or they are by law charged by law with the duty of providing material and supplies for holding an election or elections, at the expense of the city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State now chargeable by law with the expenses of the material and supplies for holding general elections in such civil division or divisions. If the question of using a voting machine or voting machines be not submitted to the voters by the proper public officials, a petition signed by 10 per cent of the voters of any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State and addressed to them at least sixty days before any general election asking the submission of the question of adopting a voting machine or voting machines shall compel the submission of the question to the voters at that election. Use of such machines may be discontinued on resubmission of the question and a vote in favor thereof at any subsequent election: Provided, and however, That no such voting machine shall be used, purchased, leased or adopted until the board of voting machine commissioners hereinafter provided for, or a majority thereof, shall have made and filed a report certifying that they have examined such machine; that it affords each elector an opportunity to vote in absolute secrecy; that it enables each elector to vote a straight party ticket; that it enables each elector to vote a ticket selected in part from the nominees of one party, and in part from the nominees of any or all other parties, and in part from an independent nomination and in part of persons not in nomination by any party or upon any independent ticket; that it enables each elector to vote a written or printed ballot of his own selection, for any person for any office for which he may desire; that it enables each elector to vote for all candidates for whom he is entitled to vote and prevents him from voting for any candidate for any office more than once, unless he is lawfully entitled to cast more than one vote for one candidate and in that event permits him to cast only as many votes for that candidate as he is by law entitled and no more; that it prevents the elector from voting for more than one person for the same office unless he is lawfully entitled to vote for more than one person therefor, and in that event permits him to vote for as many persons for that office as he is by law entitled and no more; and that such machine will register correctly by means of exact counters, every vote cast for the regular tickets thereon; and has the capacity to contain the tickets of seven political parties with the names of all the candidates thereon, together with all propositions to be voted upon except that it may be so constructed that the names of all candidates for presidential electors will not occur thereon, but in lieu thereof one ballot label in each party column or row shall contain only the words "Presidential Electors," preceded by the party name. That all votes cast on the machine on a regular ballot or ballots shall be registered; that voters may by means of irregular ballots or otherwise vote for any person for any office, although such person may not have been nominated by any party and his name may not appear on such machine; then when a vote is cast for any person for any such office, when his name does not appear on the machine, the elector cannot vote for any name on the machine for the same office; that each elector can, understandingly and within the period of one minute cast his vote for all candidates of his choice; that in case the machine is so constructed that the candidates for presidential electors of any party can be voted for only by voting for the ballot label containing the words "Presidential Electors," by voting an irregular ticket as hereinafter defined the elector may vote for any person or persons he may choose for presidential electors; that the machine is provided with a lock or locks by the use of which any movement of the voting or registering mechanism is absolutely prevented so that it cannot be tampered with or manipulated for any fraudulent purposes; that the machine is susceptible of being closed during the progress of the voting so that no person can see or know the number of votes registered for any candidate: Provided, also, that no such machine or machines shall be purchased unless the party or parties making the sale shall guarantee in writing to keep the machine or machines in good working order for five years without additional cost and shall give a sufficient bond conditional to that effect.

Sec. 431. MACHINE MUST MEET ALL REQUIREMENTS SPECIFIED.] Sec. 2. The voting machine or machines to be used, adopted, leased or purchased as herein provided must be so constructed as to meet all requirements specified in this Act.

Sec. 432. BOARD OF VOTING MACHINE COMMISSIONERS—TERMS OF OFFICE—EXAMINATION OF MACHINE—REPORT—APPROVAL—COMPENSATION.] Sec. 3. The Secretary of State and two persons appointed by the Governor, who shall be mechanical experts and not members of the same political party, shall constitute a board of voting machine commissioners. Their term of office shall be four years, except that the commissioners appointed by the Governor shall be subject to removal at his pleasure and that any Secretary of State on surrendering the duties of his office shall be succeeded on the board by the succeeding Secretary of State. If the office of Secretary of State for any reason shall become vacant the Attorney General of the State shall be a member of the board until the office of Secretary of State is filled. No member of the board shall have any interest in any voting machine. Any person or corporation owning or being interested in any voting machine may apply to said board to examine such machine and report on its accuracy, efficiency, capacity and safety. The commissioners shall examine the machine and make full report thereon in the office of the Secretary of State. They shall state in the report whether or not the kind of machine so examined complies with the requirements of this Act and can be safely used by voters at elections under the conditions prescribed in this Act. If the report be in the affirmative upon said questions, the machine shall be deemed approved by the board and machines of its kind may be adopted for use at elections as herein provided. When the machine has been so approved any improvement or change that does not impair its accuracy, efficiency, capacity or safety shall not render necessary a re-examination or re-approval thereof. Any form of voting machine not so approved cannot be used at any election. Each of the two mechanical experts on the board shall be entitled to one hundred dollars ($100.00) for his compensation and expenses in making such examination and report, to be paid by the person or corporation applying for such examination, which sum may be demanded in advance of making the examination, and which shall be the sole compensation to be received by any such expert. The board may, if it consents to do so, go to any point in the State for the purpose of examining a machine, but it shall not be compelled to make such examination at any place other than the capital of the State: Provided, that each of the two commissioners appointed as mechanical experts shall not receive and retain to exceed fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500.00) and reasonable expenses in any one year, and all sums collected for such examinations over and above said maximum salaries and reasonable expenses shall be turned into the State treasury.

Sec. 433. EXPERIMENTAL USE PERMITTED.] Sec. 4. The authorities of any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division authorized by section 1 of this Act to adopt a voting machine or voting machines may provide for the experimental use, at any election or elections, in one or more election precincts, of a machine which it might lawfully adopt, without a formal adoption thereof, and its use at such elections shall be as valid for all purposes as if it had been lawfully adopted.

Sec. 434. HOW PAYMENT FOR MACHINE MAY BE PROVIDED FOR.] Sec. 5. The local authorities, on the adoption and lease or purchase of a voting machine or voting machines, may provide for the payment therefor in such manner as may be deemed for the best interest of the city, village, incorporated town or county. They may for that purpose make leases, issue bonds, certificates of indebtedness, or other obligations, which shall be a charge on the city, village, incorporated town or county. Such bonds, certificates or other obligations may be issued with or without interest, payable at such time or times as the authorities may determine, but shall not be issued or sold at less than par.

Sec. 435. ELECTION PRECINCT IN WHICH MACHINES USED—NUMBER OF VOTERS—RE-DIVISION OF PRECINCTS.] Sec. 6. For any election in any city, village, incorporated town, county, election district or other civil division in which voting machines are to be used, the election precincts in which such machines are to be used may be created by the officers charged with the duty of creating election precincts so as to contain as near as may be six hundred votes each. Such re-districting or re-division shall be made, under such regulations as to time and manner as are now provided by law. Thereafter, so long as voting machines are (are) used, no re-division of such election precincts shall be made until at some general election the number of votes cast in one or more of such precincts shall exceed seven hundred.

Sec. 436. SUPPLYING PRECINCTS WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 7. The local authorities adopting a voting machine or voting machines shall, as soon as practicable thereafter, provide for each polling place a voting machine in complete working order, and shall thereafter preserve and keep it in repair, and shall have the custody thereof, and of the furniture and equipment of the polling place when not in use at an election. If it shall be impracticable to supply each election precinct with a voting machine at the election following such adoption, as many may be supplied as it is practicable to procure, and the same may be used in such election precinct or precincts within the city, village, incorporated town, county, election district or other civil division, as the officers adopting the same may direct.

Sec. 437. HOW MACHINE SHALL BE PLACED IN ROOM—ONE MINUTE FOR VOTING.] Sec. 8. The room in which the election is held shall have a railing separating the part of the room occupied by the judges and clerks of election from that part of the room occupied by the voting machine. The exterior of the voting machine and every part of the polling place shall be in plain view of the election officers. The voting machine shall be placed at least three feet from every wall and partition of the polling place and at least four feet from any election officer or table used by them, and it shall be so placed that no person on the opposite side of the railing can see or determine from the outside of the room how the voter casts his vote. After the opening of the polls the election judges shall allow no person to pass within the railing to the part of the room where the machine is situated, except for the purpose of voting, except as is provided in the next succeeding section of this Act; and they shall not permit more than one voter at a time to be in such part of the room. They shall not themselves remain or permit any other person to remain in any position or near any position that would permit one to see or ascertain how a voter votes or how he has voted. No voter shall remain within the voting booth or compartment longer than one minute, and if any voter shall refuse to leave after the lapse of that time, he shall at once be removed by the election officers or upon their order.

Sec. 438. WHERE VOTER CAN NOT READ OR IS UNABLE TO USE MACHINE—INTOXICATED PERSON.] Sec. 9. Any voter who may declare upon oath that he can not read the English language, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to use the voting machine, shall, upon request, be assisted by two of the election officers of different parties, to be selected by the judges and clerks of the precincts in which they are to act, to be designated by the judges of election at the opening of the polls. Such officers, in the voter's presence and in the presence of each other, shall register his vote upon the machine for the candidates of his choice, and shall thereafter give no information regarding the same. The clerks of election shall enter upon the poll list after the name of any elector who received such assistance in registering his vote a memorandum of the fact. Intoxication shall not be regarded as a physical disability, and no intoxicated person shall be entitled to assistance in registering his vote.

Sec. 439. WHERE VOTER ASKS FOR INSTRUCTION CONCERNING MANNER OF VOTING.] Sec. 10. In case any elector after entering the voting machine booth shall ask for further instructions concerning the manner of voting, two judges of opposite political parties shall give such instructions to him; but no judge or other election officer, or person assisting an elector, shall, in any manner, request, suggest or seek to persuade, or induce any such elector to vote any particular ticket, or for any particular candidate, or for or against any particular amendment, question or proposition. After receiving such instructions, such elector shall vote as in the case of an unassisted voter.

Sec. 440. BALLOT LABEL.] Sec. 11. That portion of cardboard, paper or other material, placed on the front of the machine and containing the names of the candidates, or a statement of the proposed constitutional amendment or other question or proposition to be voted on, shall be known in this Act as a ballot label. The ballot label shall be supplied by the official or officials charged by law with providing material for the holding of an election or elections and shall be printed in black ink on clear white material of such size as will fit the machine and in plain, clear type, as large as the space will reasonably permit. The party name or other designation shall be prefixed to the list of candidates of such party. The order of the lists of candidates of the several parties shall be arranged as is now provided by law, except that the lists may be placed in horizontal rows or vertical columns, which parties may, if desired, be divided into parallel and contiguous rows or columns, and except that where presidential electors are to be voted for at any election, and the machine to be used will not carry the names of all candidates for such electors, then there may be placed on the ballot label the words "Presidential Electors," under the name of each political party.

Sec. 441. SAMPLE BALLOT LABEL.] Sec. 12. The officers or board charged with the duty of providing ballots and ballot labels for any polling place shall provide therefor two sample ballot labels, which shall be arranged in the form of a diagram, showing the entire front of the voting machine as it will appear after the official ballot labels are arranged for voting on election day. Such sample ballot labels shall be displayed for public inspection at such polling place during the day preceding election day.

Sec. 442. FOUR SETS OF BALLOT LABELS PROVIDED—DUTY OF OFFICERS IN PUTTING MACHINE IN ORDER, ETC.—DELIVERY OF MACHINE IN ROOM WHERE ELECTION HELD—DUTY OF JUDGES AND CLERKS.] Sec. 13. Four sets of ballot labels for use in the voting machine shall be provided for each polling place for each election by the officer or officers now charged by law with the duty of furnishing such election precincts with ballots. In such manner shall be furnished also all other necessary material for the use of the voting machines. The same officer or officers shall, before the day of election, cause the proper ballot labels to be put on each machine corresponding with the sample ballot labels herein provided for, and the machine in every way to be put in order, set and adjusted, ready for use in voting when delivered at the precinct; and for the purpose of so labeling the machine, putting in order, setting and adjusting the same, they may employ one or more competent persons and cause him or them to be paid in the same manner as other election officers are paid. And the same officer or officers shall cause the machine so labeled in order, set and adjusted, to be delivered at the voting precinct, together with all necessary furniture and appliances that go with the same, in the room where the election is to be held in the precinct, not later than 6:00 o'clock p. m. of the day preceding the election. After the delivery of the machine and on the same day the judges and clerks of election of the precinct may meet at said room, open the package containing the sample ballots, and, if necessary, the ballot labels, and see that the machine is correctly labeled, set and adjusted, ready for use in voting; and if the same is not so labeled, set and adjusted and in order, they shall cause it to be done. On the morning of the election the election officers shall meet in the said room at least one hour before the time for opening the polls. They shall see that the sample ballot labels and instruction cards are posted properly, and everything put in readiness for the voting at the hour of opening the polls. The officers shall compare ballot labels on the machine with the sample ballots, see that they are correct, examine and see that all the counters in the machine are set at naught or zero (0) and that the machine is otherwise in perfect order, and they shall not thereafter permit the counters to be operated or moved except by electors in voting, and they shall also see that all necessary arrangements and adjustments are made for voting irregular ballots on the machine.

443. IRREGULAR BALLOTS.] Sec. 14. Ballots voted for any person whose name does not appear on the ballot label on the machine as a candidate for office, are herein referred to as irregular ballots. In voting for presidential electors a voter may vote an irregular ticket made up of the names of persons in nomination by different parties or partially of the names or persons so in nomination and partially of persons not in nomination by any party. Such irregular ballot shall be deposited, written or affixed in or upon the receptacle or device provided on the machine for that purpose.

Sec. 444. WITH CLOSE OF POLLS, MACHINE LOCKED AND COUNTING COMPARTMENT OPENED.] Sec. 15. As soon as the polls are closed, the voting machine shall be locked against voting and the counting compartment opened in the presence of all the judges and clerks of election and all other persons who may be lawfully within the room, giving full view of the numbers announcing the votes cast for each candidate and for and against the various constitutional amendments, questions or other propositions.

Sec. 445. ASCERTAINING NUMBER OF VOTES—WRITTEN STATEMENTS TO BE SIGNED BY ELECTION OFFICERS—IRREGULAR BALLOTS—MACHINE TO BE LOCKED FOR THIRTY DAYS.] Sec. 16. The election officers shall then ascertain the number of votes which the candidates have received both on the machine and by the voting of irregular ballots, if any, and one of the judges shall publicly announce in a distinct voice the total vote of each candidate thus ascertained in the order of the offices as their titles are arranged on the ballot label. He shall then announce in the same manner the vote on each constitutional amendment, proposition or other question. Before leaving the room and before closing and locking the counting compartment, the election officers shall make and sign written statements or returns of such election, as now required by law. When irregular ballots have been voted they shall be returned, preserved and finally destroyed, as is now provided by law in the case of other election ballots. The written statements or returns so made, after having been properly signed, shall be distinctly and clearly read in the hearing of all persons present, and ample opportunity shall be given to compare the results so certified with the counter dials of the machine. After such comparison and correction, if any such is made, the election officers shall then close the counting compartment and lock the same. Thereafter the machine shall remain locked for a period of at least thirty days unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 446. KEYS TO BE RETURNED WITH WRITTEN STATEMENT.] Sec. 17. When the machine is locked at the close of an election in the manner required by this Act, the judges shall place all keys of the machine on a single piece of flexible wire, unite the ends of such wire in a firm knot, label the same with the make and number of the machine and the precinct at which it was used at such election, and return such keys along with the written statements or returns of such election.

Sec. 447. WHERE MACHINE SUPPLIED WITH RECORDING DEVICE.] Sec. 18. A voting machine which possesses all the qualities required by this Act may be supplied in addition with any recording device on which all the votes registered on the mechanical counters will be separately recorded. When a machine is supplied with such device the same shall not be taken out or examined by the election officers who make the return [returns] from the precinct, but such machine shall be locked with such device therein and so remain for a period of at least thirty days unless within that time the machine shall be ordered open by some court of competent jurisdiction. At the end of thirty days such device may be taken out unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 448. PENALTY FOR PERSON TAMPERING WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 19. Any person not an election officer or other public officer who shall tamper or attempt to tamper with such voting machine or voting machines, or in any way intentionally impair or attempt to impair its use, and any such person who shall be guilty of or shall attempt any dishonest practice upon any such machine, or with or by its use, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and shall be punishable by a fine of from $100.00 to $1,000.00, or by imprisonment for a term of from one to five years, or by both fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 449. PENALTY FOR OFFICIAL TAMPERING, ETC., WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 20. Any clerk or judge of an election or any other public officer authorized to take part in the holding of an election or in preparing for an election, who, with intent to cause or permit any voting machine to fail to register correctly all votes cast thereon; who tampers with or disarranges such machine in any way, or any part or appliance thereof, or who causes or consents to said machine being used for voting at any election with knowledge of the fact that the same is not in order, or not perfectly set and adjusted so that it will correctly register all votes cast thereon; or who, with the purpose of defrauding or deceiving any voter or of causing it to be doubtful for what ticket or candidate or candidates or proposition any vote is cast, or of causing it to appear on said machine that votes cast for one ticket, candidate or proposition were cast for another ticket, candidate or proposition, removes, changes or mutilates any ballot label on said machine or any part thereof, or does any other thing intended to interfere with the validity of the election, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be imprisoned in the State prison not less than one year nor more than ten years, to which may be added a fine not exceeding $1,000.00.

Sec. 450. PENALTY FOR NEGLECT OF DUTY BY PUBLIC OFFICER OR ELECTION OFFICER.] Sec. 21. Any public officer or any election officer upon whom any duty is imposed by this Act, and who shall willfully omit or neglect to perform such duty, or who shall do any act prohibited herein for which imprisonment is not otherwise provided herein, shall, upon conviction, be imprisoned in the State prison for not less than one year nor more than ten years or be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000 or may be punished by both such imprisonment and fine.

Sec. 451. PROVISIONS OF ELECTION LAW NOT INCONSISTENT WITH ACT APPLY.] Sec. 22. All the provisions of the election law not inconsistent with this Act shall apply to all the elections in the precincts where such voting machines are used. Any provisions of law which conflict with the use of such machine or machines as herein set forth shall not apply to the precinct or precincts in which an election is conducted by the use of such machine or machines.

WHEREAS, Under the authority reposed in them, by this statute, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago, did, in July, 1911, contract to purchase one thousand (1,000) voting machines for use in the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, The extreme dissatisfaction caused by their, the said election commissioners', alleged gross disregard for the provisions of the foregoing statute, and their alleged lack of respect for the rights of the voters of the entire State of Illinois, and the taxpayers of the city of Chicago, in making said purchase; did cause an investigation to be made and a protest to be filed by the "Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency" with the mayor and aldermen of the city of Chicago, as follows:

"To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Chicago:

"GENTLEMEN—Your Honorable Body is again called upon to take official cognizance of the ill-advised and extravagant contract made by the Board of Election Commissioners in July, 1911, for the purchase of 1,000 voting machines, the contract price of which amounts in the aggregate to $942,500.00. The election commissioners are requesting the council to include in its appropriations for 1913 an item of $282,750.00 to be used for the payment of 300 of these machines. The first 300 machines delivered, the contract price of which was $188,500.00, have already been paid for under an appropriation made in 1912. The remaining 500 machines have not been delivered. If these 500 machines are delivered and have to be paid for by the city, it will be necessary for the council to appropriate within the next two years a total of $754,000.00 (including the appropriation now sought), for the purpose of paying for voting machines, which the Supreme Court of Illinois has recently decided do not comply with the requirements of the voting machine statute."

In compliance with the request of the election commissioners, the Finance Committee has included in the appropriation ordinance submitted to the Council Dec. 30, 1912, the following item:

"Voting machines and trucks—

Three hundred voting machines, at $942.50 each.....	$282,750 00
All other items	585 00

Subject to payment by judgments or issuance of certificates $283,335 00

It further appears from the ordinance that this sum of $283,335.00 is not appropriated from the corporate fund, but that it is "appropriated subject to judgments or issuance of certificate." No fund, however, is designated from which either judgments or certificates can be paid. Under these circumstances it is not clear in what manner the council intends this $283,335.00 shall be paid in case judgment is rendered or certificates are issued.

In this connection it should not be overlooked, however, that the contract price of these machines is to be regarded as an "expense" incurred by the election commissioners. This, in the view taken by the corporation counsel in his opinion rendered Jan. 29, 1912. Section 1 of Article VII of the City Election law provides that "such expenditures shall be paid by the city treasurer * * * out of any money in the city treasury not otherwise appropriated." Attention is directed to the fact that the city's traction fund is "money in the city treasury not otherwise appropriated" and out of which it is possible the holders of voting machine certificates or warrants might enforce their claims.

The Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency believes that the council should take notice of this situation and should refuse to appropriate further for these machines, which were purchased by the Board of Election Commissioners without consultation with the council and in utter disregard of the policy of caution demanded by the interests of the taxpaying public.

THE 1911 INVESTIGATION AND REPORT OF THE BUREAU.

When it was learned in May, 1911 that the Board of Election Commissioners was planning to make a contract for the purchase of voting machines, the Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency made an investigation of the subject. This investigation disclosed the fact that the voting machine was still in the experimental stage and that there were numerous objections to the purchase of a large number of such machines. In a report issued at that time the bureau stated:

"The Chicago situation presents unusual obstacles to the successful use of voting machines. Among these are the long ballot made necessary by the large number of offices to be filled at some elections; the group voting for certain offices, such as judges and county commissioners; and the system of cumulative voting for members of the Lower House of the General Assembly, which is peculiar to Illinois. The fact that women may vote for university trustees, but not for other officers requires a restrictive device that introduces additional complications. The long ballot necessitates the use in Chicago of a larger and heavier machine than is required in other cities that have adopted voting machines. The size and weight of the machine cause it to present problems of transportation, of storage and of setting up in the voting booth. There are special complexities due to the use of the voting machine at a preliminary [primary] election at which nominations are to be made for a large number of offices.

"Aside from the mechanical operation of the machine itself, there are other elements of uncertainty connected with the use of voting machines that call for experimentation and caution. It cannot be told until the actual trial is made how rapidly the voting can be done by machine, even assuming the mechanism to operate perfectly so far as all except the human element is concerned. This bureau learns that in Minneapolis, where voting machines are in use, the voting has been so much slower than anticipated that it has been found necessary to install two machines to a precinct of 600 voters, instead of one. The Illinois law contemplates a single machine to a precinct of 600 voters. Then there are the problems of transportation and storage and the proper setting of the machines in the booths. Three of these machines will make a truck load and it will require at least three men to handle one. Skilled persons will be required to set them up when taken from the storage room to the voting booth. It would seem that the Board of Election Commissioners ought to acquire experience in handling 50 or 100 machines before undertaking the burden of managing 1,200. This experience, moreover, should be in connection with the most trying elections, such as the primary of April, 1912, and the election of the following November, when the long ballot must be voted."

Inquiries made at that time disclosed the fact also that although the city of Chicago would be expected to make provision for paying for the machines to be purchased, the financial officers of the city had not been consulted in regard to the matter and further, that prior Boards of Election Commissioners had secured appropriations from the city council before taking steps looking to the purchase of voting machines. In this connection it was pointed out that although the plans of the present board contemplated the expenditure of approximately $1,000,000, no prior board had deemed it wise to consider an initial expenditure in excess of $100,000.00.

As a result of this investigation, it seemed obvious, in view of the difficulties and uncertainties which existed, that ordinary business prudence demand a policy of experimentation and caution on the part of the election commissioners. The main conclusions reached by the bureau were summarized in its report, as follows:

1. The number of voting machines to be purchased in the near future should be limited to one hundred at the most; and the purchase of a greater number of machines should be postponed until after trial at the primaries of April, 1912, and at the election of November, 1912, of such limited number of machines.

2. The Board of Election Commissioners should seek to secure the cooperation of the financial authorities of the city in advance of action looking to the purchase of voting machines, whatever the amount involved.

THE CONTRACT OF 1911 AND THE APPROPRIATION OF 1912.

In the face of the situation above set forth, of which they were fully advised, and notwithstanding the adverse comments of the public press, the Board of Election Commissioners and the Empire Voting Machine Company disregarded every principle of business prudence, and in July, 1911, entered into the contract mentioned for the purchase of 1,000 machines.

When the 1912 appropriation ordinance was before the council, that body was asked to appropriate $188,500.00 for the payment of 200 of the machines. While the matter was still pending, the bureau, on Feb. 5, 1912, petitioned the council not to make any appropriation "unless it (the contract) should be modified (1) to provide for the delivery of not to exceed 100 machines on the first installment, and (2) to relieve the board from the obligation to take 1,000 machines if those delivered on the first installment shall not prove satisfactory when placed in use." This suggestion on the part of the bureau was disregarded. The appropriation asked for was made and the 200 machines were delivered and paid for.

At the time the council was considering this appropriation of $188,500.00, it had before it, however, the opinion of the corporation counsel in which he advised that it was "incumbent on the city of Chicago to pay the obligations incurred by the Board of Election Commissioners in buying such voting machines." It is perhaps fair to assume that many of the aldermen voting for that appropriation believed it their duty to do so on the advice thus given by the corporation counsel.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

The situation at the present time differs radically from that which existed in January and February, 1912. The corporation counsel in his opinion then rendered confined himself to the question of the liability of the city to pay the "obligations" incurred by the Board of Election Commissioners. At that time no opportunity had been afforded to test the machines at either a primary or a general election. He assumed apparently that the voting machines contracted for and to be delivered would meet the requirements of the voting machine law and that, when such machines were accepted by the Board of Election Commissioners, a binding obligation would be incurred.

The voting machine statute is explicit on the point that no voting machine shall be purchased unless it is so constructed as to meet all the requirements specified in that Act, among which is the requirement that "each elector can understandingly and within the period of one minute cast his vote for all candidates of his choice." The Board of Election Commissioners is given no power to purchase any machine which does not meet this requirement and it seems obvious that, if the board were to make a contract for a machine which did not meet the above requirement, the contract so made would not create a binding obligation on the city because of the lack of power in the board to make such a contract. It would seem equally clear that, no matter what may be the terms of the contract made by the board, if the machine itself when delivered does not, in fact, meet the requirements of the voting machine statute, the city would not be bound. Attention is called, however, to the contract under which the machines in question were purchased. By its terms the company "agrees that each machine so furnished shall in all respects comply with all the requirements of the statutes of Illinois now in force relating to the use of voting machines."

If it be said that the Board of Election Commissioners has accepted the machines and in so doing has found that they meet the requirements of the statute, it is sufficient answer to say that the finding of the board in this respect is not conclusive and that in the case of these particular machines the board has only recently been overruled by the Supreme Court of the State.

THE DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

On Dec. 17, 1912, the Supreme Court handed down an opinion in the case of The People ex rel Hull v. Taylor et al, in which it holds that the voting machines, for the payment of which an appropriation is now asked, do not comply with the voting machine statute in that they are not so constructed that "each elector can, understandingly and within the period of one minute, cast his vote for all candidates of his choice." Moreover, the decision in this case requires the election commissioners to furnish ballot boxes and paper ballots in all precincts.

In its opinion in the foregoing case the court said:

"It is insisted on behalf of the respondents (the election commissioners) that the action of the Board of Voting Machines Commissioners and the Board of Election Commissioners in determining that the voting machines complied with the requirements of the law in this particular should be held conclusive upon this question; that the powers conferred on these officers require the exercise of judgment and are discretionary in their character, and that their determination of the question of fact is final. If a discretionary power is exercised so as to produce a manifest injustice, the courts may interfere to require its due exercise and prevent a public wrong. * * * If votes cannot, in fact, be cast upon the machines within the time allowed by law, their use will result in some voters being deprived of their votes. Such an injustice, if clearly shown, will justify the interference of the court to afford a remedy by mandamus. It is alleged in the answer that the voting machines in question have been in satisfactory use in various cities of different states for a number of years, and that arrangements have been made for the instruction on the day of election, and before that day, of voters in the use of the machine. On the argument of the cause one of the machines was present and demonstrations of the manner of its use were made by various persons. Fifty-three officers were to be voted for besides the presidential electors, and there were three public policy questions and four propositions to issue bonds. There were party nominations by six parties, although one was for a part only, of the offices. It is easy to vote a straight party ticket on the machine. It can be done in a few seconds. An expert in the use of the machine can vote a split ticket, even as large as the ticket at the November election, in one minute. The requirement of the statute, however, is that 'each elector can, understandingly, and within the period of one minute, cast his vote for all candidates of his choice.' 'Each elector' does not mean here absolutely every elector, for a voter may be blind or crippled so as to be physically unable to use the machine, and the statute provides for such a condition, but the term does include at least every elector of ordinary intelligence having the reasonable use of his faculties and members. If the voter must be a trained expert—if he must be a man of more than ordinary intelligence, keenness of vision or alertness of motion—in order to be able to vote as he wishes within a minute, then the machine which requires these things of him does not comply with the law. As a matter of fact, we find that the machine does not comply with the law in enabling the voter understandingly to cast his vote in one minute. It is not enough that one voter or many voters can possibly, by strenuous effort, vote for the candidates they desire in one minute. It is necessary, at least, that the average voter who wishes to vote for candidates upon two or more or all of the various tickets can by a reasonable effort be surely able to cast the vote he desires to cast, within the time allowed him by law for doing so. We take into consideration the action and finding of the Board of Voting Machine Commissioners and the Board of Election Commissioners as well as our own observation, and we are constrained to find that the machines do not comply with the law in respect to the time within which votes can be cast, and that their use, if voters were allowed only one minute to vote, would result in the disfranchisement of many electors."

CONCLUSION.

In entering into a contract for the purchase and sale of 1,000 voting machines, the Board of Election Commissioners and the Empire Voting Machine Company chose to disregard not only the interest of the taxpaying public, but the counsel of caution and the principles of ordinary business prudence. They acted with their eyes open. There are no equities to be considered or preserved.

It is the opinion of the Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency that there is no legal liability on the part of the city to pay for the voting machines in question. The bureau believes that any appropriation by the council would not only be illegal, but because of the flagrant wrong resulting to the community from the transaction, would expose the members of the council to severe criticism.

The bureau, therefore, respectfully petitions the city council not to make any appropriation for the payment of said voting machines. It submits that the claim of the Empire Voting Machine Company should not be recognized by a contingent appropriation or in any other form. The bureau further petitions the council to adopt an order directing the corporation counsel to contest vigorously any suit or proceeding which may be brought to enforce payment for any of said machines.

Respectfully submitted,

CHICAGO BUREAU OF PUBLIC EFFICIENCY,
JULIUS ROSENWALD, Chairman;
HARRIS S. KEELER, Director.

Chicago, Jan. 1, 1913.

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the State Board of Voting Machine Commissioners, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago and the Empire Voting Machine Company, entered into a conspiracy to qualify the Empire Voting Machines, contrary to the provisions of the Election law; and it is further alleged, that the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago and the Empire Voting Machine Company entered into a conspiracy to defraud the taxpayers of the city of Chicago, of a sum of money alleged to fall little short of four hundred thousand dollars ($400,000.00), by agreeing to a purchase price of nine hundred and forty-two thousand five hundred dollars ($942,500.00) in the aggregate, to be paid to the Empire Voting Machine Company, by the city of Chicago for the delivery of one thousand (1,000) Empire Voting Machines, to the said Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the Empire Voting Machines can be manipulated at will for the purpose of fraudulent voting, and are wholly inadequate for the uses as specified in the statutes, and it is further alleged that after having been used and fairly tried in Omaha, Burlington, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Los Angeles and in more than fifty cities in New Jersey, these machines have been discarded as inefficient, because wholly unsafe, cumbersome and subject to fraudulent manipulation; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that there exists a gigantic conspiracy, engineered by the shrewd intelligence of powerful and corrupt influences, to use the election machinery of the city of Chicago, through and by the further use of the said Empire Voting Machines, that in the end, city, county, state and national elections may be absolutely controlled or materially influenced; and,

WHEREAS, Great scandal has resulted by these persistent and repeated allegations of fraud, directed at the election machinery of the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, The city of Chicago casts approximately forty (40) per cent of the vote of Illinois; the entire electorate of this State stands in eminent danger of disfranchisement in general elections should these allegations be true; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the peculiar political and governmental conditions now existing in the city of Chicago and county of Cook, precludes the possibility of a thorough and impartial investigation as to the facts by the local authorities; and,

WHEREAS, There appears to be ample grounds for a thorough, searching, exhaustive and impartial investigation of the alleged scandalous conditions; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring therein, That a joint committee of twelve (12,) shall be appointed; six (6) to be named by the Chairman of the Committee on Elections of the House of Representatives, and six (6) to be named by the Senate; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination of the official conduct and acts of the State Board of Voting Machine Commissioners, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago, and any and all of the official conduct and acts of all of the election officers of the city of Chicago, and the county of Cook in whatsoever capacity heretofore or now employed; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into the contract entered into between the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago or its agents and the Empire Voting Machine Company, its agents, trustees, assigns, heirs or receivers; that this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into the organization, creation, incorporation or establishment of the Empire Voting Machine Company, for the purpose of ascertaining the identity of its stockholders, officers, owners, trustees, agents, heirs, assigns, or receivers; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into its workings, mechanism, efficiency, quality, material, manufacture, cost and sale price of the Empire Voting Machines; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination of any and all matters of whatsoever nature referred to; in the foregoing preamble and this resolution proper; that this committee be and is hereby authorized and empowered to issue subpoenas for the purpose of compelling witnesses to attend upon their deliberations and compel said witnesses to answer their inquiry, and to issue subpoenas for the purpose of compelling the production into their hands of any and all books, papers, writings, documents, records, machines, instruments, tools or whatsoever objects, utensils or things that they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution; that this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to employ such assistance as they deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution, however no State moneys, now or hereafter appropriated for expense incurred under the provisions of this resolution, shall be spent outside the boundaries of this State, except that foreign witnesses coming before this committee may be reimbursed as to their actual transportation expense only, or for the purpose of actual expense incurred in having any depositions taken by others than the members of this committee, outside the boundaries of this State; and, be it, further

Adopted by the House, April 10, 1913.

B. H. McCANN,
Clerk of the House.

A message from the House by Mr. Eden, Assistant Clerk:

Mr. President—I am directed to inform the Senate that the House of Representatives has adopted the following preamble and joint resolution, in the adoption of which I am instructed to ask the concurrence of the Senate, to wit:

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 26.

WHEREAS, A monument is to be dedicated to Thos. Jefferson, at St. Louis, Mo., on April 30, 1913; and,

WHEREAS, The Honorable David R. Francis, President of the Universal Exposition has invited the Governor of Illinois and his staff, together with a committee representing both branches of the General Assembly, to be present upon that occasion and to assist in the ceremonies; therefore, be it Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring therein, That a committee of three members from the House of Representatives and three members from the Senate, together with the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and the President of the Senate, be and the same are hereby appointed a committee to represent the General Assembly of Illinois at the dedication of the monument to Thomas Jefferson, at St. Louis, Mo., on April 30, 1913.

I am further directed to inform the Senate that the Speaker of the House has appointed as such committee on the part of the House, Messrs: Igoe, McWilliams and J. E. Harriss.

Adopted by the House, April 10, 1913.

B. H. McCANN,
Clerk of the House.

READING BILLS OF THE SENATE THE SECOND TIME.

On motion of Mr. Madigan, Senate Bill No. 207, a bill for "An Act to regulate the hours of labor of city employees in cities whose population exceeds one hundred thousand."

Was taken up and read at large a second time, together with the following amendment thereto (which has been printed), reported from the Committee on Labor, April 9, 1913:

Add to bill section 2. This Act shall take effect and be in force on and after January 1, 1914.

The question being, "Shall the report of, and the amendment reported from, said committee be adopted?" it was decided in the affirmative.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Juul, Senate Bill No. 32, a bill for "An Act to provide for the creation and management of forest preserve districts and repealing certain Acts therein named,"

Which was recalled from the order of third reading to the order of second reading today, for the purpose of amendment, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Juul offered the following amendments to the bill, which were adopted:

Amend Senate Bill No. 32 section 13:

By inserting in line seven, between the words "the" and "value," the word "assessed."

Amend section 13, line eleven, by inserting after the word "mature," the following words:

"and said tax to so pay the interest on said bonds as it falls due and to pay said bonds as they mature, shall not be permitted to increase the taxing power of said district as herein provided for."

Amend section 13, by striking out of lines eighteen and nineteen, the following words:

"exclusive of the amount levied for the payment of interest on and principal of bonded indebtedness."

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Denvir, Senate Bill No. 257, a bill for "An Act to regulate and limit the hours of employment of certain employees of street railway corporations, and to provide for its enforcement and a penalty for its violation,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Hurburgh, Senate Bill No. 382, a bill for "An Act to prevent the issuance of free passes, free tickets, and free transportation by steam or electric railroads, railways or common carriers of passengers in this State and to prevent the use thereof by individuals and to prescribe a penalty therefor, and rules of evidence relating thereto,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Landee, Senate Bill No. 265, a bill for "An Act to repeal certain Acts herein named,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Denvir, Senate Bill No. 300, a bill for "An Act to provide for the partial support of mothers whose husbands are dead or have become permanently incapacitated for work by reason of physical or mental infirmity, when such mothers have children under fourteen years of age, and are citizens of the United States of America and residents of the county in which application for relief is made,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. O'Connor, Senate Bill No. 132, a bill for "An Act providing for the creating, locating, constructing and administering of a State Colony for the care and treatment of epileptics,"

Was taken up and read at large a second time, together with the following amendments thereto (which have been printed), reported from the Committee on Charitable, Penal and Reformatory Institutions April 10, 1913:

Amend Senate Bill No. 132 as follows:

Insert in line 20 of setion 7 of the printed bill, after the word "colony" the words: "Provided that if such alleged epileptic is an adult his consent in writing shall be first obtained, and if a minor, or under any other disability, the consent in writing of the parent, guardian or conservator shall be first obtained; and,"

Strike out, in said Senate Bill No. 132, the word "State" wherever it appears immediately preceding the words "Board of Administration."

The question being, "Shall the report of, and the amendments reported from, said committee be adopted?" it was decided in the affirmative.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. O'Connor, Senate Bill No. 15, a bill for "An Act entitled, 'An Act to enlarge the power of cities in relation to harbors, canals, slips, wharves, docks, levees, piers, breakwaters and all harbor structures, facilities, improvements and utilities constructed or operated in connection therewith and for the purpose of carrying out such power to authorize the acquisition and condemnation of property and to authorize the use, occupation, recovery and acquisition of artificially made or reclaimed lands of the State and the reclamation and acquisition of the submerged lands of the State,' and to repeal an Act entitled, 'An Act to enlarge the power of cities in relation to harbors, canals, wharves, docks, piers, slips and other harbor structures, facilities, improvements and utilities constructed or operated in connection therewith, to authorize the acquisition and condemnation of property and the use, occupation, reclamation and acquisition of the submerged lands of the State in carrying out such power, and to repeal all Acts or parts of Acts in conflict therewith,' approved June 10, 1911,"

Was taken up and read at large a second time, together with the following amendments thereto (which have been printed), reported from the Committee on Canals and Rivers, April 10, 1913:

AMENDMENT No. 1.

In the title after the word "a bill," strike out all thereafter and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"For An Act to enlarge the power of cities and villages in relation to harbors, canals, slips, wharves, docks, levees, piers, quay walls, breakwaters and all harbor structures, facilities, connections, improvements and utilities constructed or operated in connection therewith and for the purpose of carrying out such power to authorize the acquisition and condemnation of property and to authorize the use, occupation, recovery and acquisition of artificially made or reclaimed lands of the State and the reclamation and acquisition of the submerged lands of the State, and to repeal an Act entitled, 'An Act to enlarge the power of cities in relation to harbors, canals, wharves, docks, piers, slips, and other harbor structures, facilities, improvements and utilities constructed or operated in connection therewith, to authorize the acquisition and condemnation of property and the use, occupation, reclamation and acquisition of the submerged lands of the State in carrying out such power, and to repeal all Acts or parts of Acts in conflict therewith,' approved June 10, 1911, and to repeal all other Acts or parts of Acts in conflict therewith."

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Strike out all of the bill after the enacting clause in section one and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That every city and village in this State shall have the right, power and authority, and such right, power and authority are hereby granted to acquire, own, construct, maintain and operate anywhere within the jurisdiction or limits of the city or village, or in, over and upon any public waters bordering thereon, harbors, canals, slips, wharves, docks, levees, piers, quay walls, breakwaters and all appropriate harbor structures, facilities, connections and improvements, and in connection therewith to acquire, own, construct, maintain and operate such elevators, vaults and warehouses (including cold storage warehouses), as may be necessary adjuncts or incidental to transportation and railroad terminals, and to acquire, own, construct, maintain and operate all other necessary or appropriate terminal facilities.

Sec. 2. Every such city or village having only a river water frontage, shall have the right, power and authority, and such right, power and authority are hereby granted to acquire, own, construct, maintain and operate any and all railroad or terminal facilities, tracks and connections, necessary or appropriate to connect any such harbor or other utility, enumerated in section one of this Act, with any railroad or railroads entering such city or village, including interurban railroads.

Sec. 3. Every such city or village shall have the power to lease portions of any of the utilities mentioned in section one of this Act, for a period not longer than twenty (20) years on such terms and conditions as shall be prescribed by ordinance, and to fix and regulate the rates and charges for the use of such utilities, whether owned and operated by such city or village, or are operated by persons or corporations who are tenants of such city or village or are constructed, owned and operated by any public or municipal corporation as hereinafter provided: Provided, however, that except as to railroad facilities at least one-third of the capacity of each such utility shall not be leased for a period to exceed one year and that at least one-half of said one-third shall at all times be reserved by such city or village for general public use, and that not to exceed fifty per cent in capacity of the remaining two-thirds capacity of each such utility shall be leased to any one person or corporation: Provided, further, however, that no leases authorized under this Act shall contain conditions which shall admit of any unjust, undue or unreasonable preference or discrimination between lessees.

Sec. 4. Every such city and village for the purpose of carrying out the powers herein granted shall have the power to acquire, by purchase, unconditioned gift, or condemnation, any and all property necessary or appropriate for any of the purposes in this Act enumerated, and in all cases where property is acquired or sought to be acquired by condemnation, the procedure shall be, as nearly as may be, like that provided for in an Act entitled, "An Act to provide for the exercise of the right of eminent domain," approved April 10, 1872, in force July 1, 1872, and all the amendments thereto now in force or which may be hereafter enacted. Nothing in this section contained shall limit or restrict the power of any city or village to acquire by grant from the State submerged lands or artificially made or reclaimed lands as in this Act provided.

Sec. 5. Every such city and village shall also have the right, power and authority and such right, power and authority are hereby granted to use, occupy or reclaim all such submerged lands under the public waters of the State within the limits or jurisdiction of, or bordering on such city or village, as may be necessary or appropriate for any of the purposes in this Act enumerated, and the right, power and authority herein granted to cities and villages to use, occupy or reclaim such submerged lands, shall be superior to and shall take precedence over any similar right, power or authority heretofore granted to any person or corporation, private, public or municipal (other than city or village), in so far as such right has not been exercised, at the time when such city or village by ordinance, as to lands therein particularly described, shall elect or determine to exercise such right, power or authority, and no person or private corporation shall at any time hereafter construct any harbor, canal, slip, wharf, dock, levee, pier, quay wall, breakwater or other harbor structure, facility, connection or improvement, and no corporation, public or municipal (other than a city or village), shall hereafter construct a harbor, canal, slip, wharf, dock, levee, pier, quay wall, breakwater or other harbor structure, facility, connection or improvement over or upon such submerged lands within the limits or jurisdiction of any such city or village, or over or upon any public waters bordering thereon, without first securing the consent of the city council of such city or village.

Sec. 6. Every such city and village shall also have the right, power and authority, and such right, power and authority are hereby granted, to take possession of, use and occupy any and all artificially made or reclaimed lands (which before the artificial making or reclamation thereof constituted a portion of the submerged lands under the public waters of the State of Illinois) within the limits or jurisdiction of, or bordering on such city or village, the title to which artificially made or reclaimed lands is in the State of Illinois, when and in so far as said lands shall be declared by ordinance of such city or village particularly describing said lands to be necessary or appropriate for any of the purposes in this Act enumerated; and every such city and village shall have the right, power and authority to bring and maintain all necessary suits, actions or proceedings, in its corporate name, against any person or corporation, private, public or municipal, for the recovery of the possession of such artificially made or reclaimed lands, which lands, when so acquired, shall be held, used and occupied by such city or village subject to the conditions in this Act provided.

Sec. 7. Every such city and village shall also have the right, power and authority, and such right, power and authority are hereby granted, to take possession of, use and occupy any and all artificially made or reclaimed lands (which before the artificial making or reclamation thereof constituted a portion of the submerged lands under the public waters of the State of Illinois) within the limits or jurisdiction of, or bordering on such city or village the title to which artificially made or reclaimed lands is in the State of Illinois, when and in so far as said lands shall be declared by ordinance of such city or village particularly describing said lands to be necessary or appropriate as and for approaches to or connections with any harbor or harbor utility or appurtenance in this Act authorized, and to establish, widen, extend, grade, pave and otherwise improve such approaches or connections over and upon such artificially made or reclaimed lands and to vacate the same or any part thereof, and every such city or village shall have the right, power and authority to bring and maintain all necessary suits, actions or proceedings, in its corporate name, against any person or corporation, private, public or municipal, for the recovery of the possession of such artificially made or reclaimed lands, which lands, when so acquired, shall be held, used and occupied by such city or village subject to the conditions in this Act provided.

Sec. 8. Nothing in the three preceding sections contained shall be held to or shall impair the right of any board of park commissioners having jurisdiction over two or more parks bordering on public waters or any shore owner under any contract entered into between such board of park commissioners and such shore owner, where such board of park commissioners has taken any step or steps or begun any proceedings prior to March 1, 1913, to connect by a boulevard, driveway or parkway two or more parks under its jurisdiction and bordering on such public waters, but nothing in this section contained shall be construed to or shall in any wise affect the validity of any of the said three preceding sections.

Sec. 9. Every such city and village may by ordinance authorize any public or municipal corporation (other than a city or village), authorized by law to construct or operate any one or more of the utilities enumerated in section one of this Act, to construct and operate within the limits or jurisdiction of, or bordering on such city or village, any one or more of such utilities on such terms and conditions as such city or village in any such ordinance may determine and on such terms and conditions as may be provided by law.

Sec. 10. Whenever any public or municipal corporation shall have constructed under authority of this Act or any other law of the State any of the utilities mentioned in section one of this Act, within the limits or jurisdiction of any city or village, or in, over or upon any public waters bordering thereon, such city or village shall have the right, power and authority to purchase the same on such terms and conditions as may be provided by law, and in case no terms and conditions are provided by law, then on such terms and conditions as may be agreed upon by such city or village and such public or municipal corporation.

Sec. 11. No ordinance of any such city or village providing for the leasing of any portion of any harbor, wharf, dock, pier, quay wall, slip, levee, connection or other harbor utility acquired or constructed under the provisions of this Act (and authorized by this Act to be leased), for any period in excess of five years, shall go into effect until ninety days after the passage thereof, and if within such ninety days a petition shall be filed in the office of the city or village clerk of such city or village, signed by five per cent (5%) of the registered voters of such city or village as shown by the last preceding general election held in such city or village, requesting that such ordinance be submitted to popular vote, it shall be the duty of said city or village clerk within three days after the filing in his office of such petition, to file the same, together with a copy of the ordinance, certified by said city or village clerk to be a true copy thereof, in the office of the officer or officers having jurisdiction over elections in such city or village, and it shall thereupon be the duty of such election officer or officers to submit to the electors of such city or village, in the same manner as is provided by section two of an Act entitled, "An Act providing for an expression of opinion by electors on questions of public policy at any general or special election," approved May 11, 1901, at the first succeeding general or special election occurring more than ninety days thereafter or at a special election called by the city council of such city or village for that purpose in the manner provided by Article IV of an Act entitled, "An Act to provide for the incorporation of cities and villages," approved April 10, 1872, the question of whether or not such ordinance shall be approved and such ordinance shall not go into effect until it shall have been approved by a majority of the electors voting thereon at such general or special election: Provided, however, that each ordinance providing for such leasing shall have a true copy of such proposed lease thereto attached.

Sec. 12. Every such city and village may also acquire the lands, whether of natural or artificial formation, property and property rights, including riparian rights, of any owner or claimant, whether a person or corporation, private, public or municipal (other than a city or village), on the shores of public waters in, upon or near which it is proposed to construct any harbor or utility authorized by this Act, and also the title of any such owner or claimant, to the lands lying beneath, adjacent to or adjoining such public waters, without other compensation, by agreeing with any such owner or claimant, upon a boundary line dividing the lands (whether of natural or artificial formation), to be acquired by such city or village and the adjacent, adjoining or submerged or other lands (whether of natural or artificial formation) to be taken and acquired by such owner or claimant. The rights and property to be taken and acquired, respectively, by any such city or village and by any such owner or claimant, shall be specifically described and set forth in the decree to be entered by the court as in this Act provided.

Sec. 13. Whenever any such city or village and such owner or claimant shall have agreed upon a boundary line as aforesaid, such city or village shall file a suit in chancery in the circuit court of the county in which said lands are situated, praying that such boundary line be established and confirmed by the decree of said court. All persons interested as owners or otherwise in said lands, as appearing of record, if known, or if not known, stating that fact, shall be made defendants in said suit. Persons interested, whose names are unknown, may be made parties defendant by the description of the unknown owners; but in all cases an affidavit shall be filed by or on behalf of such city or village, setting forth that the names of such persons are unknown, such city or village shall also give public notice of the filing of each such suit by publication thereof once a week for four consecutive weeks, in a newspaper of general circulation regularly published in said city or village, in which said lands are situated, which notice shall contain the title of the suit and the terms of court at which it is made returnable, the last of which notices shall be published not less than ten (10) days or more than twenty (20) days before the first day of the term of court at which said suit is returnable. If there be no newspaper of general circulation published in said city or village, then such publication shall be in the nearest newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which such city or village is located, and if there is no newspaper of general circulation published in said county, then such publication shall be in the nearest newspaper of general circulation published in the State. The defendants who do not enter their appearance shall be served with process in the suit or suits so instituted in the same manner as in suits in chancery, and the proceedings in said cause shall be conducted in the same manner as other suits in chancery. If upon a hearing the court shall find that the rights and interests of the public have been duly conserved in and by such agreement, then the court shall confirm said agreement and establish such boundary line; otherwise the court shall, in its discretion, dismiss such suit. If the boundary line agreed upon shall be so established and confirmed by the decree of said court, it shall thereafter be the permanent dividing and boundary line of said lands, and shall not be affected or changed thereafter, either by accretions or erosions.

The establishment of such boundary line as aforesaid shall operate as a conveyance and release to such city or village of all the right, title and interest of such owner or owners to any and all lands, property and property rights, including riparian rights, lying upon the outer or water side of said boundary line when so established. Such city or village is hereby granted by the State of Illinois the title to any and all lands, property and property rights, including riparian rights, lying upon the outer or water side of said boundary line when so established. Such owner or owners of said shore lands are hereby granted by the State of Illinois the title to the adjacent, adjoining or submerged or other lands, whether of natural or artificial formation, as specifically and particularly described in said decree, lying upon the inner or land side of said boundary line when so established, and such owner or owners shall have the right to fill in, improve, protect and use, sell and convey said submerged or other lands lying upon the inner or land side of said boundary line free from any adverse claim in any way arising out of any question as to where the shore line was at any time in the past, or as to the title to any existing accretions.

Sec. 14. Every such city or village shall also have the right, power and authority, and the right, power and authority are hereby granted, to cross by roadways or other appropriate approaches, the ways, drives, boulevards, beaches, wharves, docks, levees, piers, breakwaters, retaining walls, lands and submerged lands, or any of them, of any municipal corporation (other than a city or village), whenever any such crossing shall by ordinance of such city or village be declared to be necessary, appropriate, convenient, useful, desirable or advantageous to harbor development and use or the development and use of any of the utilities mentioned in this Act.

Sec. 15. Any artificially made, reclaimed or submerged lands of the State of Illinois which shall be acquired by any such city or village under the provisions of this Act, shall be held, used and occupied only for a public purpose, and if any such city or village shall at any time grant, bargain and sell such artificially made, reclaimed or submerged lands or any part thereof, the same shall thereupon revert to the State of Illinois.

Any accretions or artificially made or reclaimed lands which may be formed or added to any harbor utility constructed by any public or municipal corporation (other than a city or village), under the provisions of this Act, shall not become the property of such public or municipal corporation, but such accretions or artificially made or reclaimed lands shall revert to and become the property of such city or village for the purposes of this Act, subject to such disposition as the city council of such city or village shall direct, but limited, however, by the provisions of this section.

Sec. 16. Every city and village in this State shall have the right, power and authority, and the right, power and authority are hereby granted, to locate and establish dock lines and harbor lines in the public waters or rivers within the limits or jurisdiction of, or bordering on such city or village.

Sec. 17. Every such city and village owning and operating or owning and leasing any portion of any of the utilities mentioned in section one of this Act shall keep the books of account for such utilities separate and distinct from other city or village accounts and in such manner as to show the true and complete financial standing and results of such city or village ownership and operation and of such city or village ownership and leasing as the case may be. Such accounts shall be so kept as to show the actual cost to such city or village of such utilities owned; all costs of maintenance, extension and improvement; all operating expenses of every description, in case of such city or village operation, whether in whole or of a part of such utilities; if water or other service shall be furnished for the use of such utilities without charge, the accounts shall show, as nearly as possible, the value of such service, and also the value of any service, if any, rendered by such utilities to any other city or village department without charge; such accounts shall also show reasonable allowances for interest, depreciation and insurance, and also estimates of the amount of taxes that would be chargeable against such utilities if owned by a private corporation. The city council of such city or village shall cause to be printed annually for public distribution, a report showing the financial standing and results, in form as aforesaid of such city or village ownership and operation, or of such city or village ownership and leasing. The accounts of such utilities, kept as aforesaid, shall be examined at least once a year by an expert accountant, who shall report to the city council the results of his examination. Such expert accountant shall be selected in such manner as the city council may direct, and he shall receive for his services such compensation to be paid out of the income or revenues from such utilities, as the city council may prescribe.

Sec. 18. The term "utility," as used in this Act, shall mean and embrace every harbor, canal, slip, wharf, dock, levee, pier, quay wall, breakwater or harbor structure, facility, connection or improvement, and every elevator, vault, warehouse or cold storage warehouse, acquired, owned, maintained or operated in connection therewith, and every necessary or appropriate adjunct to transportation, including railroad terminals and terminal facilities as authorized to be used by this Act.

The term "artificially made or reclaimed lands," as used in this Act, shall be held to include all lands formerly submerged under the public waters of the State, the title to which lands is in the State and which have been artificially made or reclaimed in whole or in part contrary to law.

The term "city council," as used in this Act, shall, in addition to its usual meaning, also mean and include board of trustee or other legislative or governing body of any city or village, as the case may be.

Sec. 19. No portion of any harbor, canal, slip, wharf, dock, levee, pier or other harbor utility or improvement (except breakwater) enumerated in this Act shall be constructed within one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) mile of any intake of water for public consumption, and in constructing such improvements no ashes, cinders or waste shall be dumped into any public waters within four (4) miles from any intake of water for public consumption unless placed behind retaining bulkheads: Provided, however, that nothing in this section contained shall apply to any city or village whose water frontage is exclusively on a river.

Sec. 20. The validity of any portion of this Act shall not affect the validity of any portion thereof which can be given effect without such invalid part.

Sec. 21. All laws and parts of laws heretofore enacted conferring or granting police control or other power or jurisdiction upon any municipal corporation other than a city or village, within the area or districts that may be particularly described by ordinance as in this Act provided and authorized, are hereby repealed: Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to or shall repeal an Act entitled, "An Act to amend an Act entitled, 'An Act to enable park commissioners having control of a park or parks bordering upon public waters in this State, to enlarge and connect the same from time to time by extensions over lands and the bed of such waters and defining the use which may be made of such extensions and granting submerged lands for the purpose of such enlargements,' approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, and to amend the title thereof and to repeal the Act herein named,' approved June 11, 1912, in force July 1, 1912.

Sec. 22. An Act entitled, "An Act to enlarge the power of cities in relation to harbors, canals, wharves, docks, piers, slips and other harbor structures, facilities, improvements and utilities constructed or operated in connection therewith, to authorize the acquisition and condemnation of property and the use, occupation, reclamation and acquisition of the submerged lands of the State in carrying out such power, and to repeal all Acts or parts of Acts in conflict therewith," approved June 10, 1911, is hereby repealed, and all other Acts or parts of Acts in conflict with this Act are hereby repealed.

Sec. 23. WHEREAS, As an emergency exists for the immediate taking effect of this Act, therefore, this Act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

The question being, "Shall the report of, and the amendments reported from, said committee be adopted?" it was decided in the affirmative.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Clark, Senate Bill No. 351, a bill for "An Act to amend section 12 of an Act entitled, 'An Act defining motor vehicles and providing for the registration of the same and of motor bicycles, and uniform rules regulating the use and speed thereof; prohibiting the use of motor vehicles without the consent of the owner and the offer or acceptance of any bonus or discount or other consideration for the purchase of supplies or parts of any such motor vehicle or for work or repairs done thereon by others and defining chauffeurs and providing for the examination and licensing thereof, and to repeal certain Acts therein named,' approved June 10, 1911; in force July 1, 1911."

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Clark, Senate Bill No. 312, a bill for "An Act to provide for the registration of nurses and to repeal a certain Act therein named,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. O'Connor, Senate Bill No. 218, a bill for "An Act to provide for the incorporation, management and regulation of wage loan corporations and to allow the loaning of money by such corporations secured by assignment of wages, and limiting the rate of compensation to be paid,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Magill, Senate Bill No. 297, a bill for "An Act to amend an Act entitled, 'An Act to establish and maintain a system of free schools,' approved and in force June 12, 1909, by adding thereto a new section to be designated as section 121a,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time, And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Magill, Senate Bill No. 148, a bill for "An Act to amend section 7 of an Act entitled, 'An Act to regulate the employment of children, in the State of Illinois, and to provide for the enforcement thereof,' approved May 15, 1903, in force July 1, 1903,"

Which was recalled from the order of third reading to the order of second reading on April 2, 1913, for the purpose of amendment, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Magill stated that he had no amendments to offer, and, on his motion, the bill was ordered again to third reading.

On motion of Mr. Magill, Senate Bill No. 154, a bill for "An Act to empower the board of supervisors in counties under township organization, and county commissioners in counties not under township organization, to appropriate county funds to employ, or to assist in employing a county consulting agriculturist, and to defray, or assist in defraying, the expenses connected herewith, for the purpose of the conservation of soil fertility and the improvement of agricultural conditions generally,"

Which was recalled from the order of third reading to the order of second reading today, for the purpose of amendment, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Magill offered the following amendment to the bill, which was adopted:

Amend Senate Bill No. 154, by adding the following words after the word "generally" in line eleven (11) "and the employment of such consulting agriculturist."

On motion of Mr. Magill the further consideration of the bill was postponed and it was ordered that it retain its place on the calendar.

On motion of Mr. Magill, Senate Bill No. 298, a bill for "An Act to establish a minimum salary for teachers in the public schools of this State."

Was taken up and read at large a second time, together with the following amendments thereto (which have been printed), reported from the Committee on Education, April 10, 1913:

AMENDMENT No. 1.

Amend Senate Bill No. 298, as printed, by inserting in line 7 of section 1, after the word "per" the word "school."

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Amend by adding the following to section 2, changing the period after "fund" to a comma: "unless it shall appear that such district levies and expends for educational purposes the maximum amount allowed by law."

Mr. Magill offered the following substitute for the committee amendments, which substitute was adopted:

Amend Senate Bill No. 298 by striking out all after the enacting clause, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

Sec. 1. That in order to promote the public welfare and provide for a higher degree of efficiency in the public schools of the State, it shall be unlawful hereafter for any board of directors or board of education having control of any public school or system of public schools in this State to employ any teacher at a salary which shall aggregate less than three hundred dollars ($300.00) for the school year in such district: Provided, said teacher is required to devote full time to teaching in said school.

Sec. 2. No school district in this State in which the board of directors or board of education fails to comply with the provisions of section one (1) of this Act shall receive any portion of the State distributive fund, unless it shall appear that such district levies and expends for educational purposes the maximum amount allowed by law.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Piercy, the consideration of the special order being Senate Resolution No. 17, initiative and referendum, which was made a special order for this hour, was postponed until Thursday, April 17, 1913, immediately after the reading of the Journal.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The President presented the following communication which was read and ordered spread upon the Journal of today's proceedings:

April 16, 1913.

Hon. Barratt O'Hara, President of the Senate:

SIR—I am transmitting you herewith a copy of the cable message received this day acknowledging receipt of copy of joint assembly resolution expressing sympathy to the Greek people upon the assassination of their king.

Yours truly,

(Signed) HARRY WOODS,

Secretary of State.

(Cable Message.)

THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Received at Athens, 16th.

The Secretary of State of the State of Illinois, Mr. Harry Woods, Springfield, Illinois:

The cordial sympathy which the Joint Assembly of the State of Illinois expressed to us for the bereavement of our beloved king touched the hearts of the Hellenic people and of their representatives besides the interest which this American people manifested in behalf of our sacred war for liberty renders us more grateful interpreting the sentiments which possess all the Hellenes. I beg your excellency to accept and transmit to the Joint Assembly and to all the people of the State of Illinois the sincere gratitude of the Hellenic people and of the whole nation.

Very respy.

ZAVIZIANOS, 6:35 a. m.

The President presented the following communication which was read, and, on motion of Mr. Barr, leave of absence was granted Senator Maclean for this week:

April 15, 1913.

Hon. Barrett O'Hara, Governor, Illinois:

DEAR SIR—Owing to legislative matters here I will be unable to be present in Springfield this week.

Yours truly,

(Signed.) W. H. McLEAN.

At 12:18 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Hurburgh, the Senate adjourned.

THURSDAY, APRIL 17, 1913, 10:00 O'CLOCK A. M.

Senate met pursuant to adjournment.

Hon. Barratt O'Hara, Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate, presiding.

Prayer by the Chaplain.

The President of the Senate announced that he had examined the Journal of yesterday and found no corrections or changes to be made, and if the Senate had no changes or corrections to offer, the Journal would be ordered to stand approved. No corrections being offered, the Journal was ordered to stand approved.

SPECIAL ORDERS.

The President of the Senate announced the special order for this hour to be the consideration of the following resolution reported from the Committee on Constitutional Amendments, April 9, 1913, with the recommendation that it be adopted:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 17.

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring therein, That there shall be submitted to the electors of this State for adoption or rejection at the next election of members of the General Assembly, a proposition to amend Article IV of the Constitution of this State by adding thereto an additional section to be known as section 35, to read as follows:

Section 35. The people reserve power to propose and to enact laws as herein provided. Eight per cent of the electors of the State may propose an Act by initiative petition, verified as to signatures, and filed with the Secretary of State not less than thirty days prior to the date of convening of any regular session of the General Assembly. The Secretary of State shall transmit a certified copy of the proposed Act to the House of Representatives and to the Senate at the convening of the next regular session of the General Assembly, and the same shall be treated as a bill introduced in the name of the people. Unless such proposed Act shall, without change, become a law by regular legislative enactment within one year after the date of convening of the General Assembly, the Secretary of State shall submit the same by its title to the electors at the next general election: Provided, that if a proposed Act shall be placed upon its final passage in each House, and shall fail in each House to receive the affirmative votes of one-fourth of the members elected, it shall not be so submitted. If a proposed Act, when submitted to the electors, shall be approved by a majority of the electors voting on the proposition, it shall become a law, and take effect on the first day of January, next, thereafter.

All laws enacted under the provisions of this section may be subsequently amended or repealed by the General Assembly, and they shall be subject to the same constitutional provisions and limitations as are Acts passed by the General Assembly: Provided, such provisions and limitations are not inconsistent with the provisions of this section.

The people reserve power to reject laws passed by the General Assembly, and to stay the time of their taking effect, as herein provided. Five per cent of the electors of the State, by a referendum petition, verified as to signatures and filed with the Secretary of State before the taking effect of an Act, may require that such Act shall not take effect until submitted to the electors. The Secretary of State shall submit such Act by its title to the electors at the next general election, and if rejected by a majority of the electors voting on the proposition it shall become void, otherwise it shall take effect on the first day of January, next, thereafter. Acts passed in case of emergency by a vote of two-thirds of all the members of each House, and Acts making appropriations for the ordinary and contingent expenses of the government or of any existing institution of the State, shall not be subject to referendum petition. All Acts shall take effect as provided in section 13 of this Article, except that no Act subject to referendum petition shall take effect within less than thirty days after it becomes a law: And, provided, further, that one per cent of the electors of the State, by referendum petition, verified as to signatures and filed with the Secretary of State before the taking effect of an Act, may require that such Act shall not take effect until ninety days after it became a law, pending the filing of a petition supplementing and completing the said referendum petition.

The Governor, Attorney General, and Secretary of State shall constitute a board to pass upon the sufficiency of every initiative and referendum petition, and when approved by them its sufficiency shall not be questioned in any court. A finding of the board that a petition is not sufficient may be reviewed upon a petition for mandamus filed in the Supreme Court within thirty days. The total vote cast at the last general election shall be the basis upon which the required per cent of electors herein specified shall be estimated, and not less than fifty per cent of the signatures required shall be electors residing outside of the county of Cook. This amendment shall be self-executing, but appropriate legislation may be enacted regulating the details of its operation.

The foregoing resolution was read.

Mr. Ettelson offered the following amendment to the resolution:

Amend Senate Joint Resolution No. 17 as follows:

In line 56 change the word "fifty" to "thirty."

In line 57, after the words "per cent." insert the words, "or more than fifty per cent."

In line 57, after the words "shall be" insert the word "of."

Also in line 57, strike out the words "outside of," and insert in lieu thereof the word "in."

Thus making the clause read, "not less than thirty per cent, nor more than fifty per cent, of the signatures required shall be electors residing in the county of Cook."

And the question then being, "Shall the amendment be adopted?" and the yeas and nays being called, it was decided in the negative by the following vote: Yeas, 19; nays, 27.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

At 12:00 o'clock m., on motion of Mr. Manny, the Senate went into executive session for the purpose of considering nominations of the Governor transmitted to the Senate on yesterday.

By unanimous consent the rule of the Senate requiring that executive sessions take place with closed doors was suspended for this session.

The Secretary then read the following:

STATE OF ILLINOIS,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
SPRINGFIELD, April 15, 1913.

To the Honorable Senate:

I have the honor hereby to nominate and appoint James F. Bishop, of Cook County, as Public Administrator for Cook County, vice John F. Devine, resigned.

I have the honor hereby to nominate and appoint Edward W. McDermott, of Lake County, Public Administrator for Lake County, vice James L. Swayner, term expired.

I have the honor hereby to nominate and appoint the following commissioners of the Southern Illinois Penitentiary:

Omer S. Pace, of Jefferson County, vice Rufus Neely, resigned.

Frank Orr, of Brown County, vice L. L. Emerson, resigned.

C. F. Coleman, of Fayette County, vice H. J. Schmidt, resigned.

And I respectfully ask your concurrence therein.

Very respectfully,
(Signed.) E. F. DUNNE,
Governor.

The question then being, "Does the Senate advise and consent to the nominations just made?" and the yeas and nays being called, it was decided in the affirmative by the following vote: Yeas, 45 [44].

The following voted in the affirmative: Messrs.

REPORTS FROM STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Barr, from the Committee on Elections, made the following report, which was read:

To the Honorable President and Senate of the Forty-eighth General Assembly:

Your Committee on Elections begs leave to report in the case of Brown and Stapleton vs. Harris, that it appointed a sub-committee in said case, and that said sub-committee made a report to the full committee, which report of the said sub-committee was duly adopted as the report and recommendations of said full Committee on Elections, and which said report is herewith submitted, as follows:

To the Honorable Committee on Elections of the State Senate:

Your sub-committee appointed in the case of Brown and Stapleton vs. Harris, begs leave to report as follows:

Your sub-committee reports that the facts in the above cause are not in serious dispute. The incumbent, George W. Harris, lived in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois from 1885 to 1900, approximately a period of fifteen years. In 1900 your committee finds he took up his residence in the State of Tennessee, and remained therein as a resident of the state of Tennessee until about 1909, at which latter date he returned to the city of Chicago, Illinois. From 1909 up to the present time he has remained continuously a resident of this State. Your committee finds that said George W. Harris has resided in the district from which he was elected State Senator for a period of more than two years continuously next preceding the date of his nomination and of his election as State Senator.

Your committee further finds that said George W. Harris has resided in the State of Illinois for a period of about eighteen years, but that such residence was not continuous, said Harris having resided from about 1900 to 1908, inclusive, in the state of Tennessee.

Your committee further reports that it was not contended on behalf of contestants herein that said Harris did not reside continuously for more than two years in his senatorial district prior to 1912, during which year he was nominated and elected State Senator. The contention, however, of contestants is that said Harris has not resided for five years continuously next preceding his nomination and election, and that the provisions of the Constitution of this State require a five years continuous residence next preceding his election.

The provisions of the Constitution of the State of Illinois in question is as follows:

"Section 3, Article IV, of the Constitution of 1870: No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained the age of twenty-five years, or a Representative who shall not have attained the age of twenty-one years. No person shall be a Senator or a Representative who shall not be a citizen of the United States or who shall not have been for five years a resident of this State, and for two years next preceding his election a resident within the territory forming the district from which he is elected."

Contestants contend that the words "next preceding his election" shall be read so as to modify the words "five years" as well as "two years."

Your sub-committee cannot accede to this view. Such a construction in our judgment does violence to the plain language and plain import of the paragraph in question.

Our conclusion in the matter is that the literal interpretation of the Constitution, the language used by the delegates to the Constitutional Convention when they were considering this subject, the language used in other sections of the Constitution, a comparison of the phraseology of the various Constitutions heretofore adopted in this State, all compel the conclusion that the contention of the contestants should be in this respect overruled.

Contestants have asked this committee to inquire into objections made by them to the nominating petition filed by Harris. In our judgment this committee should not, nor should the Senate be asked after an election has been held to investigate the sufficiency of a nominating petition filed by a candidate for office. If there is, as counsel contend, a hiatus in the Statutes of this State, in relation to this matter, where a senatorial district lies without and within the city of Chicago, then such hiatus should be cured by immediate legislation upon the subject.

The unanimous conclusion of your sub-committee is that the petition of contestants in this cause should be dismissed, and that the right of said Harris to his seat in the State Senate should be sustained.

Your sub-committee therefore reports and recommends to the Committee on Elections that the petitions and objections of contestants herein be dismissed, and that the election of George W. Harris as Senator be declared valid, and his right to his seat in the State Senate sustained.

R. J. BARR,
Chairman.

Mr. Barr moved that the report of the committee be adopted, and the yeas and nays being called, it was decided in the affirmative by the following vote: Yeas, 45.

REPORTS FROM SPECIAL COMMITTEES.

Mr. Dailey, from the special joint committee appointed by the Forty-seventh General Assembly to investigate and report concerning public utilities, made the following report, and, on his motion, 2,500 copies of the report were ordered printed.

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE PUBLIC UTILITIES, CREATED BY HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 24, OF THE FORTY-SEVENTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (KNOWN AS THE ILLINOIS LEGISLATIVE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION). PRESENTED BY HON. JOHN DAILEY, CHAIRMAN, JOINT COMMITTEE.

To the Hon. Edward F. Dunne, Governor, and the Senate and House of Representatives of the Forty-eighth General Assembly:

IN THE MATTER OF SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE PUBLIC UTILITIES.

Created by House Joint Resolution No. 24 of the Forty-seventh General Assembly.

The following resolution was adopted at a regular session of the Forty-seventh General Assembly by the Senate and House of Representatives thereof:

WHEREAS, There has been and is now a State-wide agitation for the passage of an Act to create in this State a commission, or commissions, that shall be empowered to regulate the public utilities doing business within this State; or to grant authority to municipalities to regulate such public utilities; and,

WHEREAS, There have been numerous measures presented to this General Assembly, the object of which have been to comply with the general demand for the aforementioned legislation; and,

WHEREAS, These numerous measures contain many, various and conflicting provisions; and,

WHEREAS, These measures have not received favorable consideration, due to a decided difference of opinion as to their efficiency; and,

WHEREAS, The necessity for such legislation is considered imperative and the subject one of wide import, the proper solution of which will require a deliberate and exhaustive research; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring therein, That a joint committee of ten be appointed, five to be named by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and five to be named by the President of the Senate, to make a careful and exhaustive investigation of the relations of the public utilities of this State to the people thereof (the words "Public Utilities" as used herein shall be defined as including all corporations, companies, associations, individuals, persons, or their lessees, trustees or receivers appointed by any court whatsoever, and all villages, towns and cities that own, operate, control, manage, manufacture, convey, lease, sell or store gas, electricity, water, heat, telephone or telegraph service, subways, conduits, tunnels, docks and wharves, and, in fact, all corporations, companies, associations, individuals, persons or their lessees, trustees, or receivers, appointed by any court whatsoever, and all villages, towns or cities that conduct such business as herein mentioned, under or by grant, franchise or ordinance of any municipal corporation in this State and operating wholly or in part within the corporate limits of any such municipal corporations, for pecuniary profit).

For the purpose of conducting such investigation said committee is hereby empowered to subpoena under the signature of its chairman, place under oath and examine such witnesses and to subpoena such books, documents and papers as they shall deem necessary for their information. To carry out the provisions of this resolution said committee is authorized to employ such assistance as shall be necessary. The said committee and members thereof shall be entitled to their actual expenses incurred in carrying out the provisions of this resolution.

The Attorney General's office of this State and the University of Illinois are requested to furnish to said committee legal and expert assistance as may be required. Said committee shall prepare their findings and present the same with their recommendations to the Governor of Illinois and the next General Assembly of this State, or may present the same to any special session of the Forty-seventh General Assembly, if such should be called, and this subject matter included in the call for the special session; and, be it further

Resolved, That the General Assembly proceed to make an appropriation for the ordinary and necessary expenses, for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this resolution.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

The committee appointed by virtue of the foregoing resolution begs leave to submit the following report:

Pursuant to the foregoing Joint Resolution, which was duly adopted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Forty-seventh General Assembly, the President of the Senate appointed the following members of the Senate, to wit: Messrs. Dailey, Barr, Potter, Glackin and Denvir; and the Speaker of the House of Representatives appointed the following members of the House, to wit: Messrs. Holaday, Church, Scanlan, Gorman and Alschuler.

Immediately after its appointment the committee met and organized, by electing Senator Dailey, Chairman; Senator Potter, Vice Chairman; Representative Holaday, Secretary; T. B. Scouten, Sergeant-at-Arms; William Colvin, Clerk, and William L. Corris, Official Reporter.

ATTITUDE OF PUBLIC TOWARDS UTILITIES.

The creation of a committee to investigate the desirability of a public utility law for the State of Illinois was born out of a desire to render a substantial and lasting service to the people of this State. In the last decade there have been various attitudes of public opinion towards public service corporations. Some years ago the disposition of municipal councils and bodies granting franchises was to stimulate the development of utility companies by granting extensive rights and privileges, with little regard to future conditions, and with little complaint on the part of the public. In many cases these grants were honestly but mistakenly made, in other cases they were subject to suspicion of corruption. The people have witnessed abnormal and unreasonable profits derived by utility corporations, out of the delegation of franchise rights that originally belonged to the people; they have witnessed the evils of the issuance of fictitious securities, and exactions from the public resulting from watered securities, in the form of inadequate service or extortionate rates, in many instances they have witnessed a contemptuous disregard for the rights of the public, unmindful of the fact that these companies owe their right to exist and do business to the State and the municipality.

PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS INVESTED WITH A PUBLIC TRUST.

Primarily, there are interested in these questions the great public itself, the patrons of the utility concern, and finally, those having capital invested therein. Too often indeed, the operators, owners and managers of public utilities have forgotten that they are quasi-public in their nature and character that they are performing with private capital a business invested with a public trust.

HOSTILE PUBLIC SENTIMENT.

Then another attitude of the public opinion became manifest, the public sentiment of the present time, when there is an agitation for all sorts and kinds and characters of remedies; where attacks are made upon the just and the unjust alike; where every man who has accumulated a dollar invested in public enterprise is suspicioned and accused of being dishonest and corrupt. Utility companies are now reaping the harvest of criticism for the seeds of error sown in former days. Much of the criticism is just, much of it is unjust, but nothing short of a thorough going regulation of public utilities will satisfy the demands of the public.

REASONS FOR APPOINTMENT OF INVESTIGATION COMMITTEE.

At the last session of the Illinois General Assembly, numerous measures were introduced relating to various phases of public utility regulation. If all the principles and theories of legislation advanced in the form of bills introduced at the last session of the General Assembly were crystalized in the form of law, there would not be a public utility concern in the State of Illinois able to continue its business. And so out of a great confusion of ideas regarding the proper control of public utilities, out of the various methods of legislation proposed, the last General Assembly came to the very wise conclusion that it was unable to solve the question, or to propose any proper remedy which would at once be just and fair and equitable to the people generally, and to those having capital invested in the various public service corporations. From that thought the idea was developed that a commission composed of five members of the Illinois Senate and five members of the House should be appointed with the purpose and object of investigating thoroughly and carefully the methods of control and regulation existing in various states, with the view of recommending such legislation as the commission might deem just and proper for the State of Illinois.

WORK OF THE COMMITTEE.

Following the instructions in the resolution which created it, your committee made a very thorough investigation of this very important subject, during the year and a half which intervened between the sine die adjournment of the Forty-seventh General Assembly and the convening of the Forty-eighth General Assembly.

This investigation took the committee through the State of Illinois, visiting twenty-nine municipalities, inquiring into conditions existing there, receiving information from the consumer of public utility products, from those who conducted public utilities and from public officials whose duties brought them in contact with public utility companies.

Your committee also gave special consideration to the public utility situation in the city of Chicago, holding many meetings in said city, at which meetings were heard the statements and testimony submitted by the mayor, and other officials of the city of Chicago, the officers and representatives of the public utility companies, members of civic organizations and other citizens who had arguments or evidence to present to your committee.

In order to act with intelligence in making its recommendations for remedial legislation, and in conformity with its instructions, the committee studied the conditions prevailing in other states where legislative effort had been made to regulate public utilities in the interest of the people.

The committee visited some of the principal states in the Union in the course of this investigation. In some states it held joint meetings with local public utility commissions. In this way your committee visited with the public utility commissions of Wisconsin; with the two public utility commissions of the state of New York, one at Albany and one at New York City, and with the three commissions of the state of Massachusetts. It also met Commissioner F. H. Worthen of the New Hampshire Commission.

The investigation was extended into other states, but the ones above named offered the best opportunities for studying the results of efforts which have been made to solve the same problems which we have to meet in Illinois. The regulatory laws on this subject, in other states, as this commission learned, are modeled after those in force in Wisconsin, New York and Massachusetts.

Your committee further reports that pursuant to the joint resolution hereinbefore referred to, we have coöperated with the authorities of the State University; that we have received valued assistance and a vast amount of information from Dean Kinley, Dean Harker and Professor John A. Fairlie. The committee expresses its deep appreciation of the many courtesies extended to its members by these gentlemen and the invaluable aid given the committee by them.

Most of the provisions in the proposed bill submitted by your committee have been submitted to the gentlemen last above named for criticism and suggestion. We have found the criticisms made and suggestions offered to be of great assistance to the committee. Valuable information and data incorporated in this report have been secured through the efforts of these gentlemen.

The members of the committee have unselfishly devoted their time and means to the conscientious performance of the duty imposed upon them by the joint resolution. They have devoted a vast amount of time, thought and effort at the expense of their private affairs in the prosecution of this work.

The efforts exerted by this committee in its investigations may be somewhat realized when it is considered that the records in this investigation comprises about 7,000 pages of typewritten matter. The literature and documents collected by the committee are classified under "Exhibit A," appended to this report; these documents are herewith presented with this report with the recommendation that they be given to the Illinois State Library.

SIXTEEN STATES HAVE COMMISSION REGULATION.

It is now being fully demonstrated by at least sixteen states of the Union that state regulation of public utilities, with due regard to local conditions, is the sane, practical solution for the problems arising out of the American system of private ownership of companies operating public franchises.

The states which have in operation laws providing for public utility regulation by state authority, are: California, Connecticut, Georgia, Kansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Vermont, Washington, Wisconsin.

During the present year utility laws have been enacted for the states of Indiana, Missouri, West Virginia and for the District of Columbia; such laws, at the time of the completion of this report, have been passed by the legislatures of Maine, Montana and Idaho, but have not yet been signed, and legislation is now pending in many of the remaining states.

The states of Wisconsin, New York, Massachusetts and California present four different systems of public utility regulation by commission.

WISCONSIN.

Wisconsin has one commission which has the power of regulating all public utilities within the state.

NEW YORK.

New York has two commissions, the state being divided on geographical lines. One of these commissions was created for the city of New York and known as the commission for the first district. It has jurisdiction over all the utilities within the municipality except telephone. The other commission has jurisdiction over the public utilities in the state outside of New York and of all telephone companies in the state. It is known as the commission for the second district.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Massachusetts has three commissions that are empowered to regulate the utilities of that state and their jurisdiction is fixed as to subject matter, that is to say, one commission regulates the transportation utilities, another regulates the telephone and telegraph utilities and the third regulates the gas, electric and water utilities.

CALIFORNIA.

California adopted a public utilities law in 1912. This law permits cities to surrender powers, respecting public utilities, to the State Commission upon a vote of the different municipalities, and, in the like manner, after the surrender of such power, to re-invest themselves with such power. In most respects the law is similar to the New York and Wisconsin laws.

NEW YORK.

In New York in 1907, Governor Hughes transmitted a message to the New York General Assembly recommending that certain boards exercising control over public utilities be abolished. This system obtaining in New York at the time of such recommendation was somewhat similar to the method of control of public utilities existing in the state of Massachusetts, where public utilities, so far as regulation, were classified according to the subject matter, Governor Hughes regarding this system as archaic and not designed to meet the problems of proper regulation of utilities in a modern and scientific manner.

He enlisted public sentiment in behalf of the New York measure by making a personal campaign throughout the state on this issue, with the result that the present public utility law of New York was adopted, with but six dissenting votes in the General Assembly.

This law is a notable example of the highest constructive statesmanship. The same is true of the Wisconsin law. All other laws have been copies in most parts from the New York and Wisconsin laws, in many regards without regard to local conditions, the constitutions and the statutes of the various states adopting such measures.

The commission for the first district of New York succeeded the Railroad Commission, the Commission of Gas and Electricity, the inspector of gas meters and the Rapid Transit Commission. The function exercised by these boards were transferred with greatly enlarged authority upon the commission of New York.

VOLUME OF BUSINESS OF NEW YORK CITY COMMISSION.

The public utilities of Greater New York not only supply the needs of nearly five million people who live in the city proper, but the many thousands living in the neighboring states who conduct their business affairs in New York City.

According to Commissioner Maltbie of the first district in New York the gas companies of New York City supply more than one-fifth of the volume of gas manufactured in the United States; the electric companies of the same city supply one-thirteenth of the electricity produced for light and power in the United States.

The surface lines, elevated and subway lines of Greater New York carry more than twice as many passengers as all the steam roads of the country combined. One-third of this traffic is carried on during the two hours in the morning and two in the evening.

In 1910 the number of passengers carried by the subway and elevated and surface lines was 1,529,421,000, an increase of 127,000,000 over the previous year.

The increase alone for this one year was greater than the total traffic in the city of Buffalo for the year 1910.

This commission, according to the report of John N. Carlisle, to Governor Dix on May 31, 1911, had under its jurisdiction about 125 corporations with a gross capitalization of to wit:

Street railroads	$733,635,000 00
Gas companies	210,883,000 00
Electric companies	163,216,000 00
Gas and electric companies	5,424,000 00
Steam railroads on Staten Island	12,700,000 00

Total$1,125,858,000 00

The receipts of these companies for 1910 were:

Street railways, including subways and elevated.....	$80,000,000 00
Gas companies	35,000,000 00
Electric companies	24,000,000 00

Total $139,000,000 00

According to the same authority these public service corporations transacted about one-fifth of the entire public service business of the United States; the gas consumed, according to the above report of Mr. Carlisle, was 43,321,542 feet; the electricity used was 361,920,873 k. w. hours. Since the organization of the commission for the first district to May, 1910, the commission had inspected and sealed 1,174,302 gas meters, and the number inspected in 1910 was over one thousand a day.

The pieces of mail incoming and outgoing amount to over 100,000 pieces a year. The applications for approval of securities up to May, 1910, amounted to $361,638,840.00. In 1910 there occurred on the transportation lines in New York City 59,575 accidents, an average of about 160 per day. Of this number 379 persons were killed and 14,484 persons and vehicles were struck by cars.

These statistics are given to show the tremendous volume and character of the work of this commission charged with the regulation of the affairs of companies transacting about 20 per cent, in volume, of the public utility business of the United States, and illustrate one of the factors determining the necessity for the establishment of two public utility commissions for the state of New York.

In New York, where exists a situation quite similar to that in Illinois, we found the two commission idea. A separate commission is created for New York City but the commission is appointed by the Governor and is responsible to the state government and not to the municipality. If the appointment of the commission for the city of New York was in control of the local government, argued the New York authorities, then the regulation of that city's public utility companies would not be removed from local politics, and that was one of the strongest arguments advanced for the regulation of their utilities. The city of New York has not indulged in the criticism that this law is an invasion of its right of home rule.

SALARIES AND EXPENSES, NEW YORK CITY COMMISSION.

The public utilities commission for the first district of New York, is composed of three commissioners who are appointed for five years, by the Governor of the state, the salary of each commissioner is $15,000.00 per year. The salary of the counsel for the commission is $10,000.00 and for its secretary $6,000.00 per year. These salaries are paid by the state of New York. This commission has the handling of the entire transportation question as well as regulating all utilities other than telephones in New York City and because of the immense amount of work being carried on in rehabilitating the transportation systems of the city, it was employing in 1911, at the time of your committee's visit to New York City, between five hundred and seven hundred men a considerable number of whom were engineers. The salary of all of these employees and all the expense of carrying on the work of the commission was borne by the city of New York, and, according to information furnished by members of the New York commission in 1911, the total annual expense of the commission was $1,300,000.00, of this amount less than $100,000.00 was paid by the state and over $1,200,000.00 was paid by the city of New York for all of the other expenses of the commission.

A classification of the expenditures as between the work of rapid transit proper and regulation proper show the following division:

	Regulation.	Rapid Transit.
1908	365,000	708,000
1909	470,000	710,000
1910	370,000	922,000

The transportation problem in New York City, owing to the density of population in a comparatively small area, surrounded and divided by waterways, and owing to other local conditions, has been most difficult to solve.

TRANSPORTATION—NEW YORK.

New York did not even enter upon a solution of this question until the state commission was created, composed of men qualified to study and handle this problem and clothed with the power to investigate the transportation utilities of the city, and to make rules and regulations governing those utilities and compelling the extension and betterment of their service, and with the power to enforce these rules and regulations. The same situation was true with reference to other utilities, gas, electric light and telephone. Since 1907 the date when the state commission for New York City was created, remarkable strides have been made in the bringing of better and cheaper service to the people of the city, and the public utilities have been almost wholly removed from activity in New York City politics.

REGULATIONS OUT OF POLITICS—NEW YORK.

The chairman of the New York commission, Hon. Milo R. Maltbie, said, in an address to this Illinois Legislative Committee, in the city of New York on Aug. 17, 1911:

"I think that the whole matter of regulation and rate making should be removed just so far as possible from the field of politics and from political influences, and that is what our commission has already accomplished for the city of New York." Pp. 164-165, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

SURFACE CAR LINES—NEW YORK.

When the public utilities commission for the city of New York was appointed by Governor Hughes in 1907, and assumed its duties, it was confronted with a condition somewhat similar to the one existing in Chicago a few years ago. The surface transportation lines had fallen into an advanced state of decay. Many of them had been leased and released many times and enormous stock and bond issues made in frantic attempts to pay the rentals on these leases, the interest on bonds and some dividends to stockholders. The rolling stock and general equipment had deteriorated to such an extent that the cars could not be operated at a profit, and, practically all the surface lines at that time were in the hands of receivers.

IMPROVEMENTS OF SERVICE.

The first district commission in New York, in its work of rehabilitating the transportation systems and giving the people of that city better and more adequate service, has accomplished much. It has made and enforced rulings with reference to the operation of street cars, the number of cars, time of their operation, granting of transfers, making extensions of service, providing for life saving devices and compelling the general improvement of equipment throughout each system. The rapid transit work proper constitutes the greatest volume of work of the commission and engages the service of over 60 per cent of its employees.

ORDERS MADE AND ENFORCED.

This commission has the authority to make orders regarding rates and service and the power to enforce those orders. It also has the authority to make valuations of utility properties when, in the opinion of the commission, such action is necessary in settling a controversy over rates.

Mr. Carlisle in the report before mentioned this feature of the commission's activities as follows:

"Practically all the surface lines in the city of New York have now been appraised or are undergoing appraisal, including the properties of the Metropolitan Street Railroad Company, the Third Avenue Railroad, Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company, Coney Island & Brooklyn Railroad Company, Westchester Electric Light & Power Company, Bronx Gas & Electric Company, Kings County Electric Light & Power Company, Queensborough Gas & Electric Company and the Brooklyn Borough Gas & Electric Company. The value of these properties as appraised is between $225,000,000.00 and $250,000,000.00.

To perform the work required, the department necessarily has in its employ a large number of persons, including inspectors, engineers, accountants and clerks. A great deal of the work when finished will not have to be gone over again. The expense of the bureau is decreasing and undoubtedly will decrease in the future. The demand for relief by the people is so insistent in connection with the congested conditions, that the employment of inspectors is certainly justifiable and has undoubtedly accomplished considerable relief."

POWERS AND DUTIES OF NEW YORK COMMISSIONS.

The main powers and duties conferred upon the New York Commissions are as follows:

1. To examine into the general condition, capitalization, franchise and management of public service corporations.
2. To establish a uniform system of accounts and records.
3. To order repairs or changes in corporated property, the use of additional facilities, or the adoption of improved methods of operation in order to secure safe and adequate service.
4. To test gas and electric meters, approved types of meters, establish standards of quality for gas and electric service.
5. To fix just and reasonable rates to be charged by public service corporations and to prevent unjust discriminations.
6. To entertain complaints and, after due hearing, make such order as will remove the cause of the complaint.
7. To grant or withhold the certificate needed by a public service corporation before it can begin new construction or exercise a franchise or right not already exercised.
8. To approve or disapprove the transfer of a franchise or the making of a contract relating to a franchise.
9. To give or withhold permission for the issuance of corporate securities or for the merger of existing companies; but not to permit the capitalization of any merger or franchise itself.
10. To grant or refuse permission for the transfer of stock in a public service corporation to a similar corporation, or for the acquisition of more than 10 per cent of such stock by any corporation.

Mr. Maltbie, in his work on Public Regulation in New York, makes the following statement regarding the transportation question:

"One would naturally infer that such a field would be the richest in the world. It is somewhat staggering to learn, therefore, that practically all of the surface lines in the very heart of this fertile field have been in the hands of the receivers for about three years. When the commission took office, all the lines in the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx were being operated by one company, the New York City Railway Company. The system was in a woeful state of disrepair, the result, in part at least, of decades of "high finance." Leases, bond and stock issues, and dividend guaranties had been piled on each other in a bewildering fashion. Dummy companies had been saddled with the responsibility of operating great systems. Funds which should have been used for maintenance were used to pay exorbitant rentals and dividends on fictitious capitalization. The system was tottering to inevitable bankruptcy, for it could no more continue than a pyramid can stand upon its apex. The real facts were at first not generally known, but after the commission turned on the light, the entire system went into hands of receivers.

There are those who blame the commission for this collapse and the subsequent decrease in stock exchange prices. But the commission was no more responsible for the conditions it found than the doctor who examines a patient, reports the existence of a virulent disease and proceeds to prevent the repetition of an epidemic. The investigation paved the way for the rehabilitation of the system, which has been begun but not yet completed.

It would hardly be possible to enumerate in detail the many improvements in service that have been ordered. A few may be cited to show their general character. At certain connecting points companies have been required either to erect shelters or to keep a stationary car for the accommodation of waiting passengers. The ventilation, heating and lighting of stations and cars have been the subject of numerous orders; and in 1908 a general order was made, applying to all transportation lines in the city and prescribing the limits of temperature to be maintained in the cars. The giving and acceptance of transfers has often been required by the commission in cases in which such action might legally be taken. Additional tracks have been ordered to facilitate the operation of cars. In scores of cases cars have been ordered run further toward the end of the line, for they were often improperly turned back, passengers being ordered to take "car ahead" or "next car," with much crowding and delay as the result.

SERVICE ON RAPID TRANSIT LINES.

The subway service has also been improved in many ways. A new signal system has been installed, upon the initiation of the commission, to facilitate the operation of more trains by reducing the headway. The cars are being equipped with center side-doors to enable persons to enter and leave the cars with greater comfort and speed. The station platforms are being lengthened to permit ten-car trains to be operated instead of eight as at present. When all the changes are completed, which have been ordered by the commission, it is expected that the carrying capacity of the subway will be increased from twenty to forty per cent. Already the headway between trains during rush hours has been reduced sixteen seconds, and during non-rush hours from three minutes to two and one-half minutes—equivalent to an increase in service of from thirteen to twenty per cent. A further reduction of eighteen seconds is expected when all the improvements have been completed.

Many minor improvements have also been made, such as additional stations, stairways, elevators, escalators, guard rails, station signs and car destination signs. The ten-candle-power lights furnished in the cars have been ordered replaced with sixteen-candle-power lights for the benefit of subway readers. Other improvements are under consideration.

Service has been improved on the elevated railroads in much the same manner as on the surface and subway lines. More cars are being operated in longer trains. Through service has been substituted for stub-end operation. One company has installed an improved type of air brake on its cars. New stations have been erected and conveniences added at existing stations, such as additional platform space, better station signs, better coverings for stations, increased number of stairways, the widening of stairways, the installation of escalators, etc. The third tracking of certain lines, making possible better express service and extensions, are now being considered."

STATEMENT OF MR. CARLISLE.

Your joint committee concurs in the following statement of Mr. Carlisle in his report of an investigation of the affairs of the Public Service Commission for the first district:

"The state of New York by the passage of the Public Service Commission law in 1907 placed itself among the first of the states to legislate in connection with regulating public service corporations. While the passage of the act was bitterly opposed yet it is conceded today by all students of government that it was one of the most constructive pieces of legislation passed in our state in years.

Today it has become recognized that public supervision has come to stay and a great many states in the Union have adopted legislation along the same lines. Most of the officials of public service corporations now recognize that the legislation is proper and the only questions really now at issue arise out of the manner of carrying out of the provisions of law, and the personnel of the men connected with the different commissions.

The commission when organized was required to take up for the first time the solution of new problems never before entrusted to any public officials. While the old Board of Railroad Commissioners, the Commission of Gas and Electricity and the Inspector of Gas Meters had certain limited jurisdiction, yet the Act creating the Public Service Commission provided for new and practically heretofore untried methods of supervision over public service corporations. This work necessarily at first was experimental in its nature, and created some friction between the officials of the operating companies and the commission as to the extent of its authority, and particularly as to how far the commission should go in its work along the lines of orders affecting management and operation. This friction, I think, has gradually decreased.

The operating officials and the commission have come to understand each other, and the nature of their work, and to appreciate that fact that both must work in harmony to accomplish a common end.

The members of the commission have given their entire time to the work; no one has ever questioned their personal honesty and there has been no charge or intimation made that there has been any graft connected with their work or with the subways constructed under their supervision and direction and on account of which nearly $30,000,000.00 has been disbursed. Necessarily there has been criticism of the work of the commission and it must be expected that in the future this commission with its enormous powers and duties will always be subject to criticism, but fair and legitimate criticism will help the commission in its work.

No one in this country is infallible, and even our courts are, and always will be, subject to fair criticism. The great trouble is that the people of the city of New York have expected too much from the commission. No body of men, no matter how powerful nor how numerous, can ever solve all the problems relating to the methods and operations of public service corporations in the city of New York. There will always be complaints, just and unjust, filed against the companies under their supervision, upon which the commission must act, and those unsuccessful in securing the objects they desire will always feel aggrieved.

After two years and a half of practical working out of the Public Service Commissions Law the same was amended, revised and re-enacted by the Legislature of 1910. Very careful attention was given to the amendments by all persons interested, including the members of both commissions and the officials of the public service corporations affected, and the bill as finally passed met with practically no opposition. The law is now in fairly good working order, and while there are a few minor amendments that could be passed to strengthen it, yet such amendments should be carefully thought out and full opportunity be given to all persons interested to study their meaning before any new amendments are passed."

SECOND DISTRICT COMMISSION—NEW YORK.

The commissioners of the second district of New York are five in number, appointed by the Governor, and their term of office is for five years. The salary is $15,000.00 a year. The amount appropriated for the Second District Commission for the year beginning Oct. 1, 1911, was $380,000.00. The Second District Commission employs about 115 men.

JURISDICTION.

The Second District Commission on Jan. 1, 1910, exercised jurisdiction over eleven hundred and eighty-seven corporations in the state of New York, steam railroad corporations, 199; electric railway corporations, 133; express companies, 7; telephone companies, 142; telegraph companies, 10; electrical corporations, 310; some of these steam and electrical railways were not in operation. The Second District Commission of New York has jurisdiction over all the power companies generating electricity at Niagara Falls on the American side of the river. The jurisdiction of telephone and telegraph companies was conferred upon the commission of the second district alone.

This commission makes an annual report to the legislature the first week in January. This is likewise true of the commission for the first district. In said report they publish all of the orders made by the commission during the year preceding. The business of the commission is divided into matters which are classed as formal and informal. Informal matters are those that are conducted without being based upon formal complaints and which are answered and conducted simply by correspondence. In the four years up to July 1, 1911, this commission had about 4,800 informal complaints. In the same period it had about 2,400 formal cases in which contested hearings were held and decisions rendered. During the year preceding July 1, 1911, the commission conducted between five and six hundred public hearings. These hearings were chiefly on complaints in regard to rates, character of service and issuance of securities.

REDUCTION OF TELEPHONE RATES.

One of the most important decisions of this commission was handed down a few weeks before your committee visited the commission at Albany, resulting in the reduction of toll rates between the Boroughs of Manhattan and The Bronx from 10 cents to 5 cents a message.

The importance of this decision may be seen at a glance when it is known that the number of telephonic messages exchanged between these two Boroughs in one year is in the neighborhood of thirty million. The reduction meant a saving to the patrons of the telephone company of $1,500,000.00.

The commission accepted the figures of the telephone company as to the valuation of its property as a basis for the establishment of these rates, but the commission entirely excluded from their consideration the valuation of the franchise of the company, which was placed at $30,000,000.00 by the company. The commission seemed to be satisfied that the valuation of the company was correct. We are of the opinion that the same painstaking care was not exhibited in ascertaining the valuation of the company's property by the New York Commission as is exercised by the Wisconsin Commission in the procedure established by the latter commission in arriving at the value of the tangible and intangible property of public service corporations.

Prior to August, 1911, there had been during the four years existence of this commission, but one reversal of its findings where an appeal had been taken to the courts.

REDUCING CAPITALIZATION BY NEW YORK COMMISSION.

In cases of a consolidation of two or more public utility companies, great pains were taken to squeeze all of the water out of the financial obligations. One case was cited where this commission permitted the consolidation of two gas companies, in which it reduced the capitalization over one-half million dollars and provided a further reduction upon the appraisal of the property. No corporation, subject to the jurisdiction of this commission, can issue any stock or bonds, or evidences of indebtedness of any kind maturing for more than one year from date, without the permission of the Public Service Commission. The company is obliged to report to the commission what it does with the money that they realize on these securities, and bonds are only permitted to be issued for special purposes.

COMMISSION AT DIFFERENT POINTS IN STATE.

This commission has its hearings all over the state where every occasion may demand so that the people will not be burdened with the expense or delay of visiting the state capitol.

The chairman of the Second District Commission of New York, Hon. Frank W. Stevens, is a man of wide experience in dealing with public utilities in the capacity of an official. Their control and regulation had been a subject of intimate study for him for many years. Not only in New York state, but the conditions in other states as well. In the course of his address to your committee, at Albany, N. Y., on Aug. 11, 1911 he, discussed many of the questions which have been made part of the issue in Illinois. In expressing his opinion of the proposition of more than one commission for a state, Mr. Stevens said:

"As to the division into two districts there has been a difference of opinion whether that has been a mistake or a benefit. The reason for it was that they have a very tremendous problem in the city of New York regarding rapid transit matters. * * * Of course, in any state, so far as practicable, there really should be but one commission, there never was any valid reason for the existence of two commissions." PP. 11-17, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

In reply to a question asked by a member of the Illinois committee, as to his opinion of the advisability of creating a public utilities commission where the power of appointing the members would lie with the mayor or city council, Mr. Stevens replied as follows:

STEVENS OPPOSED TO LOCAL COMMISSION.

"It may be that local conditions existing anywhere are such as to overcome any general principle, as applied in that specific instance, but speaking without reference to local conditions in your State, and having no knowledge of them, I wish to say that personally I am most decidedly opposed to any local commission governing matters which are not only of importance to the locality, but to the general public. I say that I am a believer in the principle of home rule, but at the same time I think the proposition of home rule should be confined to matters which are in a broad sense exclusively of home interest and concern. However, as to the problems that are presented in the large cities in the state, regarding the railroads and utility matters, I think they should not be settled by local commissions.

"If they are settled in one place by a purely local commission, I do not see any valid reason why you should not settle all questions in every village, and city by judgment and discretion of the local authorities. Now any one can easily see what would come about in the way of results if all questions were left to the local authorities. * * * My observation has been that it is difficult to get a commission that will occupy an impartial attitude and will not be governed by local pressure. I think you will not be governed by right-minded men. They of necessity will be biased, and I think that you will find that it will be absolutely necessary to get an entirely independent commission which will work with indifference to local pressure which will be brought to bear upon it.

"A state-wide commission will have less temptation to swerve from firm and impartial decision than would a local commission. The reasons for this are obvious, and known to all." Pp. 25-26, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

POLITICAL ACTIVITY LESSENED.

Chairman Stevens of this commission and Judge Hale, counsel for the commission, declared that there was a noticeable let-up in the political activity of public service corporations since the commission law was enacted.

OPPOSITION TO REGULATION LAW IN NEW YORK.

In reply to the question as to whether there was general opposition to the passage of the law providing for regulation the New York Commission informed your committee that: "Steam railways and other corporations undertook to organize meetings throughout the state. They got members of the different chambers of commerce to protest against the passage of the bill at that time. * * * "They did not know what was going to happen to them and they were apprehensive. They know now what is happening; they keep themselves informed, and they keep their actions within the limitations that are prescribed by law." Pp. 76-77, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

NO EFFORT TO MAKE NEW YORK COMMISSION SELF-SUSTAINING.

The New York Commissions are maintained out of the general funds and no effort is made to compel the public service companies to contribute to their support as is done in Wisconsin. The theory in New York state being that the commissioners should not feel that they are being maintained, and the expenses of their offices met, by the public utility companies which they are regulating.

Chairman Stevens was very much opposed to the Massachusetts law regulating public utilities. He stated with great emphasis that the Massachusetts system of a multiplicity of commissions obtained in New York prior to the adoption of the present law and that such a system proved to be entirely unfitted to the needs of the state. He considered that the adoption of the Massachusetts idea would constitute a retrogressive step and that New York in abandoning what was tantamount to the Massachusetts idea of regulation had advanced to a modern and scientific method of regulation.

According to Chairman Stevens, the tendency in New York state is to place greater control in the commission outside of the city of New York and he cites as an evidence of the fact the recent enactment of New York conferring complete and sole jurisdiction over telephone and telegraph companies upon the commission for the second district of New York.

He stated in his opinion the only reason that two commissions were deemed advisable for the state of New York was the fact of the tremendous propositions involved in the transportation question in the city of New York, which matter has been detailed somewhat at length heretofore in this report.

SPEEDY RELIEF AFFORDED BY COMMISSION.

The following illustration is given as one of the numerous cases which may be cited where speedy relief was given by the New York Commission, Second District:

"Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse University had often waited, with from thirty to fifty people, at Saranac Lake for over two hours, to catch trains for Lake Placid. The Delaware and Hudson, on being apprised of the situation, advanced the leaving time of its train from 8:40 P. M. to 7:00 P. M. Complainant had written to the company; nothing resulted. On this matter he writes: 'Evidently after hearing from your commission.... the arrangement took effect. My inference is that the commission had something to do with the matter. This incident comes pretty near making me a convert to the Public Service Commission. I have always been opposed to government by commission, but it has proved effective in this case, when five years of argument, diplomacy and emphasis failed.'"

ANOTHER ILLUSTRATION.

Within the last few weeks an order limiting the height of street car steps to 15 inches has been passed by the Public Service Commission for the First District of New York. Some time ago a number of women's clubs complained to the commission that some of the street cars had steps so high that it was difficult for women to board the cars. Investigation showed that the height of such steps varied from 12 to 20 inches, and that a height of 15 inches would be reasonable. Accordingly, most of the street surface car companies of the city have been ordered to put their equipment in such shape that no car step shall be higher than 15 inches from the ground.

COMMITTEE APPROVES WORK OF SECOND COMMISSION FOR NEW YORK.

Your committee cannot express too highly its approval of the work done by the second commission of New York, of the splendid character of the men composing the commission, of the efficiency of the service performed in behalf of the public good. Thousands of cases might be multiplied where speedy relief has been sought and granted to persons having grievances against public utility concerns.

Heretofore such complaints were almost invariably ignored by the public service companies. No complaint is now considered too small for this commission to investigate. The most humble citizens, if his cause is just, can obtain immediate relief without expense and without resort to red tape methods. We think that the work of this commission has met with the hearty approval of all classes of citizens. The same respect is entertained for the judgment, opinions and orders of this commission as is entertained for the opinions of the court of last resort in that state.

WISCONSIN SYSTEM OF REGULATION.

The state of Wisconsin adopted public utility legislation as a result of the agitation for this measure by Senator LaFollette when he was Governor of Wisconsin. In 1904 both political parties of the state were pledged by their platforms to enact public utility commission laws. In this respect the conditions were similar to those existing in the State of Illinois at the present time, the Republican, Democratic, and Progressive State platform of Illinois for 1912 having endorsed this class of legislation.

The constructive features of the Wisconsin law are due almost solely to the efforts of Professor Commons of the State University, while the education of the masses and the consequent public sentiment in behalf of this law were due to the efforts of Senator LaFollette, then Governor of the state. The law of 1905 provided merely for the regulation of the railroads of the state. In 1907 the provisions of the railroad regulation law of Wisconsin were extended generally to public service corporations.

The commission consists of three members appointed by the Governor. Their term of office is six years, arranged so that one commissioner is appointed every two years. The salary paid each commissioner is $5,000.00 annually.

The Wisconsin law provides that their commission shall be composed of a statistician, a lawyer and a citizen well versed in the subject of transportation utilities.

PHYSICAL VALUE OF PROPERTY IN DETERMINING RATES.

In the first instance the Wisconsin commission determines the physical value of the property of a public utility and with these figures as a basis it determines what is a fair rate for the company to charge to secure a reasonable return upon its investment. Public utilities owned by private individuals and public utilities owned by municipalities are treated the same. The municipality with its municipally owned plant can establish a rate in the first instance but it must file its rate with the public utility commission and upon any complain being made the commission could review that rate of the municipal plant and determine what it should be.

Hon. John H. Roemer, chairman of the Wisconsin commission said at the session of the Illinois Legislative Committee held at Madison, Wis, in July, 1911:

"Municipalities have to come in and file their rates the same as anybody else. We never have any difference with municipalities, * * * * they appeal to us themselves. They don't know anything about scientific schedule of rates and they apply to the commission and that is the way it is usually worked out. We have conferences with the municipal authorities and put experts to work and value their plants, and go through the thing scientifically and establish a schedule of rates." P. 25, Vol. 1, Com. Evidence.

RIGHT OF APPEAL.

There is a right of appeal to the courts under the Wisconsin law from any decision of the commission. During the four years prior to July, 1911, the period during which utilities had been regulated in Wisconsin, there was but one appeal taken from the decisions of this commission and that was a condemnation case regarding a water plant. There had been during that time no appeals from the commission's decision in any rate making case. During the first three years of the existence of this commission it disposed of 207 formal utility cases, in which investigations were made by engineers and experts and contested hearings were had.

EXPENSE.

The expense of maintaining and operating the Wisconsin commission amounts to about $100,000.00 annually. The commission has between seventy-five and eighty employees.

WISCONSIN COMMISSION SELF-SUSTAINING.

An attempt is made to make the commission self-sustaining on the theory that the investor is benefited and should pay. Under the stock and bond law of Wisconsin the commission is allowed to charge $1.00 per one thousand for public utility bonds that are issued under its authority.

The stock and bond law of Wisconsin was originally passed in 1907, but owing to serious defects it was amended in the year 1911. The state of New York in respect to the commission's approval of stock and bond issues was greatly hampered by the provisions of its law.

It has been contended that under the New York law the commission merely had power to grant or continue the petition of a utility company for the issuance of stock or bonds, the commission having no authority to modify the request of the utility company. If a request were made for the issuance of stock to the extent of $1,000,000.00 and the commission was of the opinion that this amount was excessive and thought a reasonable amount would be $500,000.00, it has been held that the commission was without authority to modify, alter or change the request of the petitioning company.

The present statute of Wisconsin gives the commission discretion with reference to modifying the requests of petitioning companies in this respect and the additional right to impose such conditions as they deem to be just and proper.

WISCONSIN OPPOSED TO LOCAL REGULATION.

The Wisconsin commission, and those men in the state who were instrumental in securing the passage of this law and who gave years of time and study to this subject, were strongly of the conviction that it would be a serious error to empower local or municipal commissions to regulate utilities. They believe that it would result in no change of conditions from the old system and that the benefits obtained under regulation by the authority that created these corporations, and under whose laws they are operating, namely, the state government, would be wholly lost. Hon. John H. Roemer, chairman of the Wisconsin commission, in addressing your committee on this subject, said:

"I would say that if the city of Milwaukee had the power to appoint its own commission, it would only be a short time before the utilities would be appointing the commission and they would be regulating themselves. * * * The operation of a public utility is not a thing to be settled by votes. It is a business proposition. Common Councils do not always think that way." P. 45. Vol. 1, Committee Evidence.

HOME RULE A POOR HOUSE FOR POLITICIANS.

On the subject of home rule for any particular locality and the theory that a municipality should have and retain the right to regulate public utilities, independent of the state government, the Wisconsin commission was emphatic in its opinion, arrived at after an exhaustive study of this subject. The sentiment of the commission was forcibly expressed by the chairman, John H. Roemer, when he said in his address to the Illinois committee:

"Home rule doesn't mean anything when taken in connection with a public utility it is a poor house for politicians in the community in which they live." P. 64, Vol. L, Committee Evidence.

He further cites a case occurring in Milwaukee where a certain politician who was a candidate for office applied to one of the local utility companies for a campaign contribution. This company had been in the habit of contributing largely to the expenses of candidates for municipal offices. The candidate was informed by the representative of the utility corporation that they were not in politics and were entirely disinterested in what the city council did, that they were subject to regulation at Madison and were not engaged in politics but were engaged in business.

Special emphasis is laid by the Wisconsin law, and the men who administer it, upon the importance of collecting statistics and data as a basis of intelligent action in utility regulation.

Wisconsin more than any other state has developed this idea and the result is, apparently, that the commission of that state has more ready material and facilities for arriving at a fair rate of charge for a utility, or a fair decision with reference to capitalization or bond issue, than the commission of any other state, for its conclusions are based on mathematical calculations carried out to the minutest detail and are reinforced by a mass of information constantly being acquired concerning physical and going values of plants and cost of operation and production.

WISCONSIN COMMISSION AND STATE UNIVERSITY.

In this connection Wisconsin employs a statistical department for its commission. The engineering and statistical departments of this commission work in close conjunction with the University of Wisconsin. In fact the heads of the different bureaus in the engineering department are all men connected with the engineering school of the state university.

A joint library has been established by the commission at the University of Wisconsin in one of the university buildings in which most of the necessary testing and standardizing appliances are found. The university supplies from its departments numbers of young men who are being equipped especially for service appertaining to the regulation of public utilities. The university has been an important factor in the life and development of the commission and much of the excellence of the Wisconsin law and its effective administration is due to this fact.

Insofar as applicable, the bill prepared by your committee provides for cooperation between the University of Illinois and the proposed Utility Commission for this State.

VALUE OF STATISTICAL DEPARTMENT.

All utility coöperations are compelled to report annually, and at any special time required by the commission, to the statistical department. A complete up-to-date record of each utility is thereby maintained so that the commission or the public can at any time readily ascertain the financial or physical condition of any plant and the improvement or deterioration in its operation. This department offers an excellent opportunity for study to those who are interested in public utilities and who desire to learn the experience of others, thus often times finding new and improved methods of operation that have been devised and finding also where in they have not been getting the best results from their own property.

This statistical department has proved to be of especial value to the large number of municipality owned plants in Wisconsin. The information gained hereby has been of great saving to these plants and has helped in a very large degree to make Wisconsin municipally owned public utilities among the most efficient and economically operated of any in the Union.

UNIFORM ACCOUNTS.

Another feature of the Wisconsin law is its provision requiring a system of uniform accounts to be kept by all utilities. The provisions of the Wisconsin law in this respect is a model and the administration of the law in this regard may well be emulated by other states. It is the opinion of the members of the Wisconsin commission that such a provision in the law is one of the fundamental principles of proper public utility regulation.

PHYSICAL VALUATION.

The Wisconsin law provides for a physical valuation of all public utilities. No valuation of utilities has been made except for the purpose of establishing rates where complaint has been made.

The members of this commission were of the opinion that no public utility law would be effective without conferring upon the commission broad powers with reference to fixing a value upon the properties of public utilities.

The opinions of the Wisconsin commission upon these matters are possibly the best considered of any commission in the country. The men composing this commission from its inception have been men of the highest probity, intelligence and capacity. Their opinions reflect great research, scientific investigation and intimate knowledge of business affairs and a keen sense of justice alike to the state, invested capital and the patrons of public service corporations.

INDETERMINATE PERMITS.

The members of the Wisconsin commission are strongly impressed with the idea that the granting of indeterminate permits to public service corporations is one of the most valuable provisions of their law in conserving the interests of the public.

In the first instance, under the law of 1907, it was optional with corporations to avail themselves of the privileges of the indeterminate permit. Notwithstanding the apparent advantage to public service corporations in accepting the indeterminate permit, less than twenty-five per cent of the public service corporations of Wisconsin availed themselves of this privilege. In 1911 the Wisconsin law was amended so that all public service corporations were compelled to accept the provisions of the indeterminate franchise. These permits are conditioned that no similar concern within a municipality shall be granted a franchise unless the commission certified that public convenience and necessity require the granting of a franchise to the second utility.

The Wisconsin law is based upon the theory of regulated monopoly, that the duplication of public utility plants in a given community ultimately means added burdens to the consumer, and that it involves economic waste.

Another feature of the indeterminate permit is that the municipality reserves to itself the right to purchase the plant of the public utility at a price to be fixed by the commission, subject to review by the courts at the instance of either party.

Much speculation has arisen as to the right of the Legislature of this State to provide for an indeterminate permit similar to that provided for by the Wisconsin law. Your committee sought the opinion of Dean Harker of the law school of the University of Illinois. He is of the opinion that such a law in this State would not violate any constitutional provision. A copy of his opinion is attached to this report and marked "Exhibit B."

FEATURES OF THE WISCONSIN LAW.

The chairman of the Wisconsin commission in an address delivered before the Wisconsin Bar Association at Milwaukee, September 1, 1909, makes the following statements, which are particularly applicable to conditions in Illinois:

"In considering the features of the law, hereinbefore discussed, in their broader aspects it would appear that the unbiased mind must necessarily come to the conclusion that the system of State regulation and aid provided by the Public Utilities Law of this State is capable of producing eventually more permanent and satisfactory results than any system of local control that can be conceived. It recognizes that public utilities are business enterprises requiring a high character of scientific skill as well as business ability for their successful operation and management. Any public control which ignores this fact must of necessity fail. Local control, as commonly practiced, consists of nothing more nor less than spasmodic attacks upon rates and services of public utilities regardless of the physical conditions of their plants, their financial needs or possibilities. Because of local attacks public service corporations have not infrequently yielded to local pressure and reduced their charges for the sake of the peace when public interest, if the situation had been properly understood, would have been best served by maintaining the revenues so as to have enabled them to make improvements by adopting new inventions and thereby rendering better service at a permanently reduced cost. To compel a public utility to improvidently curtail expenditures of operation, neglect proper maintenance and improvements and make no provisions for depreciation will, in the end, result in an increased burden upon the public. The time will come when these omissions must be supplied and the public will be obliged to supply them or go without the service. To meet the requirements when they occur is the only economic method that can be adopted in the administration of a public utility. That public regulation which does not deal intelligently with the business interest as well as the physical property of a public service corporation will prove disastrous in the end. The Wisconsin law is well adapted to a wise supervision of all the affairs pertaining to the operation and business administration of every public utility subject to its provisions."

The following observation by Hon. B. H. Meyer, now a member of the Interstate Commerce commission and first chairman of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission of Wisconsin, is interesting.

"The commission has no desire to be, and the law does not contemplate that it shall be, general manager, consulting engineer, superintendent of construction, or general auditor for municipal and private utilities; but it is the hope of the commission that managers of municipal and private plants, local officials and interested citizens, will avail themselves freely of the information and services which the commission is in a position to give.

"While the law expressly retains to the municipalities power to control the various kinds and character of service rendered and to be rendered, the power to prescribe conditions under which streets are to be used, extensions made, etc., an appeal lies in all such cases to the commission, whether a municipal or private plant be involved. It has been the endeavor of the commission to coöperate with the local authorities and the companies along all these lines. The law has been in effect only a little more than a year and a half, but even now there exists a steady increase in the lines of communication between the local managements of private and municipal plants and city and village authorities and the commission. The information which has been collected and compiled by the commission is placed at the disposal of all citizens of the State in the most convenient form. The use of this information by local authorities and citizens has, in a number of instances, obviated the necessity of making complaints. In other instances it has led to changes in the plant equipment and service. Various lines of coöperation between the commission and the municipalities are discussed in a paper before the Wisconsin Municipal League in September, 1908, to which reference may here be made.

"The whole state of Wisconsin was literally streaked and plastered with discrimination on the rates of utilities, and in all the rest of the country where the extent of such discriminations has not yet been determined, as it has been in Wisconsin, it is quite probably that discriminations similar in character and extent likewise exist. All rates, rules and regulations in effect in the state are on file with the commission. And these are the only rates and regulations which can be lawfully enforced and collected. Free and reduced rate service has been absolutely prohibited. Thousands of individuals had been receiving free and reduced rate service, and the eradication of all such rates cannot help but serve as a moral tonic and raise the level of public and private morality within the state as a whole. For thirty-two of the reporting companies, eight out of every one hundred subscribers received free or reduced rate service. The process of equalization of rates had been going on for over a year. Consequently the actual extent of the unjust discriminations was doubtless very much greater at the time of the enactment of the law. In the table on the following pages the numbers given under each of the rates represent the number of subscribers who pay the full rate. Similar discriminations exist in other classes of utilities."

MASSACHUSETTS SYSTEM OF REGULATION.

The state of Massachusetts is the pioneer state in utility regulation, although its laws did not cover all public utilities until a comparatively recent date. Massachusetts, as stated before, has three commissions. They are known as the Railroad Commission, Gas, Water and Electric Commission, and the Highway Commission. The headquarters of each is located in Boston.

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF MASSACHUSETTS.

The Railroad Commission of Massachusetts consists of three members. They are appointed by the Governor for a term of three years; the salary of the chairman of the commission is $6,000.00 annually, and that of the associate members is $5,000.00 annually. It has been the custom for many years in Massachusetts to appoint to this board a lawyer, a man of technical railroad experience, and a business man. This commission has twenty-one employees including engineers, accountants and clerks. The clerical force only is under civil service.

JURISDICTION.

The jurisdiction of the Railroad Commission extends over the steam railroads, street railways, electric railroads, express companies. It has a very limited jurisdiction over steamboat lines operating within the waters of the Commonwealth. This commission had no power, up to the year 1911, to fix rates of the transportation companies of the state. Some authority regarding rates has since been conferred. The jurisdiction of this commission consists chiefly in power to make regulations concerning operation and in supervision over the issues of capital stock and bonds and other financial obligations of these companies. Its power is somewhat analagous to that of the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission although less extensive in some particulars.

EXPENSE.

The annual expense of maintaining the Railroad Commission of Massachusetts amounts to about $85,000.00. This expense is assessed back on the railroads, the street railways and other companies under the supervision of the board so that the taxpayers do not pay the expense of this commission.

UTILITIES ASSESSED FOR EXPENSES OF COMMITTEE.

This assessment is made on a basis of their gross earnings. The commission estimates each year what its annual expenses will be and gets an appropriation for that amount. An assessment is then made on the basis of the gross earnings of each company during the previous year for its pro rata share of the total amount appropriated.

VALUATIONS STOCK AND BOND ISSUES.

This commission is empowered to make valuations of properties and franchises in a case of a merger or consolidation, where there is to be an additional stock or bond issue. The company desiring to make an additional issue of stock or bonds must state to the commission for what purpose the proceeds of the stock and bond issue are to be used. If this appropriation for an increase is approved by the commission an order is issued authorizing the same and stating that the proceeds will be applied to those purposes only.

MISAPPLICATION OF FUNDS.

The Massachusetts law provides that any misapplication of the proceeds realized from the issuance of stocks or bonds, thus authorized, is a criminal offense and makes the directors of the company liable therefor. The commission may, however, revise its previous order and authorize the application of these funds to another purpose.

SENTIMENT FOR MORE EXTENSIVE POWER.

The supervision of the Railroad Commission over the transportation companies of that state seemed to meet with general approval, with the possible limitation that there was a feeling prevalent in Massachusetts, and expressed by the commissioners themselves, that their authority over these companies did not extend far enough, and that the broader principles of the Wisconsin and New York laws, which enable the making and enforcing of orders in regard to rates and service rather than the making merely or recommendations, would bring more effective regulation over this class of public utilities in the state of Massachusetts.

GAS, ELECTRIC AND WATER.

The Gas, Electric and Water Commission of Massachusetts is composed of three members appointed by the Governor of the state for three years.

JURISDICTION.

This commission has greater regulatory powers over utilities coming under its jurisdiction than the Railroad Commission. Gas, electric light and power and water companies are under its jurisdiction. It has the power to establish rates. Also to make and enforce regulations with reference to operation and quality of service to be rendered. It has also the power to determine the amount of stock to be issued and the price at which it is to be sold as well as supervision over bond issues.

Massachusetts has twenty-nine municipally-owned electric lighting plants and three municipally-owned gas plants. Practically all of these plants are being conducted in a very successful manner under state commission regulation. The price of gas has been reduced to 75 cents in some municipalities and that is a flat rate. There is no discrimination in rates recognized or permitted in any way under the Massachusetts commission.

VALUE OF CONTROL OVER STOCK AND BOND ISSUES.

The value of supervision, by the commission, over stock and bond issues is shown by the statement made to your committee by Hon. Morris J. Schaff, member of the Gas, Water and Electric Commission, at Boston:

"Commissioner Schaff—We have one plant where they are desirous of issuing some more stock. We have gas down to a price of 75 cents in one place and the company is desirous of issuing some more stock. Before we grant them leave to do that, we are going to squeeze them down to 70 cents." Vol. 2, P. 275, Committee Evidence.

COMPLAINTS.

Where complaints are lodged with the commission from any part of the commonwealth the commission holds public hearings in that town at which all parties to the controversy are given ample opportunity to be heard. The jurisdiction over stock and bond issues is the same as that exercised by the Railroad Commission.

Twenty persons must join in a complaint to this commission in order to invoke its jurisdiction in matters pertaining to rates or service.

When twenty or more consumers in any city petition this commission protesting as to quality or price of gas or electricity the parties so protesting are accorded a public hearing in that city. At this hearing both parties to the controversy may present their cases personally or by counsel. The commission takes the evidence submitted together with information which it gathers with reference to the financial condition of the utility company and makes its decision as to a change of rates or improved service.

This commission is the only one of the three in Massachusetts which has absolute power to finally determine rates. The other commissions can merely recommend, but, as stated to your committee by members of those bodies, recommendations thus made were usually followed by the companies against whom they were directed.

The Gas, Electric and Water Commission cited an instance to your committee wherein they had raised the rate formerly existing. It was an unusual case where the plant had been destroyed by fire and the company had to rebuild and the commission authorized an increase of rates for the time being.

NO APPEAL TO COURT.

Unlike Wisconsin and New York there is no appeal in Massachusetts to a court to review the findings of this commission. The only method by which a corporation may take the matter into court is under a constitutional provision regarding the confiscation of private property.

The orders of this commission are enforced through the judges of the superior courts of Massachusetts in the same manner as any order made by the court.

VALUATIONS NOT ALWAYS MADE.

Neither this commission nor the other commissions of Massachusetts carry out the idea of making valuations of utility plants to the extent that is done in Wisconsin and New York. They only make valuations in exceptional cases and consequently do not carry as much statistical work as those other states where valuations are first made before any investigation or further hearing is had in a rate or service case.

MASSACHUSETTS COMMISSIONER FAVORS ONE COMMISSION.

Commissioner Schaff, of Massachusetts, in answer to a query put to him by the chairman of your committee stated that he was decidedly of the opinion that where a commission was capable of handling all of the business that was brought before it he believed that it was more desirable to have one commission regulating all public utilities of an entire state (page 300, Vol. 2) Commission Evidence.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—"If a commission was capable of handling all the business that was brought before it, say gas, electric light, and so forth, in a certain state, don't you think that one commission for the entire state would be more desirable than to have a geographical division?"

COMMISSIONER SCHAFF—"Yes, most decidedly, I do." P. 300, Vol. 2.

The above statement coming so decidedly from a man who has served for fifteen years as a member of a commission in a state where the opposite system is in force, namely that of several commissions, is worthy of serious consideration.

The expense of maintaining this commission is assessed against the public utility companies coming under its jurisdiction, as in the case of the railroad commission.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION.

The highways commission of Massachusetts is the third body that is empowered to regulate public utilities. It consists of three members, appointed by the Governor for a term of three years.

JURISDICTION.

Its functions are similar to those of the Highway Commission of Illinois, and, in addition, it is given jurisdiction over telegraph and telephone companies within the State. One of the reasons given for vesting this power in the highway commission was that the work to be done was not sufficient to warrant the creation of a new board. It was, therefore, necessary to vest the authority in some existing body. As the telephone and telegraph companies operate franchises over highways and run their equipment along and upon the highways, it seemed appropriate for the Massachusetts legislature to confer the power to regulate these utilities on the State Highway Commission.

VALUATION AND POWER IN MAKING RATES.

This Highway Commission gives more attention to the matter of valuing utility properties, in determining questions regarding rates or service, than does either of the other Massachusetts commissions. This commission has not the power to establish rates absolutely, but only to recommend a schedule to be adopted by utility companies.

RATES RECOMMENDED BY COMMISSION ADOPTED.

According to the best information obtainable by your committee, the recommendations of the highway commission with reference to telegraph and telephone rates, are generally observed. One of the most important cases decided by this commission was that of the New England Telephone and Telegraph company, in which hearings were held throughout the State of Massachusetts and in investigation carried on which lasted nearly four years, and called for special appropriations by the legislature to meet the expenses thereof, before the commission rendered its final decision. Although these hearings were contested throughout, when the commission made its final recommendations as to rates and service they were accepted and followed by the corporation with very little protest on its part. Vol. 2, P 325-335, Committee Evidence.

Massachusetts has, as a result of the exhaustive investigations cited above, probably one of the best regulated telephone systems in the country. It was the first time that a scientific adjustment of telephone rates had ever been made in the New England states, if not in the entire Union.

EXPENSE.

The annual expense for maintenance of the work of this commission amounts to about $10,500.00. In addition, special appropriations were sometimes made as cited above. The expense of this commission work in exercising its jurisdiction over telegraph and telephone companies is assessed back against the companies in the ratio that their several gross earnings bear to the gross total amount. P. 346, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

The chairman of your committee interrogated the Highway Commission of Massachusetts on the subject of the advisability of one or more commissions.

The acting chairman of the Massachusetts commission replied as follows:

MASSACHUSETTS COMMISSIONER'S VIEWS ON ONE OR MORE COMMISSIONS.

COMMISSIONER KEMP—"My view of it is that one commission could handle all of the work in a state the size of Massachusetts, including the railroads, but in a State the size of Illinois, where you have already the Railroad and Warehouse Commission my suggestion would be that you put all other utilities excepting steam railroads under the jurisdiction of a strictly public utility commission, and allow the Railroad Commission to handle steam railroads alone * * * all other utilities companies, including express companies, should properly come under one purely public utility commission." P. 349, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

This commission has established a uniform system of accounting for the companies under its jurisdiction. Members of this commission when asked as to the objects of a uniform system of accounting which they had prescribed, stated to your committee as follows:

UNIFORM ACCOUNTING.

COMMISSIONER KEMP—"The object of the recommendations (for uniform accounting) was to supply a system as far as possible. * * * There were certain items that from the point of view of an accountant were not properly allocated. To make a cost system that would be of the utmost efficiency was a difficult thing to do until proper allocations were made." P. 352, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

COMMISSIONER BIENLER—"It was partly because of that reason and also in part because it was the scheme generally in use throughout the country, that is, the different telephone companies now keep their books practically on the same basis, so that we may arrive at a comparison, if we would like to have it, from the reports of other states. We can compare all their reports in Massachusetts with the reports of the companies in the other states, which is of considerable value to the commission in making up their data." P. 352, Vol. 2, Committee Evidence.

COMPLAINT.

Complaint in writing in regard to rates or service may be made to this commission by the mayor of a city or the select men of a town or by twenty consumers of a utility product.

There is a limited jurisdiction vested in the State Board of Health of Massachusetts over municipal water plants. This jurisdiction enables this board to exercise a certain limited power of regulation chiefly regarding questions of sanitation in the operation of a plant and is not pertinent to this inquiry.

NO POLITICAL INFLUENCE.

A careful inquiry into the situation by your committee demonstrated the fact that Massachusetts state public utilities commissions are wholly removed from politics and political influence.

Commissioner White of the Railroad Commission informed your committee that there had not been an instance where a man had been removed from the commission, or retired because of politics for more than fifteen years. The Republican commissioners had been reappointed by Democratic governors and Democrat commissioners by Republican governors. The Railroad Commission at the time of your committee visit to Massachusetts consisted of two Republicans and one Democrat, although Massachusetts then had a Democrat governor. The chairman of the Railroad Commission was a Democrat.

The Gas, Water and Electric Commission consisted of two Republicans and one Democrat, the Democrat being Commissioner Schaff, who had been a member of the commission for fifteen years. The chairman of this commission, a Republican, had been a member of this body since it was first created in 1885.

The Highway Commission consisted of three Republicans then holding office under a Democrat governor. So far as your committee could learn, this commission appeared to be wholly outside of political influence. It appeared from information gained from members of that commission, as well as others, that there had been no removals from that board for political causes during the eighteen years of its existence.

Massachusetts is the pioneer state in the Union in public utility regulation. While its laws have been longer in force governing this subject, they do not go quite so far as some other states in granting authority to her respective commissions, for utility regulation. Massachusetts laws seem to be carefully interpreted and fully enforced by her commissions. There is a prevailing sentiment in the city of Boston and throughout the commonwealth that great benefit has been brought to the people through the enactment and enforcement of these laws. There is also a prevalent belief, as your committee ascertained, that the public utility laws of Massachusetts should be amended to such an extent as would confer greater mandatory powers upon her public utility commissions, and make them in this respect more in conformity with the laws of Wisconsin and New York.

REPORT TO GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS.

In a report on the policies and administrative work of the commission regulating public service companies in Massachusetts, submitted to Governor Foss, the following summary is made:

"1. In the regulation of public service corporations in Massachusetts, as now carried on by the several commissions, which at present share the responsibility of this work, there is a conspicuous lack of uniformity. In many instances there is an equally conspicuous lack of efficiency, according to the better standards which have been established in other states. The regulation of railroads, in particular, is inadequate and does not sufficiently safeguard the public interest.

"2. The lack of efficiency we find, is largely the result of restrictions imposed by limited appropriations and authority from the legislature, and the resulting limitations in the organization and the scope of the commissions' work in comparison with the volume of public business which might properly be the subject of their consideration.

"3. We have reached the conclusion that the policy of Massachusetts in this respect is narrow, short-sighted, and not in accordance with modern thought [thought] when compared with the legislative enactments and the organization of public service commissions in other states.

"4. In this report we consider topically the main duties of public service commissions, commenting on the present practice in Massachusetts, making numerous contrasts with the work in other states, and, so far as possible, specific recommendations for future procedure in this commonwealth.

"5. We have also attempted to define the general policy of regulation of this State, as indicated by various public documents from which we have made extensive quotations on the subject-matter of this report. In this connection we have also made numerous comparisons with the established policy in other states, endeavoring to point out the necessary changes in Massachusetts, if this State is to maintain her formerly acknowledged leadership in this important department of government, involving, as it does, broad questions of economic policy and the equitable adjustment of public and private interests.

"6. Finally, we have considered how the necessary reform in Massachusetts may be accomplished, reaching the conclusion that it will be for the best interests of this commonwealth to combine the supervision of public service corporations in the hands of one strong commission, securing in this way a uniformity which, it is expected, cannot be otherwise attained, together with some important economies in organization and administration."

The following excerpt from the same report represents the views of your committee and is presented for earnest consideration:

"We believe that the best modern thought on the problem of regulation of public service companies concedes that the best results are obtained when, in the organization of a regulating commission, judicial functions are separated from administrative functions. This is to say, the sole duty of the commissioners should be to exercise judicial functions in determining questions of fact and conclusions of law, leaving to their subordinates the detail work incidental to enforcement of law, and the commissions' decisions which are, in effect, legislative. But, in whichever way a commission is organized, it is essential that it has at its command, within its own organization, full information of the affairs of the companies under its own control, as follows:

- I. The law and its interpretation.
- II. The construction, maintenance, and operation of properties.
- III. The tariffs and rules made by companies for the regulation of their business.

IV. The administration of finances as represented by the accounts of the companies."

SUMMARY OF LAWS.

A summary of the principal features of the public utility laws of all the states having such laws is attached to this report, marked "Exhibit C."

ILLINOIS.

Your committee spent considerable time studying the conditions in Illinois with reference to public utilities. It visited many cities and towns in the State where meetings were held, at which appeared municipal officials, representatives of utility companies and private citizens. Vol. 3, Committee Evidence.

MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS.

Among the officials of the different municipalities your committee visited in the State there was some sentiment expressed against vesting the power of regulation in a State commission. In most of these cases, however, this sentiment seemed to be based on a fear of a loss of local political power over these companies rather than upon a definite conviction as to the best method of regulating these utilities in the interest of the general public. Vol. 3, Committee Evidence.

OFFICERS OF UTILITIES.

Among the officers and representatives of public utility corporations in Illinois, appearing before your committee, there was a great division of sentiment. Many were strongly opposed to State regulation and preferred to deal with the local authorities. Others were noncommittal and apparently did not know which system ultimately would prove best. A few representatives of these best companies expressed the preference for State regulation. Vol. 3, Committee Evidence.

CITIZENS.

Among those citizens who appeared in their private capacity, before your committee, the sentiment was largely in favor of regulation by State authority. This condition existed even in municipalities where there had been no recent conflict between the utility and the municipality. The only probable exception to this general statement was in the city of Chicago. Vol. 3, Committee Evidence.

Almost without exception outside of the city of Chicago the municipal authorities freely admitted their inability to deal intelligently with questions pertaining to rate-making, valuations of utility properties, application of the principles of depreciation, the compulsion of proper and adequate service, and the many scientific, technical engineering and accounting questions necessary to the proper regulation of public service corporations.

COMPLAINTS.

Many complaints were made to your committee as to character of service and as to rates, and in some instances, complaints were made by public utility owners that the rates they were permitted to charge were not sufficient to provide a fair earning on their investment.

To set forth all of these complaints would unnecessarily encumber this report, as they may be read in detail, by referring to Volume 3 of your committee's evidence herewith submitted.

PRESENT METHOD UNJUST.

One case in particular, however, we would cite as showing the need for an intelligent and scientific method for establishing rates and regulating service.

The Cairo Water Company rates were reduced 30 per cent in January, 1910, by the city council. The company claimed it was operating at a loss. No expert investigation had then been made and no one could accurately tell whether a great injustice had been done this utility company. The matter had not then been taken into court. When the representatives of this utility company appeared before your committee the following testimony was adduced showing the manner in which these rates had been established.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—Let me ask you what investigation did the common council make for the purpose of ascertaining the cost of furnishing water to citizens of Cairo?

MR. THOS. W. GANNON (General Manager Cairo Water Co.)—They employed a man named Mr. Gallagher to get the rates from the different cities and compile them and make a statement of the rates, of the different cities. That was brought before a committee and that committee was in session about three months and the company asked for a hearing and it was never granted. The committee sent out notices to consumers to send in the amount of their present rate.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—You say the company was denied the opportunity of a hearing before the council?

MR. GANNON—Yes, before the committee.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—Did you tender and offer the testimony of the witnesses to the council?

MR. GANNON—We were there personally and could not get before the committee. We could not go before the council and we tried three months to have a hearing and we never could get a hearing before the committee.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—Who was this man Gallagher?

MR. GANNON—He was a man in the ice business, the Stillwater Ice Company.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—Had he ever had any experience in the operation and control of water companies?

MR. GANNON—No, sir; he never had in the world.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—Did they take any further testimony upon this question?

MR. GANNON—No, sir; they did not. P. 45-46, Vol. 3, Committee Evidence.

As to the method adopted in determining these rates by the city council, a man who was a member of that body and a member of the committee which handled that particular subject, testified as follows:

REPRESENTATIVE GORMAN—What was the basis of your calculation on the figures that you arrived at as a basis of charges?

FRANK C. GANNON (Member City Council)—Their present franchise called for the average rate of five cities named in the franchise, but I can not name them, and we used them as a basis.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—That is not very clear; do you mean the original franchise?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—Yes, sir.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—When was that granted?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—In 1885, I believe.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—And the basis of rates provided for in the original franchise, was that the rate provided for in the five cities?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—The average of those five cities.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—You did that regardless of present conditions in the city of Cairo?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—We took the average price regardless. (The cities referred to are Kansas City, St. Louis, Louisville, Cincinnati and Nashville.)

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—Did you do it regardless of whether or not this would yield any return at all upon the capital invested?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—We were unable to ascertain whether it would or not.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—Did you ask the company to submit testimony to you upon the question as to whether or not they would operate at a loss or profit, under the circumstances?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—I don't think we did.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—You didn't consider the question of the possibility of its driving the company into bankruptcy?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—No.

The condition cited above is characteristic of the antiquated and wholly unjust method employed by many Illinois municipalities today. It needs no further argument to discredit it. Even the man who revealed this condition to your committee repudiated the system, as the following will show.

SENATOR DENVIR—I would like to ask this question. The question of home rule is a great proposition. The city council would not like to have the power of regulating utilities in Cairo taken away from them. You would not want to have the utilities taken away?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—Yes, I would.

CHAIRMAN DAILEY—I understand, from your general knowledge of this public utility matter, that you would consider a State Commission that made a business of the investigation of these questions, assisted by its staff of engineers and experts, would be better qualified to do justice than an ordinary common council in the cities of the State?

MEMBER CITY COUNCIL—Yes, sir; I would favor that kind of a law. Page 74-75, Vol. 3, Committee Evidence.

CHICAGO.

Most of the men representing public utilities in Chicago who appeared before your committee were in favor of leaving the matter with the local authorities.

Among the representatives of those companies the following expression of sentiment was obtained:

UTILITY OFFICIALS.

General counsel for Chicago Telephone Company was personally opposed to State regulation, but admitted the Wisconsin Commission had accomplished much good.

Page 75-130, Vol. 5, Committee Evidence.

General counsel for the People's Gas Light and Coke Company was opposed to State regulation. He believed the present system with final recourse to the courts was the best method.

Page 194-240, Vol. 5, Committee Evidence.

General counsel of the Commonwealth Edison Co. was non-committal, but inclined to favor some system of commission regulation.

Page 240-277, Vol. 5, Committee Evidence.

The president of the Chicago City Railway Co. favored local registration, although admitting that if a public utility commission was created with a personnel similar to the Wisconsin Commission he thought "perhaps there might be fewer appeals to the courts and less delay in reaching decisions in matter of rates."

LABOR.

Labor organizations showed an interest in this subject. A representative of the Association of Stationary Engineers informed your committee that his organization had spent considerable time and some money on the study and investigation of this subject, particularly in the investigation of discriminations in charges. He declared the association was in favor of one commission for the entire State.

Page 62-63, Vol. 5, Committee Evidence.

The Chicago Federation of Labor had a representative at some of the meetings, but its attitude on the question was not officially stated.

Members of the Chicago City Council and other city officials, appearing before your committee, were generally opposed to a State Commission and favored retaining control in the present local authorities.

CITY COUNCIL AND OFFICIALS.

The individual views of those aldermen and officials may be ascertained by referring to the testimony of:

Alderman Cullerton, page 132-152, vol. 5.

Alderman Mayer, page 183-191, vol. 5.

Alderman Bauler, page 366-428-443, vol. 5.

Alderman Burns, page 522-526, vol. 5.

M. C. Buckley, Traction Expert, page 501-508, vol. 5.

Hon. Carter H. Harrison, Mayor, page 445-481, vol. 5.

They contended that the recent improvements in service of some of the utilities, notably transportation, demonstrated the fact that city officials, with the aid of experts, could handle these questions more satisfactorily and would be more responsive to local sentiment.

The line of demarkation between local sentiment and political influence may be difficult to define.

SEVENTY CENT GAS LEAGUE.

An organization known as the "Seventy Cent Gas League" was created in Chicago just prior to a recent municipal campaign. Seventy cent gas was made a campaign slogan and efforts made to secure pledges to such a program. Shortly after the election the city council passed a seventy cent gas ordinance. An expert, Mr. Hagenah, of Wisconsin, with a corps of assistance [assistants] and accountants, employed by a preceding administration, had spent many months investigating this subject. He recommended in his report a price of 77 cents for gas.

EXPERT REPORT IGNORED.

But there had been an agitation for 70-cent gas and, regardless of the report of this expert, the city council passed the 70-cent ordinance, apparently in response to local public sentiment.

Public sentiment in that instance was represented by a so-called "League" started by four or five men, in a certain section of the city, wholly in the interest of a then pending local campaign, and none of the men instigating this movement, so far as your committee could learn, was familiar with the manufacture and distribution of gas or had ever made any investigation or inquiry into the subject. The 70-cent ordinance is now in litigation in the courts.

MAYOR CARTER H. HARRISON.

Mayor Carter H. Harrison stated to your committee that he was opposed to State regulation of the utilities of Chicago; that he believed it to be a matter which the local authorities could and should handle. He expressed the opinion that "The entire question of dealing with public utilities is rather in a formative period and we are rapidly drifting toward the point where we can make up our minds with full information as to the best method of handling the matter."

Page 447-481, Vol. 4, Committee Evidence.

Ex-Alderman W. J. Pringle, who for several years was a member of the committee in the city council which dealt with public utility regulation, was strongly in favor of one State Commission. He did not believe the questions involved were purely of a local nature, but were of interest to the environs of the city and to the general public in the State as well. He also believed that the expense of a public utility commission should be borne by the State and not by the utility regulated.

Page 279-341, Vol. 5, Committee Evidence.

CHICAGO'S METHOD OF REGULATION DISADVANTAGEOUS.

It is apparent that Chicago has been constantly agitated by disputes of this character, yet this controversy and litigation has brought comparatively little relief to its citizens, speaking generally. While Chicago has controlled matters of this character as well as, and in many instances better than some of the larger cities in the country, yet the cost to the community has been fearful. It is no reflection upon the integrity of the officials supervising public utilities to ask for a comparison of the abilities and results accomplished by them with the abilities and results accomplished by such men as Maltbie and Stevens of the New York commissions, and Meyer, Erickson and Hagenah of the Wisconsin commission and Eshelman of the California commission.

It cannot be said that the aldermen of Chicago possess the same mental grasp, the same freedom from political influences as the members of the various state public service commissions. Who for a moment would compare the well equipped departments, the engineers, statisticians, accountants and economists of the New York, Massachusetts and Wisconsin commissions with the experts in charge of the various utilities in Chicago? While some representatives of public utilities in Chicago had words of praise for the Chicago experts, the most casual observation demonstrated to the committee that no matter how well meaning and honest these experts might be, they were lacking in the skill, technical equipment and fundamental knowledge required to cope with the representatives of utility companies. The citizens of Chicago are almost without redress in securing relief against utility companies, where they have just grounds for complaint. Complaints are made to the alderman of a particular ward. The alderman in turn brings these complaints before the proper committee. The committee beseech the utility company to redress these grievances, thus leaving those making complaints practically at the mercy of the utility companies. The citizens of Chicago are not receiving the same protection as the citizens of the cities in the states of New York, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and the states having public service commissions. The citizens of Chicago can obtain adequate relief only through the medium of a commission with facilities, information, instrumentalities and agencies equal in efficiency to those of the utility corporations. Without such equipment the citizens of Chicago will ever be at a disadvantage in dealing with these corporations.

In the excellent work on regulation on Municipal Utilities by Clyde Lyndon King, the following quotation on page 379 is applicable:

"The attempt to regulate million-dollar corporations through men of wee calibre is but another way of saying that the million-dollar corporations may do the regulating. The highly paid, well-fed corporate expert must be met with a highly paid, highly equipped civic expert. The commissioners themselves need not be technical experts, but they must be sufficiently trained to supervise the most technical of experts. My [By] this method the community can protect itself against the most cunning and greedy of its serving concerns."

JUDGE MCPHERSON ON NECESSITY OF REGULATION.

The argument contained in the opinion of Judge McPherson in the case of Des Moines Water Co. vs. Des Moines, Vol. 192, Federal Reporter 193, at pages 194 and 195, is particularly appropriate to conditions existing in Illinois cities and especially in Chicago. In the course of his opinion, Judge McPherson says:

"This case illustrates the evils in connection with the fixing of rates by municipalities to govern public utility corporations. Neither party is properly chargeable with any dereliction; and yet the fact remains that by the time this case is decided by an Appellate Court at least four years will have elapsed from the passage of the ordinances until the matter is put at rest by the courts.

"It is utterly impossible for a court to hear all cases similar to this, which require from one to three months to hear the evidence, after the issues are formed. If this court were to do nothing else, it could not personally hear all such cases. * * * *

"The present expensive chaos should be brought to an end. It is known by all informed men that city councils necessarily adopt rates with but little or no investigations as to what rates ought to be fixed. The result is that we have ordinances fixing rates based upon but little intelligent effort for the ascertainment of the facts. Some of the states, like New York, Massachusetts and Wisconsin, have state commissions of competent men, who give public hearings, and who do nothing behind doors, nor in secrecy; a commission with no member interested as a taxpayer of the city and with no member subject to influences other than the ascertainment of the truth and the facts. Rates are thus fixed with which most fair-minded people are ready to acquiesce. It is strange that we have no such legislation, and no such commissions in Iowa."

RECURRING QUESTIONS OF RATE AND SERVICE.

There still remain many unsettled questions with reference to these various companies and there still remains much improvement of service to be sought. The question concerning rates and character of service are never permanently settled. They are naturally recurring as the years advance, population increases, new methods of operation and improvements in machinery are devised, and extension of franchise rights are sought by the utility companies.

Chicago has recognized the importance of expert information and scientific investigation as an aid to the common council in rate making. But it has refused to adopt the report of its own expert. The Chicago City Council is probably composed of a better class of men than is usually found in large cities. But they demonstrated one of the weak points in the theory of exclusive local rule and regulation of utilities when they passed a 70-cent gas ordinance in response to local sentiment, against the recommendation of the city's own expert.

REDRESS BY LITIGATION.

The effort of the city of Chicago as well as many other cities of the State is to regulate rates and services of utility companies by law suit. The purpose of litigation is merely to redress wrongs and not to afford a system of regulation. The method of thus supervising utilities is unscientific, expensive, vexatious and cumbersome. It does not afford the individual citizen the opportunity of redress for wrong suffered by him. The expense attendant upon securing redress on the part of the individual for inadequate services or extortionate rates amounts to a denial of justice. The facility with which these matters are disposed of by State commission is evidenced by the fact that the New York commission tests over one thousand gas meters in a single day.

The termination of such litigation between municipalities and utility companies merely affords temporary relief. The principle of the permanent and efficient service and rate making as applied to a utility company is not contemplated by decisions of courts and is not permanently secured even though the municipality is successful in such litigation.

The courts are lacking in power and also in the necessary training and information to establish a constructive policy for the proper and permanent regulation of utility companies.

In Chicago there has been almost constant litigation between the city and utilities, resulting in heavy burdens of taxation being placed upon its citizens and an extraordinary expense being incurred by utility companies, which expenses are borne in the first instance by the public through the medium of taxation and in the second instance by the patrons of utility companies either in diminished service or increased rates. The economic waste thus occasioned has been staggering. The present method of regulation as applied to the city of Chicago and the State of Illinois is disastrous alike to the public, to the utility companies and their patrons.

HOME RULE.

The relation of the city to the State is somewhat analogous to the relationship existing between the State and Federal Government, except that the State retains all power not ceded to the Federal Government, and the cities have only such powers as are expressly conferred upon them by the statutes of the State. Upon the State devolves the duty of protecting its citizenship, and while matters solely concerning the city may be absolutely left to local regulation, yet, where the scope or sphere of influence of any agency, moral, financial, or in any manner extends beyond the limits of a municipality, the State should, under the exercise of its police power, exercise such supervisory control as will inure to the benefit of the State as a whole.

The authority of the State in the conservation of the public good should not yield to mere phrases or irrelevant axioms. The incitation of the doctrine of "home rule" should not preclude the sovereign state from the exercise of rightful authority. If the intrusion of those interested in public service corporations into the domain of municipal and State politics is patent, the State ought to and should, by appropriate action, invoke its authority to avert such malign influence. If municipalities are incapable of protecting their citizens for any reason from unjust exactions of public service corporations, it is the duty of the State to protect them in such manner as it deems right and proper.

Conversely, if the citizens of any municipality, through their representatives, take such action as will destroy or confiscate public utility investments, it is likewise the duty of the State to assert its paramount authority to the end that justice may be accorded to citizens interested in such concerns, whether their interests be large or small.

It is the well settled policy of this and all states to provide a state system of education, leaving details to local authorities. The same considerations should apply to public utilities. This principle is fully recognized in the bill accompanying this report.

So, likewise, the matter of bank regulation is considered not a proper matter for municipal control, but should in the interests of the general public, under the police power of the State, be subject to State control.

The recent agitation in the city of Chicago for State supervision of private banks, notwithstanding the fact that Chicago possesses plenary authority in the matter of such regulation, illustrates the preference of the citizens of Chicago to State as opposed to local control regarding private banks. The euphonious expression of "home rule" has not been invoked in the city of Chicago as an argument against the rigid control of purely local Chicago private banks by the State, nor in [is] the consent of Chicago demanded as a condition precedent to such legislation.

Matters pertaining to the supervision of health, whether applied to Cairo or Chicago, are supervised by the State authorities. Matters pertaining to insurance, and the regulation of the professions of law, dentistry, pharmacy, medicine, architects and certified public accountants, and the control of occupations, such as barbers, etc., are all considered proper subjects of State control. The care of the insane and defectives have, in the evolution of affairs, been removed from local to the sphere of State control.

It is unnecessary to multiply instances to illustrate this doctrine. Not only is it established by the settled policy of this State, but its application has been extended to the regulation of public utility companies by practically all the progressive states of the Union.

(A) RAILROADS, TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE.

The operation of these utilities cannot be said to be proper subjects of municipal control. It would be retrogressive to extend to municipalities supervision over railroads.

Railroads, telegraph and telephone companies are in reality engaged in interstate business and should be controlled by federal authority, acting in conjunction with the State authority.

The telephone and telegraph companies have outgrown the territorial limits of cities, and counties. The city of Chicago should be precluded from such regulation of telephone companies as might inflict an unjust burden upon the smaller cities of the State. These utilities are in no sense local and no city in the State should have the right or power, either directly or indirectly, to place the burden of increased rates or diminished service upon another locality. Each community should receive equitable treatment without bearing the burdens of other communities. In the very nature of things the telephone and telegraph companies of Illinois should be regulated by State and not municipal authority.

The principle, as applied not only to telephone but to other utilities, is stated with such perfect accuracy by the Honorable John M. Eshleman, President of the Railroad Commission of California, that his language on this matter is quoted in extenso.

"In the fixing of rates, a knowledge of the fair value of the property which is properly attributable to the portion of the rate bearing public for which rates are desired to be made must be known, and likewise the amount of operating and other expenses incident to the furnishing of the utility must be considered. In by far the majority of the cases where a utility does business in two or more municipalities, or in one municipality and outlying unincorporated territory, it is practically impossible to determine the proper value of the property of the utility within the city which is necessary to its service without the city, and the same may be said for the distribution of the operating expenses and revenue. How difficult it is to determine what portion of a telephone line, for example, serving municipal territory and territory without, shall be apportioned to the city, and what portion to the unincorporated territory, can only be realized by the person who has tried to perform the operation. Someone may think, superficially, that the division should be in proportion to the number of miles or feet of line within or without the municipality, but such person is overlooking the fact that all of the line within the municipality is necessary for the service without the municipality, and the portion of the line outside the municipality is also necessary for all service from points without to points within the municipality. The same may be said for income and operating expenses. The same practical difficulty suggested here is presented by every aspect of regulation where we have divided authority such as exists in this State. The only possibility of arriving at a near approximation of correct results is by taking all or a sufficiently large portion of a utility business, preferably the former. The exchange apparatus of a telephone company is necessary to its toll business, and vice versa."

(B) ELECTRIC SUPPLY.

The increased uses of generating plants and the increased territory over which electricity is generated has caused this agency no longer to be properly considered of a purely municipal character.

The development and extension electric companies in Illinois, now reaching the smallest hamlets, covering the northern part of the State as in a net work, extending from Chicago, reaching down into the State and gradually approaching the power plant at Keokuk on the Mississippi River, demonstrate most clearly that the agency of electric supply has evolved from purely local to State limits.

We have an instance in our own State of one organization dominated by a master mind which will, in the course of time, furnish electric current for a large number of cities in the State and a large part of the State. It is not too much to say that the companies thus controlled will, in the course of time, absorb a greater portion of the smaller companies of the State and that they need have no fear of competition on the part of municipalities; that they will be able to distribute electric current cheaper than it can be generated by any of the municipalities of the State; and that even municipal ownership will not be a proper solution of this question. The necessity of State control of such organizations is so obvious as to require no argument. The only authority competent to control such utilities is the State.

The character of the development of electricity is referred to in an address by Mr. C. P. Steinmetz, printed in the Electric World of November 2, 1912. He discusses the question of the centralization of the manufacture of electricity and assigns as a reason therefor what is termed the "diversity factor" by which a large central plant can develop so many kinds of uses as to bring the load at any one moment of time much nearer the peak load than in the case of a smaller lighting plant.

On this point Mr. Steinmetz says:

"Evidently the territory served will increase in size. Some may be counties, some parts of states, and some the small states, and so on. Big cities have an advantage in this respect, of course, because they have as a nucleus their own large demand. The outcome must be the replacement of village and small city generating plants by the sub-stations of big cities. Old machinery will thus be replaced by modern types. These big generating systems will tend to approach one another, then will come, no doubt, an era [era] of coöperation and it is not too much to expect a network of energy-transmission wires covering the country just as the railroads do today. Energy will be transmitted in the one cause as freight is transmitted in the other. The right of condemnation which is given to railroads should be given to the owners of great transmission lines also, and the recalcitrant village or small city should not stand in the way of a great sectional or even national development. But before this privilege of condemning the statute books some laws in relation to coöperation and the relation of utilities corresponding with the spirit of the twentieth century instead of the present statutory mixture inherited in some respects from the time of Alfred the Great. Responsibility must come with authority in the case of the transmission systems. The latter should have power given to them but should not be allowed to abuse this power.

"Generally where freight is high and the grade of coal poor it ought to pay to use the coal to make electricity at the coal mine, the energy then being transmitted electrically. However, where the coal is of high grade and, say, water transportation is available it will, undoubtedly, be found cheaper to ship the actual coal."

(C) MANUFACTURED GAS.

The centralized plant development as pertains to manufactured gas, the same principle does not apply to the same extent as to electricity. The question of serving the suburbs from gas plants in large municipalities demonstrates that the rights of the people in the suburbs should be subserved with reference to franchises, rate regulation and character of service.

The judgment of the President of the California Railroad Commission upon the principles involved in this question is stated as follows:

"Referring again to the moral aspect of the question, even a superficial view will show that the city which regulates but a part of a utility has it in its power so to act as to affect other territory. Under similar circumstances the rate in a city should be the same as the rate without the city, or the rate in one city should be the same as the rate in another, and the standard of efficiency should likewise be the same. Therefore in every instance where a city authority fixes rates without adequately considering the entire business of the utility, on the hit or miss plan, which has heretofore been an absolute necessity in most cities by reason of the facts to which I have already referred, such city may, and often does, by chance fix a rate which is not just to the outlying territory, and which will yield an amount less than should be yielded for the service, thereby decreasing the revenue of the utility, and this decrease will affect the entire revenue, and when the larger authority considers the business of the utility operating within this city for rate-fixing purposes, in outside territory, it will be presented with a revenue which will be less than it should be by reason of the too low rate within the city, and thereby, if it is just to the utility, it must fix a rate which is on the average too high for the outlying territory. Thus the very inability of the municipality adequately to determine the questions of rates and service in many cases works an injustice to other consumers of the utility, and until these cities are prepared to deal with this question as its importance demands, they should not in justice desire to deal with it at all. The careless attitude of the cities, particularly the smaller, and I have urged that some of the larger ones are sometimes likewise careless, necessitates in many instances either an injustice to consumers outside the cities or upon the utilities themselves, and when we consider also the attitude of the city authorities, very few in number, I am glad to say, who believe that their city should get all it can out of a utility, even at the expense of other consumers, we have plainly presented to us a moral reason, in addition to the very cogent practical reason, against dual regulation."

(D) WATER SUPPLY.

The pollution of the supply of water by great cities affecting the health and sanitation of other communities in many instances demonstrates the necessity of some control other than mere municipal control. No great city can supply itself with water, or provide for sanitation without invading other local jurisdictions.

The application of the doctrine of "home rule" to larger cities without redress from State authority would subject smaller communities at the mercy of larger communities. These difficulties between localities should be arbitrated by the State.

(E) ELECTRIC INTERURBAN RAILWAYS.

While the supervision of electric interurban railways is vested in the Railroad and Warehouse Commission and the legislation recommended by your committee contemplates the continuance of that authority, over such utilities, yet the operation of electric interurbans exhibits a striking example that they should not be subject to local regulation.

DIFFICULTY OF LOCAL CONTROL.

As an illustration of the difficulties confronting local authorities who seek to regulate rates or service, without expert aid, we would cite the following extract from an address by the chairman of the Wisconsin commission, delivered before the Illinois Gas Association on March 16, 1911, showing the exhaustive method employed, under State Commission regulation, to establish rates on a scientific and equitable basis:

INFORMATION NECESSARY FOR WORKING OUT A SCHEDULE OF RATES FOR ELECTRIC UTILITIES.

II. Valuation of Plant.

1. Book value.
2. Original cost.
3. Additions of extensions since plant was first built by years.
4. Cost of reproduction new.
5. Present value.
6. Going value.
7. Working capital.
8. Details of investment.
A separation of investments into land buildings, power plant equipment, distribution system, etc. Statement of equipment-inventory.
9. Apportionment of investment.
Where plant is a combined water and electric plant, gas and electrics, etc., the investment should be apportioned between the several utilities according to actual use where this is feasible or on some reasonable basis.
Where street lighting, commercial lighting, and commercial power or other classes are served, an apportionment of the investment between these classes is necessary.
10. Unit cost of investment.
For purposes of comparison, analysis and as a basis for analyzing expenses, a number of unit costs of investment should be obtained, as illustrated below. Power plant equipment kw. of generator capacity consumer.
Distribution system per mile of main, per consumer. Services per consumer, etc.
11. Percentage distribution of investment.
Proportion of total plant investment represented in land, buildings, power plant, equipment, distribution, system, etc.

12. Physical Data.
 - No. of boilers and rated capacity—h. p.
 - No. of engines, turbines, water wheels, etc., and rated capacity of each in kws.
 - No. of generators and capacity of each, kws.
 - Miles of wire—different systems of circuits.
 - No. of services and meters, etc.
- III. Consumer Data and Operating Statistics.
 1. Connected load.
 - (a) Total.
 - (b) Of each class of service.
 2. Maximum demand.
 - (a) Peak load on station.
 - (b) Demand of each class of consumers or branch of service, and time of such demand.
 3. Output.
 - (a) Current generated.

 - (b) Current sold.
 - Total.
 - For each class.
 4. Detailed consumer data.
 - (a) Current sold to, and installation of each consumer for year.
- IV. Earnings and Expenses.
 1. Statements of earnings and operating expenses each year from date of installation.
 2. Indebtedness and interest rates.
 3. Stock issues and dividends paid.
 4. Unit costs.

This should show the unit costs of operation each year per kw. hr. output. Principal items, such as fuel, labor and repairs should be computed on basis of unit cost per unit generated, per kw., generator capacity, per consumer, per meter, per mile of wire, etc.

Percentage distribution of operating expenses. Proportion of total operating expenses each year which is represented in generation, distribution, consumption, commercial, general, and undistributed expenses and taxes.
 6. Normal year.

The year selected as that whose expenses shall be the basis of the rates must be a normal year. This may be determined by comparison of total cost and unit costs of several items with the same items for other years. Curves showing the variations of the chief items of expense year by year may be constructed.
 7. Depreciation.
 - (a) "Straight lines" basis.
 - (b) "Sinking fund" basis.
 - (c) Per cent of total property.
 8. Reasonable return.
 - (a) Interest earned.
 - (b) Local conditions as affecting rates of return to be allowed.
 - (c) Condition of plant.
 - (d) Service.
 - (e) Probable future growth of utility.
 - (f) Competition.

RESULTS OF OPERATION OF UTILITY LAWS.

The methods employed by the states which lead in the subject of public utility regulation are in the main quite similar. The chief point of difference which they have is in the question of jurisdiction.

SUMMARY.

Taken as an entirety, however, the results sought and accomplished by each state, excepting California, is the same, whether one, two or three commissions are employed, namely, the control and regulation of all public utility companies operating within each state. And in the case of each of the states discussed in this report, whether it be one commission acting for the entire state, or a commission limited to subject matter, or a commission along geographical lines, having authority over the utilities of a single city, the method by which they are created and vested with power is identical. Each is a state commission, created by state legislative enactment, vested with plenary power, and the members of each commission are appointed by, and responsible to their respective state governments.

In the states of Massachusetts, New York and Wisconsin these are some of the most important results of the operation of Public Utility laws:

First—The removal of the control of public utilities from the domain of politics.

Second—Funds have been eliminated. The fact that a citizen can redress his grievance before an impartial and competent tribunal, causes him to accept the decision of the commission with confidence in its integrity and fairness. When controversies arise between utility companies and the municipality both sides are frequently unjust, prejudiced and blinded.

Third—The administration of these laws on the high plane of justice and fair dealing to both sides has served as a moral tonic.

Fourth—These laws have revolutionized business methods. Many of the utilities did not formerly operate in a business like manner. These companies have been advised, assisted and educated as to the best methods, appliances and the adoption of business like methods.

Fifth—Public utility investments have not been considered of stable character, but in these states having control of public utilities the securities of utility companies are considered of the highest order. The rigid control of stock and bond issues has much to do with this. The consumer is protected on one hand from over charges and unjust discrimination, on the other hand, the investor is protected from unreasonable and unjust regulation and control.

ANALYSIS OF LAWS OF OTHER STATES.

In analyzing the public utility laws and the workings of the commissions in the different states we found that there were certain features emphasized alike in the systems adopted in each of the states. For instance, the laws of Wisconsin, New York and Massachusetts, as well as those of other states, recognize the following as essential features of public utility regulation:

- I. UNIFORM SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTING.
- II. SUPERVISION OF CAPITALIZATION AND FINANCIAL OBLIGATIONS.
- III. AUTHORITY TO INVESTIGATE UTILITIES BY EXPERT AID.
- IV. JURISDICTION OVER UTILITIES THAT WILL ENABLE THE MAKING AND ENFORCEMENT OF REGULATIONS CONCERNING THEIR MANAGEMENT AND CHARGES FOR SERVICE.

UNIFORM ACCOUNTING.

A uniform system of accounting simply means uniformly compiled information of earnings properly credited and expenses properly charged from which can be readily obtained the knowledge of the net cost of operating utilities. This knowledge is essential in arriving at an intelligent decision regarding the rates to be charged, extension of service, improvement of equipment, and all questions relating to the bond issues or other financial obligations to be issued by the company. To the municipally owned plants this means the enforced use of a uniform bookkeeping system, which expert inquiry has shown to be the best method of recording this business for the municipality, making it readily ascertainable, whether the utility has operated within the budget allowance, if one be made, and showing the necessity of retrenchment and saving.

To the privately owned plants the information from a uniform system of accounting is quite essential in substantiating arguments either for or against an extension of service or lower rates. It gives the investor a detailed, accurate financial statement, without any of the embellishments or concealment of facts often found in a published report to stockholders. To a commission empowered to regulate utilities, to secure adequate service, reasonable rates and to supervise the issuance of stocks and bonds, the information of a uniform accounting system is indispensable.

A uniform accounting system means absolute publicity of the financial condition of public utility companies, whether they be privately owned or municipally owned plants, and this publicity is one of the most effective aids to State regulation.

SUPERVISION OF STOCK AND BOND ISSUES.

Supervision over the issue of capital stock and bonds is made one of the principal features of the Wisconsin, New York and Massachusetts laws, and has been copied from them by other states which have adopted public utility regulation laws. With this authority the commission can prevent over-capitalization, thus protecting the investor and making it easier to estimate a fair anticipated earning power for the company in establishing rates and providing for extension of service. Supervision of bond issues gives the commission power to control the mortgaging of a plant and prevent its being done except in emergencies where an extension of service demands it and the financial condition of the company will permit of its being done.

AUTHORITY TO INVESTIGATE.

Authority to investigate the affairs of the utilities by the aid of engineers and accountants, carries with it the power to make an accurate physical examination of the property, to determine its present value and the depreciated or appreciated values, and to examine, in detail, the management and operation of the plant.

POWER TO MAKE AND ENFORCE REGULATIONS.

Jurisdiction over utilities enabling the commission to make and enforce regulations concerning rates and service is the final object and the conclusion of a public utility law. It is the authority to accomplish regulation, in the interest of the general public, for which the three preceding subjects are necessary, but only preliminary, aids.

ARGUMENTS FOR STATE REGULATION.

The chief arguments in favor of regulation are: To secure the best possible service to the public for the most reasonable price consistent with a fair earning on the invested capital and with due provisions for maintenance, depreciation and renewal of the property; the taking of public utilities out of local politics as far as possible so that the character of service or price of the commodity sold shall not be determined as the result of a political campaign by local officials incompetent, or without the means or authority intelligently to investigate thoroughly the cost and manner of production and distribution and the valuation of utility plants and kindred questions, and, to install, instead, a system whereby an expert commission, created and authorized by the State, shall investigate and regulate these affairs, with full power conferred on it by the State, to determine the capitalization and the amount of bond issues, to investigate and pass upon as experts the character of service rendered, to make valuations and to determine the earning power of the property, to establish a uniform system of accounting and to hear and determine all complaints as to service and rates.

Regulated public utilities mean:

Better service for the people.

Cheaper service for the people.

No watered stock or over-capitalization.

Taking public service companies and their business out of local politics.

Conserving the interest of the investor.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

After an exhausted inquiry on this subject in Illinois and in other states of the Union your committee is firmly convinced that State regulation of public utilities would bring the best service to the citizens of Illinois.

A majority of your committee believes that there should be but one commission for the entire State, exercising jurisdiction over all utilities enumerated in the bill presented herewith.

Your committee is strongly opposed to two commissions for the reasons heretofore assigned and for the further reason that two commissions would inevitably lead to conflict of authority. Single utilities companies ascertaining beyond the limits of a municipality would in all probability be subject to the conflicting orders and policies of two commissions. Two commissions would make uncertain the decisions of the commissions, since in rendering opinions upon same subjects, they would frequently disagree or pursue different policies, and therefore, like opinions of the appellate courts of this State, their findings would not serve as precedents, but would lead to constant embarrassment of both municipalities and public service corporations. It would be as logical to establish two Railroad and Warehouse Commissions, two Boards of Administration, or two taxing bodies for the State of Illinois, or two Interstate Commerce Commissions for the Nation. The establishment of two commissions for the State would be a serious error.

PRINCIPLE OF PERMITTING CITIES TO CONFER UPON OR WITHDRAW POWER FROM COMMISSION NOT RECOMMENDED.

The California law permits municipalities to confer upon, or, after it has been conferred, to withdraw power from the State Commission, ad libitum. This provision of the California law is uniform in that it applies to all municipalities of the state, regardless of size. This feature of the California law is experimental. The excerpts, heretofore given from an address of the president of the California Commission, indicate that this division of authority does not meet with his approval.

Under such a system of regulation it is likely that a condition of chaos will arise. Prudence should dictate that such a provision, repugnant to efficient regulation, should not be incorporated in the proposed Illinois law. The suggestion has been made, and has been strongly advocated, that all utilities in Illinois cities under a certain population should be regulated compulsorily by a State Commission; and that all utilities in cities above such certain population should be regulated either by the city or by the State Commission as may be determined by the electors of such city—the right to confer upon or withdraw power from the State Commission to be optional with such municipalities.

Under such a form of regulation single interurban utilities, such as gas, electric light and water companies, supplying suburban communities and adjoining municipalities, could be subjected to the regulation of the State Commission and various cities acting independently of the State Commission. This would, of necessity, destroy all uniformity of regulation, and tend to defeat the very purposes for which such legislation is proposed. The larger cities of the State contain plants for supplying outlying territory and municipalities with public utility commodities. This condition applies not only to Chicago, but in a lesser degree to Peoria, Springfield and the other large cities of the State. If these larger cities of the State do not accept the authority of the State Commission, and the smaller communities supplied therefrom are compelled to accept State regulation by a mandatory law, or do so under permissive authority of law, the smaller communities will be placed entirely at the mercy of the larger cities. By rate restrictions and other means of regulation of the larger cities, decreasing the earning power of utility companies, burdens in the form of excessive rates or diminished service, or both, will be imposed upon the smaller communities of the State. Thus, in an effort to secure local control over utilities serving different localities, the right of invasion of outside territory and the rights of citizens therein will be established by the Legislature. The remarks of the president of the California Commission upon this question are applicable here: "If the inhabitants of a city were wholly devoid of selfishness and also omniscient, then those people who are so unfortunate as to live outside the boundaries of such city might have no fear that any act performed by the governmental authority of such city would be detrimental to the interest of any one. But I have a suspicion that the same selfishness which we find in the individual permeates aggregations of individuals, and that a city may sometimes do those things within its boundaries which, although advantageous to its inhabitants, are detrimental to others. We have heard much in our history of taxation without representation. Regulation by a city which directly or indirectly serves to regulate the affairs of others without the city is as to these others regulation—which is a form of taxation—without representation, and has the same injustice inherent therein as taxation without representation. Therefore we must be very slow to make up our minds that a city should have the right to regulate the affairs of a utility operating within the city, but likewise serving its commodity to other sections, until it appear that the action of such city cannot work injustice to the other patrons of the utility to be regulated."

The smaller municipalities of the State would, by basing their rights with reference to public utility regulation solely upon the question of population, be deprived of privileges conferred upon the larger cities of the State. The rights of patrons of public utilities, whether residents of large or small cities, are identical; the right of a citizen to the cheapest and best service from a public utility company, compatible with a fair return to the investor, should not be made to depend upon the size of the city where he lives, or whether he lives in a metropolis or a village. Any arbitrary and discriminatory method or regulation between the citizens of the State, because of residence, would, in the judgment of the committee, be repugnant to the Constitution, and render any law containing such provision void in toto.

Even though such a law gave all cities the same option to confer upon or withdraw authority from the State Commission, it might result in the creation of very expensive machinery for the administration of the law, with very few cities choosing to come under the provisions of the law. Again, part of the cities of the State would have the bond and stock issues of utility companies regulated by the State Commission, while the utility stocks and bonds of other cities would not be regulated by State law. It cannot be conceived that legislation will be urged which will provide for the regulation of stock and bond issues of all utility corporations by a State Commission, leaving part of the companies to have rates regulated by cities, and another part to have rates regulated by city councils. Such a division of authority would be inconsistent, illogical and unscientific.

Such a system of regulation is subject to the further objection that it will be possible to have a commission, the majority of the members of which, if not all, might come from cities of the State which had chosen to withhold regulation of their utilities by the State Commission. This would be more than probable if the larger cities of the State should decide to continue local control of utility companies. This would be the field from which members of the commission would naturally be drawn, because men who have given utility questions special study are those who have been brought personally in touch with these questions. Cities, not adopting State regulation, would not only have the advantages already enumerated, but the officers of the commission would, for the most part, be selected therefrom.

PROVISIONS OF PROPOSED LAW.

The bill herewith presented contains the cardinal and essential features which we consider necessary for the adequate and proper regulation of public utility companies. Pursuant to the ideas hereinbefore expressed in this report, this bill provides for uniform accounting, the supervision of stock and bond issues, preventing the watering of stock, the granting of plenary power to investigate the affairs of utility companies, the power to make physical valuations and rules and regulations necessary to conduct a thorough, just and equitable system of regulation. Provisions are made for the investigation of accidents, the compulsory use of equipment and exchange of service, for the adoption by cities upon the vote of the people of an indeterminate franchise for utility companies, with proper reservations to the city to ultimately establish municipal ownership by purchase. In order that the business management of these companies might not become stagnant, the policy adopted by other states and commissions is recognized, conferring upon the commission the right to grant rewards to companies adopting economies. Local control, not inconsistent with the best service for the citizens of the State, is specially reserved upon such questions as to the length of franchises, the occupation and use of streets and alleys, the imposition of occupation taxes, and matters pertaining to public health and safety. These are necessarily the subjects to review by the commission upon the question of the reasonableness of exercise of such authority.

Even municipalities owning utilities are compelled to treat citizens fairly, the courts are given summary power, provisions for eminent domain make possible the practical operation of the ideas of the law, consolidation, properly safeguarded, is permitted. The principle of natural monopolies is recognized. No right nor the life of any existing company is extended, the extension of grants to street car companies is prevented. This bill provides for the absolute control of utilities and embraces the best provisions of the laws of other states insofar as they are applicable to conditions existing in Illinois.

The bill presented does not affect the existence of the Railroad and Warehouse Commission. The policy of this commission has been well settled and we believe it would be a mistake at this time to impose its duties upon the utility commission proper. In the first few years of the life of the utility commission, the entire time and attention of its members will unquestionably be occupied. When the policy of the utility commission shall have been firmly established, we believe that the Railroad and Warehouse Commission should be abolished and its functions and authority conferred upon the Utility Commission.

MAINTENANCE OF COMMISSION.

Your committee holds that the cost of maintaining this commission should not be borne by those not receiving public service accommodations. It is difficult to approximate what the cost of maintenance of this commission will be. The annual cost of maintaining the Wisconsin Commission is about $100,000.00, the commission for the second district of New York about $300,000.00 annually and the First Commission of New York about $1,300,000.00 annually. It is the judgment of the commission that a single commission for Illinois would require about $400,000.00 annually for its maintenance, being slightly in excess of the commission for the second district of New York. This burden should not be imposed upon the farmers of Illinois nor upon persons who do not receive the accommodations of utility service. The cost of maintenance should be imposed in the first instance, upon the utility companies; this cost will necessarily constitute part of the operating expenses of the company to be considered in the rates established for the particular class of service. Accordingly, your committee has provided for a tax of $100.00 upon each utility company in the State of Illinois and an additional imposition of one mill upon the gross earnings of each of such companies in the State.

EXHIBITS.

In addition to the exhibits heretofore referred to and attached to this report are the following:

The minority report and bill presented by Senator Glackin and Representative Alschuler were not submitted to the committee until April 16, 1913, after the report and committee bill were printed. No criticisms were made to the committee as to specific sections of the committee bill notwithstanding the fact that the tentative bill and report were in the hands of Senator Glackin for three weeks.

The criticisms of section 64 and subsection 64 i of the proposed law were evidently made without a knowledge of the fact that the portions criticised are copied verbatim from Hurd's Illinois Statutes (1912) Title Corporations, sections 163 and 166.

The criticism of section 67 is captious. The portion criticized would be a correct construction of the law without such express provision.

EXHIBIT B.

OPINION OF O. A. HARKER, DEAN OF THE LAW SCHOOL OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS.

To the Legislative Committee on Public Utilities:

GENTLEMEN—Your chairman has submitted to me for legal opinion the following questions:

First—Would an indeterminate franchise, such as is provided by the Wisconsin law, be constitutional in Illinois?

Second—(a) What power and authority, if any, could be conferred by the General Assembly of Illinois upon a Public Service Commission to regulate and control rates and the operations of a public utility under an unexpired franchise?

(b) To what extent could such control and regulation be exercised?

I am pleased to express my views on each question in the order named.

I.

In answering the question whether "an indeterminate franchise, such as that provided by the Wisconsin law," would be constitutional in Illinois, I assume that the question applies to a public utility act relating to gas, water, heat, power, telephone or telegraph service, subways, conduits, tunnels, docks, and wharfs, and not to steam railroads. The language employed in the joint resolution under which you were appointed seems to justify the assumption. The regulation of utilities strictly municipal is the matter on which the General Assembly appears to desire light. It is not the Wisconsin Act of 1905, creating the railroad commission and giving to it certain powers of regulation over railroads and express companies, but the Wisconsin Act of 1907, which extended the powers of the commission to the other public utilities that I shall consider in answer to the question; therefore:

The only provisions of the constitution of Illinois that need be considered in this connection appear in the Bill of Rights, Article II, sections 2 and 14. Section 2 reads: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Section 14 reads: "No ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or making any irrevocable grant of special privileges or immunities, shall be passed."

Violation of the first quoted section would most probably arise, if at all, in provision for taking over property or in regulating rates where franchises had already been granted. I do not mean to intimate that the Act may not legally contain provisions for regulating rates for utilities where franchises have already been granted. In the celebrated case of Munn v. The People, 69 Ill., 80, it is held that this clause in our Bill of Rights does not deny the Legislature power to make all needful and reasonable regulations respecting the use and enjoyment of property and that while all regulations of the use of public commodities may, to a greater or lesser degree, impair the value of property, they do not come within the constitutional inhibition unless they take away and destroy rights in which property consists.

That part of section 14 which inhibits the passage of a law impairing the obligation of contracts is intimately connected with section 2, and in almost every reported case where the constitutionality of a law has been questioned because of interference with property rights, the sections have been invoked together.

Much, therefore, that is said in Munn v. The People, and the cases following in trend, concerning section 2, may be applied to section 14. In the respects mentioned, I see nothing in the Wisconsin Act of 1907 that would, if embodied in an Illinois Statute, violate the Illinois Constitution.

We will next consider whether an indeterminate franchise could be granted without violating that part of section 14 which declares that no law "making an irrevocable grant of special privileges or immunities shall be passed." Of course, it is understood that the "Special Legislation" provision of section 22, Article IV, prohibits any direct legislative grant to corporation or individual of a special privilege, immunity, or franchise. But the pertinent inquiry here is, whether an Act authorizing a municipality or commission to make an irrevocable grant of special privileges or immunities would be constitutional and whether an indeterminate franchise is such a grant. It is clear that an Act authorizing a municipality or commission to make such a grant would be invalid, because what the Legislature is forbidden to do directly it is without constitutional power to do indirectly, so the inquiry is really limited to the question: Is an indeterminate franchise an irrevocable grant of privileges or immunities?

Indeterminate franchises are of two kinds:

1. A franchise granted without mention of term limit, but subject to revocation at any time by act of the municipality or authority granting it, on payment for the plant according to value or at a price agreed upon prior to revocation.

2. A franchise granted for a certain term with a condition that it shall be renewed unless the municipality at the expiration of the term shall purchase the plant or secure another as purchaser. In treating the subject, it should be understood that the word "Franchise" is used in the broad sense given it by the United States Supreme Court and text book writers, and not in the restricted sense given it by the Supreme Court of Illinois. In its broad sense, a franchise is a particular privilege which does not belong to the corporation or individual as of right, but is conferred by the government upon and vested in the corporation or individual as grantee. The power to grant it is sovereign, and, in Illinois, is vested in the Legislature although it may be delegated to a municipality, a creature of the Legislature. Ignoring the principle that the power may be delegated to municipalities, the Illinois Supreme Court in Chicago City Railway Company v. The People, ex rel., 73 Illinois, 541, held, that a grant, by city ordinance, to a street railway company to construct and operate its railroad through the streets of the city is a mere license and not a franchise. Although the decision is a clear departure from the meaning of a franchise as announced in other jurisdictions, it has been tenaciously adhered to in subsequent cases, especially where there hinged upon it, the determination of whether an appeal lie to the appellate court or to the Supreme Court. But, whether the grant be regarded as a franchise or a mere license, it is controlled by the inhibition contained in section 14, supra.

A grant is not irrevocable, within the meaning of the section, because no time limit is fixed for its enjoyment. In the view taken by our courts, "irrevocable" applies not to time, but to the observance of the conditions on which the franchise rests. A grant without time limitation, however, will end when the corporate life of the grantee or the municipality ends.

St. Clair County Turnpike Co. v. Illinois, 96 U. S., 63;

Blair v. Chicago, 201 U. S., 400;

Snell v. Chicago, 133 Ill., 413;

People v. Chicago Tel. Co., 220 Ill., 238;

Venner v. Chicago City Ry. Co., 236 Ill., 349.

In the light of these authorities and others that could be cited, the "irrevocable grant" which the framers of the Constitution had in mind is one against which a forfeiture or annulment cannot be declared by the State or municipality on the failure of the grantee to fulfill the conditions of the grant. Therefore, a franchise may be indeterminate and not in violation of the Constitution.

II.

A. In giving an opinion as to what powers can be conferred by the General Assembly upon a public service commission to regulate and control rates of a public utility operating under an unexpired franchise and to what extent such regulation and control may be exercised, one must necessarily be embarrassed if he undertake to enumerate the powers that may be conferred, or specify in a concrete way the extent to which the regulation may be exercised. I shall content myself, therefore, with an expression of view, as to the power which the General Assembly may confer and as to the extent to which regulation may be exercised quite general in character.

I see no constitutional objection to the General Assembly conferring upon a public utilities commission, the power to regulate the rates of a public utility, as was done when the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission was given power to regulate rates of railroads. It has been repeatedly held by the United States Supreme Court that no express constitutional reservation is necessary to create or preserve the legislative power to regulate public service corporations and prescribe the reasonable maximum rates which they may charge for service.

Spring Valley Water Works v. Schottler, 110 U. S., 347;

Stone v. Farmers' Loan and Trust Co., 116 U. S., 307;

W. St. L. & P. Ry. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S., 557;

C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minnesota, 134 U. S., 418.

The Legislature may directly exercise the power of rate regulation

Munn v. Illinois, 94 U. S., 113;

Ruggles v. Illinois, 108 U. S., 526;

C. & G. T. Ry. Co. v. Wellman, 143 U. S., 335.

Or, it may confer such power on commissioners or municipalities.

Spring Valley Water Co. v. Schottler, 110 U. S., 347;

C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. v. Minn., 134 U. S., 418;

Reagan v. Farmers' L. and T. Co., 154 U. S., 362.

It makes no difference that the franchise may have been granted by a municipality. The right of a municipality to grant a franchise is obtained from the State, and, the State may at pleasure withdraw it. A power to regulate rates which has been conferred may be modified or entirely withdrawn, due regard being observed, of course, to the constitutional provisions with reference to the impairment of contracts, the taking of property without due process of law, and the taking or damaging of property without just compensation.

B. The power to regulate rates is governmental in its nature, and is intended to be exercised for the benefit of the inhabitants of the city which grants [grants] the franchise. It is not exhausted by the initial exercise of it. It is continuing in its nature, and may be exercised from time to time to prevent abuses and extortion.

Rogers Park Water Co. v. Fergus, 178 Ill., 571;

Danville v. Danville Water Co., 180 Ill., 235;

Freeport Water Co. v. Freeport, 186 Ill., 179.

The courts hold that a power delegated to a municipality to prescribe rates must be exercised in good faith and carries with it the duty of ascertaining that the prescribed rates are just and reasonable, due regard being had to the value of the plant and the cost upon a commission into whose hands the State might place the power after withdrawing it from the municipality. The power to regulate rates is only intended to secure to the public their right to service and the power must be limited to ascertaining and prescribing what are reasonable rates. The commission could not exercise the power arbitrarily, and without reference to what is just and reasonable, both as to the public requiring the service and the corporation furnishing it. Should it do so and fix the rate so low that the commodity could not be manufactured and furnished without loss, there would be a violation of the constitutional provision against taking or damaging private property without just compensation. I am quite convinced, also, that the corporation should have notice and an opportunity to be heard. Its right in that regard is constitutional and comes within section 2 of the bills of rights.

I would suggest, therefore, that in a bill putting the public utilities of the State under the control and regulation of a State commission, the part relating to the regulation of the rates be so drafted as to require the commission to make fair investigation and exercise fair judgment, to give notice to the corporation, and to give the corporation an opportunity of being heard.

Although a court of equity, in the absence of a right of appeal, could and would restrain the enforcement of a rate so low that the commodity could not be furnished at a profit, upon the ground that the rate fixed amounted to taking property without just compensation, I think it advisable for the bill to provide for an appeal de novo to the circuit court of the county in which the utility is located.

Finally, whoever drafts the bill should keep constantly in mind, sections 2, 12 and 14 of the bill of rights.

EXHIBIT D.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF HON. E. F. DUNNE, GOVERNOR OF ILLINOIS, TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

The day of competition in the supply of gas, electric light and power, street railways and other public utilities, has passed. Monopoly in these matters has come to stay.

In these modern days no municipality can tolerate the tearing up of its streets, every few months or years, by rival water, gas, electric light, heating or telephone companies in the laying of pipes, wires and conduits.

Only one utility producing concern should be allowed that privilege for each utility in each city.

That concern must be either the municipal corporation itself, or a private corporation.

The sole aim of a public corporation is to operate to the satisfaction of the community, which is always assured by giving the best service at the lowest rate.

The sole aim of all private corporations, unregulated by law, is to make money for their stockholders, and the most money can be made by poor service at a high rate to the consumer.

The only question then, is whether the public shall own and operate through State or local agencies, or whether it shall allow these utilities to remain in the ownership and control of private corporations and regulate them by law.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

After a careful investigation, through funds contributed by various vested interests, the Committee on Municipal v. Private Operation of Public Utilities, appointed in 1906, by the National Civic Federation, reported nineteen to one.

To protect the rights of the people, we recommend that the various states should give to their municipalities authority, upon popular vote, under reasonable regulations, to build and operate public utilities, or to build and lease the same, or to take over works already constructed. In no other way can the people be put upon a fair trading basis, and obtain from the individual companies such rights as they ought to have.

In other words, this commission, of which a majority at the start were strongly in sympathy with, or identified with private ownership, held the right of municipal ownership to be more important than any form of regulation.

While most cities of Illinois may not be ready, as yet, to undertake municipal operation of other than waterworks, legislation should be enacted immediately, giving all cities the right to build or buy, and to operate their utilities. For this purpose, cities should be empowered to issue bonds, subject to a referendum and such other reasonable safeguards as may be necessary. If such rights are given, it will force private corporations, now furnishing these utilities, to give decent service at decent rates, or face the alternative of public ownership.

STATE REGULATION.

Important as it is to give cities the right to manage their own public utilities, it is also important to give to State and local bodies large powers of regulation of the public utilities that remain in private hands.

These utilities may be broadly classed as "intra-urban" and "inter-urban." In other words, they are either local in character, confined to a city and its suburbs, or they run through country districts and connect one place with another.

In the latter class are included interurban electric railways, natural gas mains, electric transmission lines, and a considerable portion of the telephone systems of the State.

In the other class are included city gas, electric light and power, heating, and street railway companies, and such parts of the telephone system as are operated within cities by virtue of franchises granted by such cities. Waterworks in private hands, and, doubtless, some other public utilities, could be included in this class.

The interurban utilities can only be regulated by the State, for that purpose a well-equipped Public Utilities Commission should be created with large powers. It should control the issue of securities, the character of service, the rate of charge, etc. It should be appointed by the Executive with the approval of the Senate.

With respect to intra-urban, or strictly city utilities, it might be well, at the start, to give to the proposed State commission control of the city utilities when requested by any of the several cities of the State. The commission, however, should be empowered to secure uniformity of accounting and full publicity with respect even to the city utilities, and should be prepared to furnish this information in tabulated form in its annual reports, and in further detail to public officials.

The commission should also be equipped with funds and authority, so that it can employ and furnish competent expert help to cities seeking advice and assistance from this State commission.

When requested to do so by any municipality, the commission should also supervise the service of these city utilities.

It would also be well to give the State commission full control of all new issues of stock, bonds and notes, and other evidences of indebtedness of all the public utilities of the State, including those within the cities. If this were done, the commission should be equipped with resources and power to make a physical valuation of such properties. No additional securities should be permitted to be issued save for additional physical property and legitimate brokerage. It should be distinctly provided that future issues of securities, when approved by the commission, should be clearly separated by serial numbers, or otherwise, from existing securities, to the end that purchasers might always know whether they were buying new securities, approved by the State, and issued for an increase of physical investment, or, whether they were buying securities issued prior to the enactment of the law, and that had not in any way passed under the scrutiny of the State.

LOCAL REGULATION.

In addition to a law conferring the right of municipal ownership, and another creating a State Utilities Commission, we need legislation conferring upon cities that choose to exercise it, the same rights of control over all their city utilities that they now possess with respect to water companies. Chicago secured such a right with respect to gas and electric companies about six years ago. A similar law, with perhaps some additional powers, should be passed for all cities.

After some experience with the legislation, recommended above, we shall be in better position to determine whether the powers of the State commission should be further increased. It is, of course, desirable, and in accordance with democratic policy, to confer as much home rule as possible upon cities, and to concentrate in State and national hands only such powers as are State or nation-wide in their scope.

EXHIBIT E.

EXCERPTS FROM SPEECH OF HON. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN, BEFORE JOINT ASSEMBLY, MARCH 18, 1913.

The Governor of this State has presented a program and, so far as I have been able to read the program it is expressive of this fundamental doctrine, that the people rule. Take, for instance, in the matter of public utilities. I believe he has recommended a public utilities board. I know of no argument that can be made against it that will bear the light. I know of no argument that would present or suggest itself to the disinterested mind as against it. We all recognize that these corporations are created by the public and we must assume that they are created on the belief that they will advance the public welfare, but we must also assume that those who run them will look out for the interests of the stockholders rather than the interests of the people, and, therefore, there must be someone that will look out for the interests of the public. And, I believe that experience has demonstrated the wisdom of a public utility board, before which corporations must go for permission to do those things, which if done without public approval might be done to the injury of the people of the country.

I ask you to remember the difference between the corporation and the individual. Sometimes I hear a Democrat invoke the maxim of Jefferson, "Legislate as little as possible." I have heard that maxim invoked when a request was made for regulating corporations. I want to remind you that if you are going to apply that maxim you must go back to the time before these great corporations were created. You cannot create a corporation and then resort to the maxim that would lead you not to regulate after it is created.

Remember the difference between the God made man and the corporate man. There are several differences that are very marked. Here are a few. Man was made by the Creator. The corporation was made by man. Man has a higher origin than the corporation. God created man for a divine purpose. Man created the corporation to make money. A difference in the purpose of the creation. When God made man he put a limit to his existence and man does not know when the time will expire, and, therefore, he is under restraint that the corporation is not. Not only that, but God breathed into man a soul and warned him that in the next world he would be held accountable for the deeds done in the flesh, while the corporation recognizes that if they can escape punishment here it need not worry about the hereafter.

Then, there is a difference also in the size of the thing created. When God created man, he did not make the tallest man much taller than the shortest man, and did not make the strongest man much stronger than the weakest, but when man made the corporation, the corporate man, that corporate man was made a hundred, a thousand and a million times stronger than the God made man. Therefore, the God made man has a right to insist that as the government created this giant, the government shall control this giant and not permit it to trespass upon the right of the individual. It must be understood, therefore, that a corporation has no natural rights. It has no rights except those given it by the government, and as the corporation has rights that the natural man does not enjoy, if you insist that it also has every right that the natural man enjoys, you make it necessarily more potent than the natural man can be.

I ask you, therefore, to be careful and don't permit a corporation to be created without providing a means for restraining it and regulating it. And, as the people create corporations through government, I suggest that you require by law that every corporation shall put up a motto in its chief place of business, "Remember Now Thy Creator."

The public utility board is one of the means employed for the regulation of corporations, and, so far as I know, no substitute has been found for it. Nothing better has been proposed. I feel sure that when you come to examine the situation, if you will let the people's interest be paramount in your thought, you will gladly approve of the creation of a board that can exercise a restraining influence over corporations for the protection of the helpless and unorganized public.

If it were necessary to re-enforce what I have said by additional argument, I would remind you that when the government takes from the individual his club and says to him "you shall not protect yourself and your own rights by physical force," it assumes the solemn obligation of protecting the unarmed, the disarmed individual from every arm uplifted for his injury.

I believe the Governor has also recommended the giving to cities of the right to own and control their utilities. Why not? Is there anybody that has a better right to decide that question than the people themselves. If we abandon hereditary government and rule by divine right in order to substitute a kind of rule more obnoxious than hereditary rule, the rule of money is the most hateful that can be imagined and infinitely more oppressive than any hereditary rule, and when you say that the people of a city shall not own their utilities, you say someone has a right to own and operate them regardless of the people's wishes.

Is there any power in any city with a right so sacred that that right should be given precedence above the right of the people themselves? Are you afraid to trust the people to decide this question? Then, how dare you defend the principles of popular government. If the people cannot decide a question in their midst, how can they decide a question far away from them?

Do you mean to say that the people lack capacity for self-government? If you do, you assail the foundation principles upon which our institutions rest. Do you say that people will make mistakes? That is no objection. You cannot escape mistakes by escaping popular government or the rule of the people. It is not a question of who shall make mistakes. Haven't the people the right to make their own mistakes? Has anybody a God-given right to make mistakes for the rest of the people?

In a monarchy the king makes the mistakes for the people, and he has often lived up to his opportunities in that respect. In an aristocracy, the few make mistakes for the people, and those mistakes have not been infrequent; and in a plutocracy, the people who put the dollar above the man make the mistakes in their own interests and at the expense of the most of the people.

I feel sure that those of you who believe that governments must derive their just powers from the consent of the governed, will not deny the people of the cities the right to decide for themselves when they shall do their own work and when they shall let it out to someone else.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF GOVERNORS FOR THE YEAR 1913—PREPARED BY PROF. A. B. WRIGHT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS.

California—First Biennial Message of Governor Hiram Johnson before the Senate and Assembly of the state of California, Jan. 6, 1913, pages 7-8.

Governor Johnson praises the work of the Railroad Commission saying that less work was done by the Railroad Commission in the thirty-two years previous to June, 1911, than in any one month since that time. In less than two years of widened powers the commission has handled approximately 2,000 complaints, investigated express rates, readjusted railroad rates to accord with the long and short haul clause, reduced freight rates into and out of the San Joaquin Valley, between Los Angeles and San Pedro, Los Angeles and Imperial Valley, between Bakersfield and the oil fields, reduced Pullman seat fare between San Francisco and Los Angeles, reduced demurrage, restored lower telephone rates in one hundred and two towns, reduced many thousand passenger, freight and express rates upon informal complaints, improved train service, reduced rates on raisins and dried fruits from San Joaquin and from Lomona and Mendocino counties, given all children the benefit of half fare on all street railways, previously extended only to school children; required the erection of new depots, examined and authorized stock and bond issues approximating $30,000,000.00.

He makes no recommendations for amendment to the utilities law.

New Hampshire—Message of Governor Bass to the New Hampshire General Court, Jan. 2, 1913, pages 8-9.

Governor Bass states that in lowering gas rates in two towns alone, Somersworth and Rochester, the pecuniary gain to the takers of gas exceeded the total additional annual cost to the state over the cost of the Railroad Commission, which had no jurisdiction over gas companies. He praises the commission for the work and mentions particularly its investigation of railroad rates and recommends that the commission be given authority to establish schedules of maximum rates for railroads. He considers the utilities bill the most important and valuable piece of legislation during his term.

Governor Felker in his message to the legislature for the January, 1913, session does not mention public utilities and does not refer to the work of the Utilities Commission. He does recommend that needless state commissions be abolished, but does not specify what commissions he considers needless.

Connecticut—Message of Governor Baldwin to the January session of the legislature, page 26.

Governor Baldwin praises the work of the Utilities Commission particularly that portion which has been informal in character. He recommends no amendments to or changes in the utilities law.

Nevada—Governor Tasker of Oddie in his message to the legislature of 1913, page 29, describes the creation of the utility powers conferred on the former Railroad Commission and making it a Public Service Commission. He does not comment on the work of the commission save to state that if the Supreme Court of the United States sustains the commission in certain class and commodity rates which are now being received in the courts it will result in a saving of several hundred thousand dollars to the people of the state. He also states that the commission has effected reductions on freight and passenger rates, on a number of intra-state railroads in the past two years. He makes no recommendations for changes in the utilities law.

New Jersey—Annual Message of Governor Wilson to the legislature of New Jersey, Jan. 14, 1913, pages 6-7.

Governor Wilson does not comment on the character of the commissions' work, but recommends that the legislature empower the Utility Commission; (1) with full and discretionary power to secure the abolition of grade crossings in such manner as the commission shall think best in each case; (2) to compel railway trains which pass through the state to be manned by a full crew.

New York—Governor Sulzer in his inaugural message, Jan. 1, 1913, does not mention the subject of public utilities or the Utilities Commission.

Ohio—Governor James Cox in his Inaugural Message, Jan. 13, 1913, pages 16-19, praises the work of the Utilities Commission and recommends; (1) that the existing law giving to the commission the right to make physical valuations be changed to make valuation mandatory on the commission using the forces available in the state university for assistance; (2) that the commission be empowered to demand the same system of uniform accounting on municipally operated utilities as is now imposed on private enterprises, also, (3) that the law be so amended that on appeal to the courts from the rate orders and findings of the commission an injunction cannot be granted without an investigation.

In his approval of the commission's work, Governor Cox makes particular mention of better prices and greater demand for securities where they have been controlled in their issuance by the commission.

Oregon—Governor West in his message to the Twenty-seventh Legislative Assembly, 1913, mentions neither public utilities nor the work of the Railroad Commission.

Rhode Island—Inaugural Message of Governor Pothier, January, 1913, pages 29-31.

Governor Pothier commends the timely creation of the Public Utilities Commission and praises highly its work in presenting information on the railroad situation in the state to the federal grand jury. He recommends increasing the power and duties of the commission as follows:

1. To give to the commission power to inspect securities.
2. To authorize the commission to make physical valuation of utility properties.
3. To prescribe uniform accounting methods.
4. To require from companies under the jurisdiction of the commission, reports of operating expenses, and financial and other data.
5. Appointment of experienced men as inspectors of the equipment of steam and electric railways, and of the gas and electricity supplied for public consumption.

The above are all recommended as desirable amendments to the present law.

Vermont—The retiring message of Governor Mead, October, 1912, does not mention public utilities or the Utility Commission.

Washington—Governor Hay in his message to the legislature of 1913, pages 14-20, bespeaks the wisdom of the public utility legislation of that state and its operation through the Public Service Commission as follows: "Accident investigations have been conducted and many protective devices ordered installed. Hundreds of informal complaints have been received and satisfactorily adjusted and questions relating to rates, service, facilities, rules, regulations, etc., of public service companies, adjusted without the necessity of formal hearings. Gas, electric and water rules have been promulgated by the commission providing for meter testing, meter readings limiting the amount of advance payments and deposits, requiring companies to give consumers 8 per cent per annum upon deposits, requiring the abandonment and abolishment of meter rentals and charges for meter installation, etc. These gas, electric and water rules promulgated by the commission and effective since June 15, 1912, have saved thousands of dollars to gas, electric and water consumers. Reciprocal demurrage rules have been promulgated for the protection and security of shippers unable to secure equipment for their produce and merchandise. Physical connection has been ordered between different telephone companies, thereby affording better long distance service. Water, gas, electric power and irrigation cases have been heard and adjusted and in many instances better service and lower rates afforded to the public. The properties of the public service corporations have been valued in many instances and such valuations certified to the taxing authorities of the state, thereby affording a definite and scientific basis for taxation. Upon request of the farmers and hay growers of Eastern Washington, interior grain and hay inspection points were designated for the inspection and weighing of hay."

Governor Hay recommends the following amendments to the law; (1) to empower the commission to abolish or permit grade crossing whether constructed before the passage of the law or not; (2) to compel irrigation companies to secure a certificate of approval from the commission before engaging in business, and (3) to give the commission control over the issuance of securities by utility companies according to the following provisions; (a) that public utilities may issue certain securities only for certain definite purposes specified in the Act, such as acquisition of property, the construction, completion, extension or improvement of its facilities, etc.; (b) that any company desiring to issue such evidence of indebtedness shall make a written application therefor to the commission. A thorough investigation shall then be had and an order made either granting or denying said application; (c) that if the commission grants said application it may attach such condition or conditions to the issuance of said securities as it may deem reasonable and necessary; (d) that the company shall not issue or dispose of said securities on any term less favorable than those specified in the order and the proceeds from the sale thereof shall be expended only as directed in said order; (e) that no franchise or permit shall be capitalized in excess of amount actually paid to the state or political subdivision thereof, as a consideration for the granting of such franchise or permit nor shall any contract for consolidation or lease be capitalized; (f) that the commission shall have the power to require the public utility to account for the disposition of the proceeds of all sales of securities authorized by the commission; (g) that all securities issued without the authorization of the commission shall be void; (h) that the approval of securities by the commission does not operate as a guarantee of the same by the commission and does not obligate the state to pay the same under any conditions.

Governor Lester in his message to the legislature, 1913, commends the commission, but says nothing specific and makes no recommendations.

Wisconsin—Governor McGovern in his message to the legislature, Jan. 9, 1913, does not mention either public utilities or the Railroad Commission.

Of the states without public utility commissions, the governor of the following in their messages of last month ask for the creation of strong public utility commissions: Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Pennsylvania.

The Digest of Public Utility Commissions contained herein is taken from Vol. I, No. 3 of the Iowa Applied History Series. Regulation of Urban Utilities in Iowa, by E. H. Downey, pages 61-64. This study, despite the title, is one of the best general discussions of the general utility problem to be found.

EXCERPTS FROM MESSAGE OF GOVERNOR ROBERT LAFOLLETTE TO THE WISCONSIN LEGISLATURE, 1904.

PUBLICITY.

Secrecy is the source of many of the most serious evils, pertaining to railway management. If the commission is clothed with power to enforce entire publicity, it will rarely be necessary to employ its authority to prosecute. Publicity should extend to complete itemized statements of all matters connected with the financial accounts of the railway companies' business. The maintenance of a particular rate, established by the commission, must depend upon the commissioner's knowledge of earnings and the expenses of the road. A percentage of railway profits is invariably concealed by the accounting system employed in all railroad offices. It follows that the authority of the commission over railway accounts should also extend to the enforcement of the uniformity in keeping the same. The importance of this matter has been repeatedly urged upon the attention of Congress by the Interstate Commerce Commission and through the action of the annual conventions of State Railway Commissions.

PROTECTION AGAINST OVER-CAPITALIZATION.

The wrongs which may be inflicted upon the public through over-capitalization are so obvious that it seems scarcely necessary to discuss the importance of incorporating in this law a strong provision, making it the duty of the commission to ascertain the value of all steam and electric railways within the state, and making it unlawful for any steam or electric railway company located in Wisconsin to issue any bonds or other evidences of debt, or to issue stocks and shares, or to execute leases and mortgages without first obtaining an order from the commission authorizing such action. Could this have been done earlier in the history of railway building in Wisconsin, the people would not now be taxed so heavily on all transportation in order to pay interest and dividends upon an over-capitalization of all our roads. It is certainly wise to provide, with all possible speed, against any further over-capitalization of either steam or electric railroads already within the state, or any over-capitalization of such other lines as may from time to time be constructed.

RAILWAY RATE-MAKING.

The railroads secure the services of men competent to discharge these duties. The state may likewise secure the services of men equally competent. In view of the great public interest which goes vastly beyond the amount of money paid to the railroad companies annually for transportation, great as that sum is in the aggregate, it is less important than the administration of justice in securing an impartial service for all sections of the state, all lines of business, and each individual.

THE SELECTION OF COMMISSIONERS.

It is not possible to over-state the importance of the provisions of this law; but, however perfect the law, the state will fail utterly in its undertaking unless the commission is composed of men of high character and ability. Party preference or prejudices should, in no way influence the selection of members of this commission. They should be men of the highest integrity, of marked industry, and they should possess special fitness and power for the important service demanded of them.

Whatever differences of opinion may be found among supporters of a measure to regulate railway service and rates, as to whether the commission should be elective or appointive, you will, I apprehend, find no division among the opponents of such legislation. One and all they are quite certain to be unitedly in favor of an elective commission. While they will oppose the creation of any commission whatever, so long as such opposition can be successfully made, and while they will oppose every provision to strengthen the hands of such commission, they will join with great unanimity for the election of the commission and in favor of the shortest possible tenure of office. I have no doubt that with the general public interest in this question which prevails at this time in Wisconsin, there would be little difficulty in securing in any general election, where there would be a full expression of the will of the people, a commission favorable to a thorough-going administration of the law, and I sincerely believe that a commission so chosen, if continued in office, would ultimately become well-equipped to discharge its duties. But the test of the elective system of choosing commissions comes later, more especially if such commission is fairly efficient in the discharge of the duties devolving upon it.

Upon this point I beg to invite your attention to the views of Professor Frank H. Dixon, head of Department of Economics, Dartmouth College, in his able work on "State Railroad Control," based upon a critical study of the history and operation of the Iowa law adopted in 1888:

This law making commissioners elective was passed in the spring of 1888. Before that time the commissioners had been appointed by the Governor, and their selection had depended in no degree upon their political affiliation. The opponents of the new order predicted the change would furnish the railroads the opportunity which they sought of going into politics, and so it unfortunately proved. It has resulted in more than one campaign being fought out by the railroad and anti-railroad forces, regardless of the connection of the candidates with one or the other of the great National parties. The commissioner, who, by his public acts seemed to favor the Granger sentiment as opposed to the railroads would be obliged, if a candidate for re-election, to face the combined forces of the opposition, ably directed from railroad headquarters. At one election hand bills and telegrams were sent out along the lines of roads directing employees to vote for a certain man who was believed to be friendly to railroad interests. The grain men and large shippers were notified to join the movement. The opposition was strengthened through the multiplication of railroad employees' clubs, formed for no other purpose than to influence railroad legislation.

Experience has proven conclusively that the election of commissioners by popular vote is dangerous in furnishing inducement for the powerful corporations to make themselves felt politically. An appointment of commissioners by the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, or the Executive Counsel, which was the method in vogue at first, should be restored. When this has been done, a great step will have been taken toward promoting a feeling of harmony between shippers and carriers, a spirit indispensable to the satisfactory solution of the railroad question.

There is another phase of this branch of the subject which is worth your careful consideration. The thought must ever be kept in mind, in a law creating a Railroad Commission with power to regulate services and rates, that the most important problem to be dealt with is the character and ability of the men who will be entrusted with this great responsibility. The work of the commission in fixing rates will stand or fall, as it meets the severe tests applied in a review of its proceedings by the courts.

Rates established, either upon the initiative of the commission or upon complaints filed with it, cannot be sustained by the courts except such rates are fair not only to the public, but just and reasonable to the railroads as well. To determine this latter question requires a technical and expert knowledge of traffic conditions, and of the cost of railway construction, maintenance and transportation, in detail. In order that any rate established may be sustained, the commission must be able to meet and answer the ablest traffic experts in the employ of the great railway companies. They should be able to meet them, in so far as possible, upon equal terms. Railway traffic managers are, because of their ability and fitness, among the highest paid of all railway company officials. A contest between political parties where partisan feeling runs high and personal friendships and popular elements in character count in the determination of the result, do not afford the best conditions for judging of those purely technical qualifications, and of that mental endowment and experience which specially fits for work of the character required of such a commission.

On the other hand, if the office is made appointive, there will be every opportunity for the appointing power to make selection from the widest possible field, having ample time for investigation of the candidate with respect to his antecedents, to the elements in his character, and to his ability, experience and expert knowledge. The selection would be made full in the eye of the public, the appointing power having responsibility for his acts, and knowing with a certainty that such appointments would not be confirmed unless it met the approving judgment of the legislature. For I believe that these positions upon the commission are so profoundly important that if appointive, an additional check might well be provided to those usually made, and I would recommend that such appointment be subject to confirmation, not only by the Senate, but by the Assembly as well, requiring the concurrent action of both branches of the legislature to confirm the same.

EXHIBIT Q.

EXCERPTS FROM INAUGURAL ADDRESS OF HON. WOODROW WILSON, GOVERNOR OF NEW JERSEY, JANUARY 17, 1911.

I would urge, therefore, the imperative obligation of public policy and of public honesty we are under to effect such changes in the law of the state as will henceforth effectually prevent the abuse of the privilege of incorporation which has in recent years brought so much discredit upon our state. In order to do this it will be necessary to regulate and restrict the issue of securities, to enforce regulations with regard to bona fide capital, examining very rigorously the basis of capitalization, and to prescribe methods by which the public shall be safeguarded against fraud, deception, extortion and every abuse of its confidence.

And such scrutiny and regulation ought not to be confined to corporations seeking charters. They ought also to be extended to corporations already operating under the license and authority of the state. For the right to undertake such regulation is susceptible of easy and obvious justification. A modern corporation—that is, a modern joint stock company—is in no proper sense an intimate or private concern. It is not set up on the risk and adventure of a few persons, the persons who originated it, manage it, carry it to failure or success. On the contrary, it is set up at what may be called the common risk. It is a risk and adventure in which the public are invited the [to] share, and the hundreds, perhaps thousands, who subscribe to the stock do in fact share in it, oftentimes without sharing also, in any effectual manner, in the control and development of the business in which their risk is taken. Moreover, these modern enterprises, with their exchequers replenished out of the common store of the savings of the nation, conduct business transactions whose scope and influence are as wide as whole regions of the Union, often as wide as the nation itself. They affect sometimes the lives and fortunes of whole communities, dominate prices, determine land values, make and unmake markets, develop or check the growth of city and countryside. If the law is at liberty to adjust the general conditions of society itself, it is at liberty to control these great instrumentalities which nowadays, in so large a part, determine the character of society. Wherever we can find what the common interest is in respect of them we shall find a solid enough basis for law, for reform.

The matter is most obvious when we turn to what we have come to designate public service, or public utility, corporations—those which supply us with the means of transportation and with those common necessities, water, light, heat and power. Here are corporations exercising peculiar and extraordinary franchises, and bearing such relation to society in respect of the services they render that it may be said that they are the very medium of its life. They render a public and common service of which it is necessary that practically everybody should avail himself.

We have a Public Utilities Commission in New Jersey, but it has hardly more than powers of inquiry and advice. It could even as it stands, be made a powerful instrument of publicity and of opinion, but it may also modestly wait until it is asked before expressing a judgment, and in any case it will have the uncomfortable consciousness that its opinion is gratuitous, and carries no weight of effective authority. This will not do. It is understood by everybody who knows anything of the common interest that it must have complete regulative powers; the power to regulate rates, the power to learn and make public everything that should furnish a basis for the public judgment with regard to the soundness, the efficiency, the economy of the business—the power, in brief, to adjust such service at every point and in every respect, whether or [of] equipment or charges or methods of financing or means of service, to the general interest of the communities affected. This can be done, as experience elsewhere has demonstrated, not only without destroying the profits of such business but also with the effect of putting it upon a more satisfactory footing for those who conduct it no less than for those who make use of it day by day.

Such regulation, based on thorough and authoritative inquiry, will go far towards disclosing and establishing those debatable values upon which so many questions of taxation turn. There is an uneasy feeling throughout the state, in which, I dare say, we all share, that there are glaring inequalities in our system—or, at any rate, in our practice—of taxation.

The most general complaint is, that there is great inequality as between individuals and corporations. I do not see how any one can determine whether there are or not, for we have absolutely no uniform system of assessment. It would seem that in every locality there is some local variety of practice, in the rate, the ratio of assessment value to market value, and that every assessors is a law unto himself. Our whole system of taxation, which is no system at all, needs overhauling from top to bottom. There can be no system, no safety, no regulation in a multitude of boards. An efficient Public Utilities Commission will be a beginning towards a system of taxation, as well as towards a system of corporate control. We cannot fairly tax values until we have ascertained and established them.

EXHIBIT R.

EXCERPTS FROM MESSAGE OF GOVERNOR JAMES O. DAVIDSON TO THE WISCONSIN LEGISLATURE, REGULAR SESSION, 1907.

LOCAL PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS.

NECESSITY FOR STATE CONTROL.

A question of the utmost importance to large classes of our people, commanding immediate consideration and judicious action by the legislature, relates to the control and regulation by the state of local public service corporations. The services rendered by this class of corporations greatly contribute to the life and comfort of the inhabitants of the larger cities of the state, and in many instances to those residing in contiguous territory.

A congested population makes necessary artificial lighting, an adequate water supply and the means of rapid transportation, and if these cannot be furnished by the municipality the services of public utility corporations becomes indispensable. It has been the common practice in this, as well as other states, for the city to grant the privilege of furnishing these facilities to corporations, and franchises have been granted exclusive in express terms or in practical application, and monopolistic in their character, which contain no adequate safeguards for the protection of the public. The result has been that these corporations with the absence of governmental restraint have grown in wealth and power and have become masters instead of servants of the people. The standard of service has not kept pace with the needs of the public, or with the rapid improvement in methods and appliances, while the rate of profit has steadily increased. It requires a superficial knowledge of the subject to reveal the fact that there is no uniform relationship between the rates charged and the cost and character of the services rendered.

The eagerness of the municipalities for local improvements and the apparent indifference of the state, has furnished the opportunity for organized wealth to obtain valuable franchises extending over a long period of years for the control of public utilities and to furnish such service and to fix such rates as would yield the largest possible returns without regard to actual investment or needs of the people. Complaints against service and rates have received little attention or escaped correction, either because the municipality did not have the power to properly protect the public, or having the power, has failed to exercise it by reason of official indifference or subservency to improper influences. With uncertain powers, with frequently changing administration, with no fixed responsibility upon officers chosen for the task, the cities of the state are not in position to successfully deal with this important problem and undertake the regulation of public service corporations.

The evils growing out of the local service problem are attributable to three well defined causes—namely, long term and exclusive franchises, excessive rates and over-capitalization, or the practice of watering stock.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES.

Public utilities can only be established by the municipalities or by persons or corporations to whom the right is granted. A franchise for such purpose is a public grant and it should be exercised under public supervision in order to secure adequate protection to the public interests. The people of the municipality are at the outset eager for public improvements, and franchises are readily obtained for a long term of years and exclusive in character, for gas or electric lighting, for water works and for street railways, without regard to future developments and to the needs of a growing community. As a consequence, the public interests are not properly safeguarded, but are subject to the rapacity of a monopoly entrenched behind legal barriers. The franchise, which is usually the free gift of the municipality, is capitalized and recapitalized as it increases in value by growth of population, and charges for services are fixed by the management with a view to realize interest and dividends on the additional issues of bonds and stocks. The people are thus taxed at a constantly increasing rate, to pay tribute on their own bounty. A franchise granted without consideration should not enter into the capitalization of a public service corporation as a part of the investment and as a basis for the establishment of rates.

EXCESSIVE RATES.

Public utility corporations in this state have usually prescribed their own charges for service without restraint from public authority and with little regard for public welfare, maintaining rates at the most profitable point consistent with the least general complaint. Excessive rates have a most depressing influence upon the growth and opportunity of the municipality, and affect the people more vitally than do the charges fixed by the railway companies. Every person residing in any of our larger cities, regardless of his wealth or station, is compelled to contribute to the corporations furnishing water, light and local transportation. The benefits and conveniences of the use of gas and electricity are denied to thousands of people because of the excessiveness of the rates charged. Working men who are compelled to travel long distances in going to and from factories, shops, and stores find the street railway fare a heavy burden. Even with five cent fares for single rides, this is a heavy tax, but when ten cents is charged, for which rate there appears to be no justification, the collection of such an amount of money out of the fruits of the day's toil is little short of extortion. Thousands of working people present the pitiful spectacle of being compelled to toil at their occupations over an hour each day in order to be able to pay the transportation charges incurred in going to and from their places of employment. The rates for gas and electric service vary as much as 20 cents in cities of the same class and similarly situated. The industrial and commercial prosperity of every city and the comfort of every urban home is vitally affected by these agencies which are now independent of public control.

OVER CAPITALIZATION OF LOCAL SERVICE CORPORATIONS.

The custom has long prevailed in the organization of public service corporations, to issue bonds to an amount sufficient to pay the entire cost of the entire plant, the stock being issued without consideration, as a stimulus to the sale of the bonds or to reward the promoters. When the corporation, through the earnings exacted from the public, is enabled to pay attractive dividends, the stock is listed on the exchange and ostensible value is given to that which has none, and the shares are bought at substantial prices by innocent purchasers. Excessive rates must thereafter be maintained to pay dividends upon the fictitious capitalization, thus imposing an unjust burden upon the community.

In nearly all cities, profits dependent upon gratuitous franchise grants have in a very short time become so large as to require concealment. Further, the progress of the public service industry has necessitated revolutionary changes in plant and equipment. These, in turn, have invited financial manipulation at every turn-over and replacement and finally the rapid growth of cities has necessitated a great extension of lines and mains, always at increased capital, and often leading to consolidation with all their attendant opportunities for inflation. Efficiency of service has seldom been a factor in determining the amount of capitalization. In order to pay interest and dividends on this large capital, rates have been fixed at a point entirely unreasonable in comparison with the cost of service. Largely increased earnings are also disposed of by resorting to the issue of stock dividends, all of which become an increased burden loaded upon the property from which no benefit is received. Another inducement for such additional issue is the practice of giving to existing stockholders the prior right to subscribe for a proportionate share thereof at par, regardless of market value. In such cases the corporations will receive but a portion of the amount they might have realized, and the people of the cities are taxed to pay rates on the excessive issues.

REMEDIAL LEGISLATION.

The remedy for conditions now so oppressive in the municipalities of the state lies in a complete revision of the statutes relating to the organization of public utility corporations and the granting of municipal franchises, and providing for the supervision by public authority of the issue of stocks and bonds and the control of the rates that shall be charged and the services shall be rendered. Such legislation should strike at the root of the matter. Franchises improvidently granted are generally recognized in this and other states as the source of the evil which is aggravated by over-capitalization and oppressive management. The remedy lies in placing an absolute limit by the legislative upon the time for which a franchise may be granted, and prescribing a period upon which all franchises heretofore granted shall terminate. Already twenty states and two territories have adopted legislation fixing such limit, ranging in a majority of cases from 20 to 35 years, and containing a provision permitting the city to purchase the plant at the expiration of the term or at a time prior thereto. The constitution of this state has wisely reserved to the legislature the power to alter, amend or repeal all general or special laws granting corporate powers and privileges. The exercise of this power by the legislature for the control of public service corporations has been upheld for more than a generation by the Supreme Court of this state and of the United States, and there can be no just cause for complaint against the adoption of proper amendments to charters and franchises which have been granted and accepted. Such grants have been made subject to the exercise of this power for the protection of the public.

Since there are franchises in this state which have been granted to public service corporations in perpetuity, or claimed to be such, and also many which have been granted for a very long period of years, the terms of which will operate harshly and oppressively, I recommend the enactment of a law declaring that all franchises heretofore granted to any individual, partnership or corporation, to engage in a public service business in any city in this state, shall terminate on Jan. 1, 1930, unless they shall sooner expire by their own terms, and also declaring that no franchise of such a nature hereafter granted shall be for a longer term than twenty years.

STATE COMMISSION.

The only adequate remedy for excessive charges by public service corporations is the regulation of the rates by public authority. The legislature may exercise this power directly, or it may delegate the authority to any appropriate public agency. This doctrine, long recognized by the Supreme Court of this state, has been re-affirmed in the recent case of the City of Madison v. Madison Gas & Electric Company. I recommend that the control and regulation of local public service corporations be granted to a state commission.

Massachusetts and New York have clothed the state commission with ample power of supervision and control of the organization and operation of public utility corporations, and the statutes of those states will indicate the nature of the legislation needed in Wisconsin. It will be noted that it was found expedient by the legislatures of those states to vest the supervision of gas and electric lighting company in a commission separate and distinct from the railway commission to which the regulation of street railways is entrusted. The difference in the character of the services rendered by these corporations may suggest the propriety of placing the control and regulation thereof in different bodies. The distribution of these powers concerning the several classes of public service corporations, however, is a matter for legislative determination. Should it be deemed advisable to place the control of these corporations, or any of them under a separate commission, the expense thereof should be met by a moderate license fee to be imposed upon the corporation subject to such supervision. The propriety of such provision is apparent when it is considered that the administrative control affects a part only of the whole people of the state, and the cost thereof should not be paid out of the general fund.

Public service corporations are entitled to secure a fair profit upon the actual cost of their properties, and no more. The valuation of the property, therefore, becomes an important factor in the problem of rate making. Specific authority should be granted to the state commission to ascertain and determine the true cost of such properties, and to use this determination to aid in fixing a fair and just rate of compensation for services rendered.

A limit should be placed upon the capitalization of local service corporations, and the issue of stocks and bonds by them should be under the supervision of the state commission charged with regulation of such corporation. Massachusetts and New York have provided that no stocks or bonds shall be issued by this class of corporations without application having first been made to the state commission and its approval obtained after an examination as to the necessity of such issue, and the method and purposes of the investment of the proceeds. With capitalization measured by actual investment, just rates can readily be ascertained, and the accumulation of large surplus funds through excessive charges may thus be prevented.

EXCERPTS FROM THE MESSAGE OF THE GOVERNOR OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, TRANSMITTED TO THE LEGISLATURE, JANUARY 2, 1907.

PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS.

Proper means for the regulation of the operations of railroad corporations should be supplied. For want of it, pernicious favoritism has been practiced. Secret rebates have been allowed, and there has been unjust discrimination in rates and in furnishing facilities for transportation. Those who have sought to monopolize trade have thus been enabled to crush competition and to grow in wealth and power by crowding out their rivals who have been deprived of access to markets upon equal terms. These abuses are not to be tolerated. Congress has legislated upon the subject with reference to interstate commerce, where naturally the evil has been most prominent. But domestic commerce must be regulated by the state, and the state should exercise its powers to secure impartial treatment to shippers and the maintenance of reasonable rates.

There is also need of regulation and strict supervision to ensure adequate service and due regard for the convenience and safety of the public. The most practicable way of attaining these ends is for the legislature to confer proper power upon a subordinate administrative body.

We have now a Board of Railroad Commissioners of five members. It is charged specifically with important duties. The execution of mortgages and the increase or reduction of capital stock are subject to its approval, its certificate that public convenience and necessity require the construction of a projected railroad is required before the construction can be begun, and it deals with changes in highway grade crossings and various other matters in a definite way.

The law also provides that the board "shall have general supervision of all railroads and shall examine the same and keep informed as to their condition and the manner in which they are operated for the security and accommodation of the public and their compliance with the provisions of their charters and of law." If in the judgment of the board it appears "that any change of the rates of fare for transporting freight or passengers or in the mode of operating the road or conducting its business is reasonable and expedient in order to promote security, convenience and accommodation of the public," it may after notice and and hearing fix a time within which the changes shall be made.

But the action of the board in the exercise of this general power of supervision amounts to a recommendation. If its direction is not complied with, the law provides that the matter shall be presented to the Attorney General for his consideration and action, and shall be reported to the legislature. So, if it appears that any railroad corporation has violated the law, or unjustly discriminates in its charges, and the wrongful conduct is continued after notice, the matter is to be brought to the attention of the Attorney General, "who shall take such proceedings thereon as may be necessary for the protection of the public interests."

The present scheme of regulation is inadequate. There is a lack of precision in the definition of the powers of the board and an absence of suitable means to compel compliance with its decisions. No penalties are provided for disobedience to orders of the board made within its proper authority. Nor is the board authorized to institute and conduct legal proceedings for the purpose of enforcing its requirements.

We have also a commission of gas and electricity with broad powers with reference to corporations engaged in supplying gas and electric current.

It is my judgment that there is no need of two separate commissions to deal with these subjects. There are now corporations which are subject to the jurisdiction of both commissions, and in some cases the same questions are presented for the decision of both. Similar principles are applicable to the decision in many cases within the jurisdiction of each and harmony of administration would be promoted by having a single body. It is plainly in the interest of economic administration in order to avoid the unnecessary multiplication of officers and clerical force that there should be but one commission. In the two boards we have now eight commissioners. A board of less than this number would answer both purposes.

I therefore recommend that the present Board of Railroad Commissioners and the Commission of Gas and Electricity be abolished and that a new commission be constituted, with powers of regulation and supervision, within constitutional limits, of the corporations now subject to the existing commissions.

The commission should have all the powers possessed by the present commissions and such additional powers as may be needed to insure proper management and operation. Its powers should be clearly defined and should embrace the power to act upon its own initiative, as well as upon complaint; to pass upon the issue of stocks and bonds; to examine properties, books and accounts; to require detailed reports in prescribed form; to prescribe reasonable rates; to require adequate and impartial service; to provide for the safety of employees and for the protection of the public; and generally to direct whatever may be necessary or proper to safeguard the public interests and to secure the fulfillment of the public obligations of the corporations under its supervision. Provision should be made for suitable inspection so that the commission may be advised as to all matters within its purview and be in a position to take action on behalf of the people without the formal institution of proceedings by complainants. A prescribed quorum should be entitled to decide all questions, and any one commissioner should be empowered to make examinations and investigations and the proceedings and decisions of one, when approved by the board, should stand as its proceedings and decisions.

The corporation guilty of disobedience to its orders, and all officers and other persons responsible for such disobedience, should be visited with appropriate penalties. The commission should also be entitled to institute legal proceedings for the enforcement of its orders and all such proceedings should be expedited by suitable preference in all the courts of the state.

The legislature should thus provide, within its constitutional power, adequate means for the entirely just and impartial regulation of these important public enterprises.

CONDITIONS IN GREATER NEW YORK.

The problem of transportation in the territory of Greater New York demands special, prompt and comprehensive treatment. The configuration of Manhattan Island and the concentration of business at its lower end, together with the rapid growth of population, have produced an extraordinary congestion. All existing lines, surface, elevated and subway, are over-burdened and the people suffer in mind, body and estate. The worst congestion is found at the Brooklyn Bridge, due to the convergence at that point of the Brooklyn traffic. The people of Brooklyn who do business in Manhattan are subjected morning and night, not only to exasperating inconvenience, but to such maltreatment and indignities incident to their disgraceful herding that relief in the most practicable manner should be afforded them at the earliest possible moment.

Not only are new facilities needed, which should be planned with reference, both to immediate and future needs, but there is urgent necessity for more strict supervision to secure better service on existing lines. In some portions of the city antiquated horse-cars may still be seen, giving picturesque emphasis to the disregard of the public convenience. Over-capitalization and the improvident creation of guarantees and fixed charges to suit the exigencies of successive combinations entered into for the purpose of monopolizing the traffic have produced their natural results. There are such unjust burdens upon earnings and the tendency constantly to effect economies at the expense of proper service is so strong that it is imperative that the people shall have vigilant representatives clothed with ample authority to compel the corporations to perform their public duty.

In 1891, the legislature, for the purpose of providing for the development of additional transit facilities, passed the so-called Rapid Transit Act. It constituted a Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners, who were named in the statutes. Numerous amendments have been made and additional powers conferred. The statute contains important provisions with reference to construction by the city. Through the accretions of years it has become cumbersome and extremely complicated. It needs revision. Pursuant to the provisions of this act the present subways have been constructed and plans have been made for further construction.

By a recent amendment the board is authorized, with the consent of the board of estimate and apportionment of the city, to grant rights and franchises and to make contracts with reference to the construction and operation of the parts within the city of interstate trunk lines.

We have thus in the city of New York an anomalous condition. Two boards created by the legislature are exercising powers of the greatest importance with reference to transportation.

The Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners is dealing with the question of new facilities and is empowered to make contracts for construction and operation. It is also dealing with the question of the construction of trunk lines into or across the city.

The State Board of Railroad Commissioners has general jurisdiction over the railroads of the state and has supervisory powers over the surface lines and the elevated roads into the city. It does not exercise jurisdiction over the subways, as those were constructed under the Rapid Transit Act. But while the powers of supervision are divided, the interests in control of the surface, elevated and subway lines are now united in a single corporation.

This situation should be met by a comprehensive plan. All the operations of railroad companies in the territory of Greater New York should be under the supervision of one board. And the board that is to have the power to supervise generally these operations should have the power of initiating plans and of making contracts for the construction and operation of new lines.

Instead of two boards dealing with different phases of the same problem, there should be one board empowered to deal with it in its entirety. As such a board would exercise important state powers of control and regulation, it should be a state board and should be composed of men familiar with conditions in the territory affected. In my judgment it would not be advisable to put all these matters under the control, either of the present Board of Railroad Commissioners or of the new commission which I have proposed to take its place.

The urgent need of an increase in transportation facilities, and the unique conditions existing in Greater New York, justify the creation of a separate board to deal with the entire matter of transportation in that part of the state.

I recommend that the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners be abolished and that a new board be created, to have all the powers now exercised by the Rapid Transit Board, and also to have powers with reference to operations within the territory of Greater New York—or if deemed advisable, within a wider district embracing the adjoining counties into which certain lines of the surface railroads extend—similar to the powers which I have suggested should be conferred upon the new commission for the rest of the state. There would thus be included the regulation of gas and electric corporations. Provision should be made for the retention by the board of estimate and apportionment of the city, of all the powers, including powers of approval, which it now enjoys.

The commission proposed for the state generally should have jurisdiction over all traffic between points within the city of New York (or within the district created) and points elsewhere in the state. It is believed that in this manner the whole question of transportation, and of gas and electric service, in the territory of Greater New York can be dealt with in an intelligent and efficient manner, and that to the fullest extent possible the just requirements of that great community may be satisfied.

EXHIBIT T.

MEMORANDUM ON THE MATTER OF FRANCHISES SUBMITTED TO THE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION OF ILLINOIS, BY DAVID KINLEY.

The main reasons for the creation of public utilities commissions are these:

1. The regulation of capitalization; the issue of stock and bonds; to prevent stock watering and, in general, improper financing.
2. To protect the public against excessive rates.
3. To protect the corporations against unfair demands for political reasons, and unfair demands on the part of the public for unremunerative rates and unreasonable service.
4. To prevent unnecessary duplication of public service plants.
5. To secure proper returns to the public for franchise privileges.

Among the most important provisions of laws creating commissions for the supervision of public utilities are those relating to the franchises which may be granted to such corporations.

DEFINITION OF FRANCHISE.

Properly speaking, a franchise is a privilege vested in certain persons by grant of the sovereign authority to perform acts and to exercise powers, which, without such specific grant, they cannot perform or do. Properly speaking, therefore, a franchise emanates from the sovereign power. The State Legislature may empower a municipality to confer franchises upon public utilities companies, meaning thereby to confer upon such companies the right to the use of public property such as the streets for and in performance of the acts for which the corporations are created. The opinion of the Illinois Supreme Court (in the People v. Central Union Telephone Company, 232 Ill., 262) is that an ordinance granting to a corporation the right to occupy the streets is a license rather than a franchise. Ordinarily such a grant is considered a franchise.

In contrast with the opinion of our court is the opinion given by the Alabama Supreme Court in The Port of Mobile v. Louisville National Railway Co., 84 Ala., 115; 4 South., 106-109; 5 Am. St. Rep., 342. In this case the court held that a privilege is none the less a franchise in a proper sense of the term because it was granted under an ordinance by a city, under the sanction of the charter, and not directly by legislative enactment; and that a grant to a railroad company to construct a track in a street under the ordinance under the powers given in the charter of the city, may be considered the granting of a franchise by the legislature.

Similarly, the opinion is held that the right to build in and on the public right-of-way is a franchise. Pa. R. R. Co. v. Philadelphia Belt Line, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. R., 625-631.

In short, the distinction seems to be that if a grant to lay tracks or set poles in the public street is made to an individual or a corporation directly by the legislature, or by a municipality, under the authority of the legislature, the grant is a franchise; but that if the same grant be made by a city in the absence of a statute empowering cities to grant franchises of this kind, the grant is a license. It is questionable, however, whether a city could lawfully grant a license to any individual or corporation to use the streets in the absence of a statute conferring such power.

Compare Ghee v. Northern Union Gas Co., 56 N. Y. Supp., 450-454; 34 App. Div., 551; also Lincoln Street Railway Co. v. City of Lincoln, 84 N. W., 802-808; 61 Neb., 109.

In this opinion it is clearly held that the license given by a city to the street railway company authorizing it to use the streets of the city for its railway, is not a franchise. This is in keeping with our Supreme Court opinion. This opinion leads us to the rather curious conclusion that the right to the use of the streets, when derived from the sovereign power, is a franchise; but when derived from a municipality, the grant is a license; and that a license may be irrevocable, whereas, under our Constitution a franchise may not be.

See Chicago City Railway Co. v. People, 73 Ill., 542.

Chicago Municipal Gas, Light, etc. Co. v. Lake, 130 Ill., 56.

In this memorandum the term franchise is used to include all the rights and privileges granted to the corporation for the carrying out of the purposes of its creation, whether granted directly by the sovereign power, the Legislature; or indirectly by the same sovereign through and by act of a municipality. And it is important that any new legislation embody such a definition of the term franchise as to make it clear that grants by municipalities to operate, to use the streets, etc., on any terms and under any conditions prescribed by the city, are franchises, not mere licenses, and are revocable. The word is used here in this sense.

CLASSES OF FRANCHISES, AS TO DURATION, ETC.

A franchise may be:

a. Granted for a definite term of years without any provisions for renewal, renewal being a wholly new matter for the city council when the time comes.

b. Granted for a definite term of years with a condition that the franchise shall be renewed unless the city at the expiration of the period purchases the plant or secures another grantee of the franchise.

c. Granted without any statement of a period of years for which the franchise is to run, but subject to cancellation at any time by act of the city authorities, on the payment of the value of the plant at the time of cancellation, or on payment of a price for the plant agreed on at the time the franchise was granted.

d. Granted in perpetuity; that is, granted without specific limitation of time, and becoming a vested right that cannot be taken away by legislative action even though compensation be afforded by the municipality.

The first form of franchise, that granted for a definite period, is embodied in the present Illinois legislation. [For example, the act of 1907, fixing the period of franchise for street railways in cities at twenty years.]

FRANCHISES FOR DEFINITE PERIODS.

The advantages of a franchise for a definite period, which is not too long, are these:

1. The public does not surrender for too long a period its control over the streets.

2. The value of the franchise is less likely to become a very large factor in the value of the property.

The disadvantages of such a form of franchise are these:

1. The company must be permitted in fairness to charge a rate high enough to pay reasonable return on the investment, and also to pay for the investment by the end of the period of the franchise.

2. In strict theory the property should be allowed to wear out gradually from year to year until at the end of the period it has no value aside, of course, from the franchise. As this is impossible if the company is to continue giving service, and inasmuch as the public insists that service of equally good, or improving quality shall be rendered as the years pass, the company is obviously left in the position of having on its hands at the end of the period a property in good condition for which it may or may not get remuneration by purchase, and whose value may be completely destroyed by the refusal of a city council to renew the franchise. It is this state of affairs which has led to the alleged attempts at the corruption of city councils for franchise renewals. Obviously a group of men would be likely to resort to whatever measures were necessary to secure a renewal of their franchises under such conditions.

3. The knowledge that the franchise is limited to a definite period makes the company subject to unreasonable demands on the part of corrupt officers or of the public. The fact that the franchise is to expire at such and such a time is used as a club to enforce demands which may or may not be reasonable, either as a service or as to rates. On the other hand, the situation affords an inducement to the corporations to try to control city councils and dominate politics of the municipality.

PERPETUAL FRANCHISES.

The franchise in perpetuity, which is the last enumerated above, is also to be condemned on economic grounds. Such a grant takes the control of its streets out of the hands of the public, and adds to the value of the property of the corporation what is really public property. If such a franchise were condemned a city would be obliged to pay for the physical property and also for the present value of the franchise regarded as a perpetual right to occupy the public streets.

INTERMEDIATE FRANCHISE.

The second and third classes of franchises mentioned in the list above are both described as indeterminate. Strictly speaking, a franchise granted for a definite term of years with a condition that it must be renewed unless the city finds a new grantee or purchases the plant, is not an indeterminate franchise in the fullest sense of the term.

The true indeterminate franchise is a franchise that may be revoked by the city on due notice given at any time, with or without the condition that the city take over the physical plant at a fair price, or find another grantee to do so. The advantage in this kind of a franchise would seem to be all on the side of the city. Assuming that the law provides for regulation of service and rates, such a franchise calls upon people to invest their capital under conditions which will not likely return more than an average rate of interest, the investment to be terminable at any time. Investors cannot be expected to place their capital largely on such terms. To be fair, either such a law should include among its franchise provisions that a bonus, in addition to the fair purchase price, shall be given to the owners, at the time of purchase, if the period of operation has been short; or that the price paid must be not only such as will return a fair rate of interest, but something over and above this as compensation for the risk of termination of the investment and the necessity of reinvestment in some other form. To say nothing of the objections to paying a bonus, or a higher price than the existing market price for the physical property, such a provision introduces elements of uncertainty, and grounds for debate and objection on the part of citizens, so that this form of franchise seems inadvisable.

In the judgment of the writer, the best form of franchise for Illinois is that in which the franchise is granted for a definite period of considerable length, say twenty or twenty-five years, to be renewed at the expiration of the period, or the property paid for by the city or by some other grantee obtained by the city, with a provision for decapitalization.

Confining our attention to the economic argument, I would call attention to the following advantages of such a form of franchise:

1. The definiteness of the period admits of intelligent investment and adjustment of capital thereto. The element of uncertainty due to the possible abrupt termination of the franchise is removed. Hence investment in public utilities for a definite term that is reasonably long would be more attractive to investors.

2. The definite period removes the discussion of the franchise definitely from the political arena for a known time. Under a franchise vocable at will this would not be the case.

3. The fact that the franchise must run for a definite period prevents hasty action on occasional disagreements between the public and the company, which might be unfair to one or both, and gives time for the adoption of a definite policy or organization and management both on the part of the company and of the city under the direction of the utilities commission.

PROVISION FOR DECAPITALIZATION OF FRANCHISE.

The term for which a franchise is granted should be sufficiently long to make possible the decapitalization of the physical plant, that is to say, the amortization of the capital by the provision of a sinking fund provided for in the rates which a commission would allow to be charged, and to be put in the hands of trustees, or of the city, for the specific purpose of decapitalization or amortization. It is inadvisable to create a sinking fund from any part of the receipts of the city from the utilities company for any use other than that here urged. There are several reasons why rates should be high enough to permit the amortization spoken of.

In the first place, it is useless to provide in the law that a city must renew a franchise at the end of its life, or else buy it in, or find another grantee, unless the city actually has the money at hand to make the purchase if it so desires. In theory, a provision of the law giving the city the option to purchase seems to put the franchise still under the control of the public. In fact, it does not. For there are few cities whose people would authorize the issue of bonds for the purchase of a public utilities company whose franchise had expired. Public sentiment, on the whole, is against public ownership of utilities in general, with the possible exception of waterworks. Still less is public ownership to be advocated if it involves public operation. With such a state of public opinion it would be obviously out of the question to expect that a city would be, within any time that we can foresee, in a position to take advantage of its right of purchase under such a franchise. It seems to the writer, therefore, that such a provision in the law gives the public no advantage and no protection. For since it cannot exercise the privilege of purchase it must either renew the franchise or refuse to renew it. To refuse to renew it would be to destroy property the creation of which has been encouraged for the public benefit. It would be unjust in the highest degree to refuse to renew a franchise under such circumstances. Consequently the city and the company would be in the position that cities and companies are under our present law. That is to say, the company would feel obliged to use every means in its power to avoid being "held up" either by delay in renewing the franchise, or refusal to renew it. There would be no economic or ethical improvement over the present situation in such a condition.

Nor is the situation greatly relieved by provision that the city may find another grantee. Here again we have a theoretical suggestion which in practice would be difficult of application. In the first place the city would be obliged in all fairness to find justification for refusing a renewal to the present grantees either in poor service rendered or for some reason inimical to the public welfare; but we are assuming all the time that the company has been operating under the supervision of a utilities commission. Therefore it is altogether unlikely that conditions could have grown up which would justify the city at the end of the franchise period in refusing the renewal of a franchise to the existing grantees.

There would be no reason for asking the city to find another grantee because the existing company, by our supposition, is ready to go on with the business and is just as proper a party therefore to secure the extension of the franchise as a new grantee. In short, both these conditions, city purchase and securing of another grantee, are put into laws on the supposition that the companies against whom they are to be enforced have in some way or other failed to satisfy the public demand, or the requirements of the law; yet these companies are working under the supervision of a public commission which is bound by the law to require them to serve the public well. There is an inconsistency in supposing that the utilities commission is discharging its duty under the law, and that there exists a necessity for compelling the present holders of a franchise to vacate, on the ground that they are not complying with requirements of the commission.

Therefore, since a city cannot be expected to pay the purchase price by the issue of bonds, and since there is no reason to think it can find a new grantee unless it can offer him advantages which the existing grantees do not have, the city is powerless to do anything except renew the franchise. In order to make the desired control of the public over its streets effective at the end of the period of the franchise, some means must be found to put into the hands of the city a sufficient sum of money to purchase the plant if it wishes. The only way to do this, since bonds are unlikely, is to fix a rate of charges which will admit of the accumulation of an amortization or decapitalization fund sufficient in amount to pay the purchase price.

The price to be paid at the expiration of the time should be agreed on, or the conditions under which the price is to be determined should be agreed on, at the time the franchise is granted. It is simply an invitation to defeat the whole purpose of limitation of franchises or leave the price indeterminate, or to fix it at an amount to be determined by the capitalized income of the company at the expiration of its franchise; for the capitalized income will then include a large amount for purchase due to the demand for the services of the company coming from a growing population. It is this very increment of value, however, which it is alleged belongs to the public, and which therefore should be reserved to it. The proper basis of purchase price is the cost of construction of the physical plant, making all allowances for additions and improvements and repairs, etc., or else the cost of reproduction at the time when the franchise expires, again making all due allowances for enhancement of value due to all causes, excepting the increased value of the franchise itself.

CONSTITUTIONAL REQUIREMENTS.

The legal and constitutional aspect of the indeterminate franchise will be laid before your honorable Commission by Dean Harker, with his opinion on the matter. On this topic I am not competent to express an opinion. Nevertheless, while realizing the danger to laymen of going into legal or semi-legal questions, I venture to call attention to a few points on this phase of the question.

References in the Constitution of 1870 which bear upon the matter are as follows:

Article II, Section 14: "No ex post facto law, or law impairing the obligation of contracts, or making any irrevocable grant of special privileges or immunities, shall be passed."

Article IV, Section 22: "The General Assembly shall not pass local or special laws in any of the following enumerated cases, that is to say: forchartering or licensing ferries or toll bridges.

Granting to any corporation, association or individual, the right to lay down railroad tracks, or amending existing charters for such purposes.

Granting to any corporation, association or individual, any special or exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise whatever."

These provisions of Article IV prohibit special charters. A similar prohibition is contained in Section 1, Article XI, providing that "No corporation shall be created by special laws or its charter extended, changed or amended, except those for charitable, educational, penal or reformatory purposes, which are to be and remain under the patronage and control of the State, but the General Assembly shall provide, by general laws, for the organization of all corporations hereafter to be created."

Parts of Sections 9 and 15 of Article XI deal with railroads.

IS AN INDETERMINATE FRANCHISE AN IRREVOCABLE GRANT OF PRIVILEGES OR IMMUNITIES.

In the opinion of the writer, the conclusion that will be arrived at as to the constitutionality of pure indeterminate franchises, or franchises granted without any stipulation of a definite period for their termination, but revocable or annullable at the pleasure of the municipality on proper payment, or the observance of other conditions entered into with the company receiving the charter, depends upon the true significance of the terms "revocable" and "irrevocable." What is an irrevocable franchise, or charter, or grant?

In the ordinary acceptance of the words certainly an irrevocable franchise is one that cannot be cancelled or annulled at the pleasure of the grantor thereof, whether with or without provision for recompense, or the fulfillment of the conditions expressed in the franchise and thereby forming part of the contract.

Per contra, a franchise that is revocable is one that is annullable at the pleasure of the grantor without conditions, subject, of course to constitutional limitations as to confiscation of property.

A franchise granted without specification of a time limit has been held by our courts not to be "irrevocable," for the reason that the franchise will cease with the life of the corporation. It has also been held by our courts that such a charter is not "revocable" by the granting municipality so long as the corporation complies with the conditions of the franchise. It is therefore irrevocable within the period of life of the corporation so long as the conditions are complied with.

Our courts have also held that an ordinance granting a public utilities company a right to use the public streets is a license and not a franchise, and "may be irrevocable."

It would appear therefore that the interpretation put by the Supreme Court of Illinois upon the word "irrevocable" in Section 14, Article II, of the Constitution, is "not annullable or to be recalled or revoked excepting on the non-fulfillment of the conditions of the franchise," without any reference to the length of life of the corporation. In this view a corporation in perpetuity would hold a franchise that could never be annulled and therefore would be irrevocable so long as the conditions of the franchise were complied with. The interpretation of the Supreme court seems to be therefore that "irrevocable" applies not to time, but to the observance of the conditions of the franchise.

The statutes, however, meet this difficulty in the case of certain classes of public utilities companies, such as street railways, by limiting the period for which a franchise may be granted.

The following cases bear on several aspects of the question in hand:

1. The Board of Education of the State of Illinois vs. Julia A. Brakewell, 122 Ill., 339. In the case the court expressed the opinion that "A private corporation created by the Legislature may lose its franchises by a misuser or a non-user of them, and they may be resumed by the government under a judicial judgment upon a quo warranto to ascertain if there be grounds for a forfeiture, but not by mere legislative enactment."

2. City of Chicago vs. Rothschild and Co., December 22, 1904, 212 Ill., 590. In this case the court expressed the opinion that "Right to construct and maintain a railroad, granted by a city ordinance, is a license, and not a franchise, within the meaning of section 88 of the Practice Act, providing for a direct review by the Supreme Court of a case in which a franchise is involved."

This court has repeatedly held that a franchise is a privilege which emanates from the sovereign power—that is in a case like this, from the State—and that the power conferred upon a railroad company, by ordinance, to locate and maintain a railroad in the streets of a city is a license, which, after the road is built, may be irrevocable, but that such ordinance does not create or confer upon the railroad company constructing the railroad in the street a franchise."

Chicago City Railway Co. vs. People, 73 Ill., 541.

Metropolitan City Railway Co. vs. Chicago West Division Ry. Co., 87 Ill., 317.

Board of Trade of Chicago vs. People, 91 Ill., 80.

Mills vs. Parlin, 106 Ill., 60.

Chicago Municipal Gas Light and Fuel Co. vs. Town of Lake, 130 Ill., 42.

City of Belleville vs. Citizens' Horse Ry. Co., 152 Ill., 171.

People vs. Central Union Telephone Co., 192 Ill., 307.

Rostad vs. Chicago Suburban Water and Light Co., 211 Ill., 248.

3. The City of Rock Island vs. Central Union Telephone Co., 1907, 132 Ill. App., 248. In this the court says: "The grant to a telephone company of the power to erect poles, string its wires, and generally to construct and maintain a telephone system is not a violation by a municipality either of section 14 of Article II, or section 22 of part IV of the Constitution of the State.

A grant to a corporation aggregate, limited as to the duration of its existence, without words of perpetuity being annexed to the grant, only creates an estate for the life of the corporation."

4. The People vs. the Central Union Telephone Co., 232 Ill., 262. In this the court held: "An ordinance granting to a corporation the right to occupy the streets with telephone poles and wires but reserving the right to grant like privileges to others, does not by failing to specify the life of the grant, constitute an irrevocable grant of special privileges and immunities in violation of section 14 of Article II of the Constitution since the life of the grant is limited to the life of the corporation.

An ordinance granting to a corporation the right to occupy the streets with telephone poles and wires upon compliance with certain conditions in the ordinance, which fails to limit the life of the grant, does not create a license at the will of the city and revocable at its pleasure, and the ordinance can not be repealed so long as the corporation complies with such conditions."

5. The People vs. Economy Power Co., October 26, 1909, 241, Ill., 290. In this opinion the court says: "This court held in People vs. Chicago Telephone Co., 220 Ill., 238, and People vs. Central Union Telephone Co., 232 id., 200, that a grant to a corporation of a franchise without any limitation as to time of duration will not be held as a grant in perpetuity but will be limited to the life of the corporation to which it is granted; and the Supreme Court of the United States in Blair vs. City of Chicago, 201 U. S., 400, has expressed a like opinion. In the case last above cited, on page 485, the Supreme Court of the United States said: 'We cannot agree that the duration of these permits would be in perpetuity because of the fact that no time was named in them.'"

In the opinion of the writer the above cases would seem to indicate that in Illinois a franchise granted without specification or a definite period of life is not irrevocable in the sense of the constitution, because while it may may not be annulled or revoked during the life of the corporation, so long as the corporation complies with the conditions of its franchise, the duration of the franchise is limited to the period of life of the corporation. However, from the point of view of the interests of the public, such a franchise may be practically perpetual. It may last through several generations, and under the changing conditions of life in a great city may vitally affect the public interests detrimentally.

On the other hand the right granted by a city to a utilities corporation enabling it to use public property such as the streets without any specification of a definite period for such use, in the opinion of our courts, may become an irrevocable grant after the property has been actually utilized. As the court says, 212 Ill., 590, such an ordinance "is a license, which after the road is built, may be irrevocable." The constitution prohibits the legislature from making any irrevocable grant of special privilege, yet the court holds in this opinion that a city may do so under some conditions; or at any rate that a grant made by a city in an ordinance may be irrevocable.

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS.

In view of the cases cited and the constitutional provisions, it is the opinion of the writer of this memorandum that:

1. A pure indeterminate franchise, as defined in this memorandum namely, one which has no date of expiration, but is annulable at the pleasure of the grantor, would subject the city to the danger that it would be declared irrevocable while the company complied with the conditions of the franchise, and thereby be beyond the control of the public either by purchase or modification of the franchise.

2. An indeterminate franchise, while it would be construed by the court as being not a franchise in perpetuity, but one limited to the life of the corporation, might in practice become a franchise of such indefinite length as to be perpetual, so far as concerns the present or an immediately succeeding generation. Such a state of affairs is contrary to sound public policy because each generation certainly ought to be free to modify a public policy in accordance with new conditions, such as changing economic policies and ideas, and invention and discovery.

3. The conditions under which future franchises can be granted is wholly within the power of the Legislature subject to the constitutional provisions mentioned, and the court decisions involving the same, so far as those decisions are not applications of legislation which it is within the power of the General Assembly to change or abolish.

4. In view of all the circumstances, it is the judgment of the writer, that the safer form of franchise is that heretofore mentioned, in which a period of reasonable length is fixed for the life of the franchise, at the end of which the city may buy or secure a new grantee, or extend the franchise to the present grantee; provision being made as suggested for a sinking or amortization fund to be owned by the city for the purpose of making its option of purchase effective.

FROM WILCOX'S "MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES.

New York—The state of New York is divided into two districts, that of Greater New York City, and the remainder of the state, each having a separate commission which makes reasonable rates for, and regulates the conduct of all steam and surface railroads, common carriers, freight, sleeping car and express companies, gas and electric light, heat and power companies within their jurisdiction.

There are five commissioners for each district, appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate, but removable by the governor alone. The appointees may not be interested in, or hold stock in any company regulated. They hire their own employees; a single commissioner may hold hearings and may make investigations; has the power to compel testimony; is free from the technical rules of evidence and the witness is free from prosecutions on the grounds of evidence he may present. Orders of the commission must be signed by all three commissioners. There is no provision for court review of the findings except on constitution grounds.

The commission has power to require in the case of common carriers that their services be safe and adequate; that all charges shall be reasonable; that proper switching facilities shall be made; that all rates and schedules shall be open to public inspection, and that no special rebates, rates or discriminations shall be made nor shall passes be granted except to officers or employees of the road and to certain specified individuals. The issue of mileage and commutation tickets is permitted. To ensure the enforcement of these provisions the commission is given the power to examine into the general condition, capitalization and management of all carriers, to examine books, records, documents and other papers and to compel their production; to prescribe a uniform system of accounts and returns, to permit new constructions and transfer of franchises; and upon the request of the legislature, governor or committees on railways, to take evidence upon any proposed change of the law. It is claimed that this clause was introduced to give publicity to "strike" bills and to legislation granting special privileges to corporation of a quasi-public nature.

No railway or traction company may purchase or hold the stock of another company; nor may existing companies merge or consolidate without the approval of the commission, in which case their total capital stock shall not exceed the total stock outstanding by both companies. Evidences of indebtedness, other than short time notes, may not be issued without permission, a clause for the prevention of stock watering which is considered one of the best in the law.

The restrictions applicable to the operation of railroads and surface lines apply generally to the operation of gas and electric plants, both municipal and private, with the exception of the clause forbidding discriminatory rates. This provision is supposed to have been omitted through oversight and there is agitation for its enactment. In respect to the utilities named the commission has the power to approve incorporations and franchises, examine books and papers, investigate complaints concerning the quality of service or rates; take testimony, and require a detailed annual report from all companies. All meters must be inspected before installation, and at any time afterwards upon the payment of a small fee.

Commissioner Thoms M. Osborne considers that the most important feature of the law is that which permits the commission to authorize increased capitalization, and forbidding it to allow such increased capitalization to be based upon any franchise right in excess of the amount actually paid to the state or political sub-division for the same. He says: "The value of the franchise and the increment thereof shall remain for ever the property of the state. This to my mind is the kernel of the whole law."

Wisconsin—The regulation of public service corporations in Wisconsin is done through three separate acts. In 1905 there was created a railroad commission to consist of three members (one versed in law and two in transportation) appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate, and holding office for six years. These officers may not be interested in any fashion in any company under their control, and for abuses may be removed by the executive. In 1907 was passed a two-cent fare act affecting all roads having a gross earning of more than thirty-five hundred dollars per mile. There was also passed in 1907 the public utility law which extended the powers of the railroad commission to cover telephone and telegraph lines, electric railways, light, heat, water and power companies, both private and municipal.

The principal features of the act regulating railroads and express companies are similar to those which apply to the regulations of municipal utilities, with the exception that a great many details relative to public convenience have been prescribed which might reasonably have been left to the good judgment of the commissioners. Material which might have appeared as commission ruling, is presented as law. The most important of these statutes are grouped as follows: regulatory of municipal subscriptions to railway stocks; for the prevention of forest fires, providing for fenders and airbrakes on street cars, outlining condemnation proceedings; providing for safety devices and the liability of companies for injuries to their employees; and the limitation of the working day for trainmen to sixteen hours and of telegraphers to eight hours.

The commissioners have the power to make rates based upon the property actually used and useful, and to ascertain this may require that all books be kept according to a required form, annual reports being made. The commissioners may also hold investigations, compel the attendance of witnesses with such books and papers of the company as may be necessary, providing the usual exemptions for witnesses who testify against themselves. Actions may be taken by the commission upon its own initiative or upon formal complaint. The wording of the statute thus permits the commission to steer between rates based entirely upon a physical valuation and one made considering the market value of the stocks and bonds.

Within certain limitations passes and discriminating transportation privileges are prohibited; the issue of stocks and bonds and the consolidation of companies are regulated in large detail; the detailed cost of construction of every railroad in the state must be ascertained; accidents must be reported [and] inquired into; the construction of new lines is with the permission and under the supervision of the commission, and municipalities are permitted to build or acquire union terminals for the use of such roads as desire it.

During the consideration of this law it was considered giving the commissioners the right to determine what was a reasonable wage for certain classes of labor employed by all public service corporations. It was thought that this would terminate labor troubles in these industries. The proposition was defeated and the right of the companies to enter into sliding scale agreements with their employees was substituted.

The commission upon finding the value of a plant, and after holding a public hearing, files a statement with the utility and the clerk of the municipality in which the same is located. To facilitate this all accounts, including those of subsidiary business must be kept according to forms prescribed, and if necessary, furnished by the commission. The utilities must render statements from these accounts when such are desired. The books of all utilities are always open to the commission, and an annual balance sheet is filed with them. Such books as may be necessary must be kept within the state.

Where required an adequate depreciation account must be maintained, the rates of depreciation of the different classes of property being determined by the commission. This eliminates the necessity for a sinking fund for bonds outstanding. This fund may be expended for new construction, addition or extension to the property, or it may be invested, in which case the interest is returned to the fund. Operating expenses, however, must be strictly distinguished from the expenses just named.

Companies may enter into agreements with their customers or employees for the division of profits, or providing a sliding scale of charges, subject to suspension or regulation by the commission.

All public utilities furnish to the commission when required an itemized account showing:

1. Depreciation per unit.
2. Salaries and wages per unit.
3. Legal expenses per unit.
4. Taxes and rentals separately per unit.
5. Quantity and value of material used per unit.
6. Receipts for residuals, by-products, services or other sales separately per unit.
7. Total and net cost per unit.
8. Gross and net profit per unit.
9. Dividends and interest per unit.
10. Surplus or reserve per unit.
11. Prices paid per unit by consumers.
12. Other items such as the commission shall prescribe.

Railroads hand in a similar report somewhat different in detail.

All facts in possession of the commission are open to the public, except those which may be withheld in the public interest for not longer than ninety days.

The unit of measurement for utility products are fixed by the commission. If desired the instrument of measurement will be tested upon the premises of the consumer, upon the payment of a nominal fee. The company bears the cost if the instrument is found defective.

Public utilities must publish a schedule of charges and post them in their offices. With some exceptions no charge may be made for this schedule without ten day notice, or new rates imposed without thirty days notice.

Complaints of rates charged, as to amounts being discriminatory, unjust or preferential, may be made by any mercantile, agricultural or manufacturing society, or by anybody politic or municipal organization, or by twenty-five persons, firms or corporation. The commission then makes a preliminary investigation to determine if there are reasonable grounds for complaint, if found, they give notice to the parties concerned and commence a more thorough examination, giving the public utility ten days notice before the final public hearing. If decided against the utility must bear the cost of the examination, since it stands technically guilty of violating the law which requires that rates shall be reasonable.

If a public utility is dissatisfied with an order of the commission it may commence action in the circuit court of Dane County, the commissioners being allowed ten days notice before the commencement of the trial. All appeals must be made within ninety days. No injunction can be granted constraining the commission except through notice and hearing. If new evidence is introduced the commission is allowed five days to consider the facts, and amend its ruling if desired. Either party may appeal to the supreme court of the state within sixty days. Companies operating under franchise in Wisconsin may surrender these franchises and receive an indeterminate permit which gives a virtual monopoly unless reasonable service demands a second plant. At any period a company holding such a permit might be purchased by the municipality upon terms fixed by the commission.

1. Wisconsin forbids discriminatory rates in both railroad and other utility service.
2. A distinct court procedure is provided for appeals from rulings of the commission.
3. Intermediate franchises with the right of the municipality to purchase.
4. Applies to all the types of utilities within the State.

Massachusetts—Three different boards of three members each supervise the public-service corporations of Massachusetts. The board of railroad commissioners have under their control railroads, street railways, steam ship lines and express companies. The gas and electric board controls gas and electric companies; the highway commissioners, telegraph and telephone companies. The duties of the three commissions are similar in that way that they report all violations of the law to the attorney general; require that corporation books be kept in prescribed form, and may demand periodic reports. All boards must give formal public hearing upon receipt of complaint of rates or service which is signed by the mayor of a city, the selectmen of a town, or by twenty patrons of the company. The railroad and highway commissions may only recommend changes to the corporation; the gas and electric commissioners may order. Where recommendations are not obeyed the legislature has frequently stepped in and given the commissioners absolute power in the specific case. No corporation may issue bonds or stocks beyond the amount which its appropriate commission may deem necessary, and with gas and electric companies the bonds may not draw more than six per cent interest. Consolidating companies may not issue stock in excess of the combines stock issue unless represented by increased assets.

The railroad commissioners may act upon their own initiative and make investigations without formal complaint, and may recommend such changes in rates and equipment as may seem desirable. In the case of street railways increased accommodations may be ordered. No railway lines of any nature may be build [built] or extended without the permission of the commissioners. In addition the railroad commissioners have extensive powers concerning the abolition of grade crossings, the extension of safety appliances, improved construction, automatic brakes, larger conveniences for passengers and more humane rules concerning employees.

Aside from these general powers the gas and electric commissioners are required to ascertain the quality of gas furnished by companies. All meters are also examined for a small fee, and any meter already installed may be examined the cost to be borne by the party losing the contention. Such powers are not in detriment to those of the municipality, which may still "regulate, restrict and control all acts—which may in any manner affect the health, safety, convenience or property of the inhabitants."

With the exception of railroads the franchises which are granted are usually indeterminate, and the city may at any time vote to commence municipal activity in the lines of gas and electricity. In such a case the owner of the public service corporation located within the city may file with the city clerk specifications of the plant and the price charged. If the citizens by a vote show themselves undesirous of purchasing at that price, the commissions will be called in and a reasonable price fixed. The act then goes unto a detailed account of how municipal plants must be managed.

The control of the telegraph and telephones by the high commissioners has not been with marked success, owing both to limitation of powers and the influence of politics. It is hoped that this administration will soon be given to the board of gas and electric commissioners where it properly belongs.

PURCHASE BY CITIES OF INDETERMINATE FRANCHISES.

FROM WILCOX'S MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES.

With the exception of railroads the franchises which are granted in Massachusetts are usually indeterminate, and the city may at any time vote to commence municipal activity in the lines of gas and electricity. In such a case the owner of the public service corporation located within the city may file with the city clerk specifications of the plant and the price charged. If the citizens by a vote show themselves undesirous of purchasing at that price, the commissions will be called in and a reasonable price fixed. Companies operating under franchise in Wisconsin may surrender these franchises and receive an indeterminate permit which gives a virtual monopoly unless reasonable service demands a second plant. At any period a company holding such a permit might be purchased by the municipality upon terms fixed by the commission. The Wisconsin varies from the New York law in this particular.

In Massachussets and the District of Columbia, street railway franchises have been granted subject to revocation at any time. This form of grant is called the indeterminate franchise. When no provision is made, however, for purchasing the physical property in case of revocation, the indeterminate franchise becomes in effect practically perpetual. This is for the reason that neither the judiciary, nor the legislature, nor the city council, nor the people at large will permit the destruction by the mere revocation of a permit of large bodies of capital invested in a necessary public service. This form of the indeterminate franchise has been called "tenure during good behavior." But the penalty of forfeiture without compensation is so drastic that behavior has to become very bad indeed before any community will punish it. It appears to be true, however, that even though under this form of the indeterminate franchise no street railway grants are in practice revoked except for specific locations where street railways are no longer desired, the companies have been more diligent to respond to the demands of the public for improved service and for extensions of their lines than under either perpetual or limited-term franchises.

Increasing prestige of the indeterminate franchise—Since 1898 when the Massachussets special committee, of which Charles Francis Adams was chairman, called attention in its report to the advantages of the indeterminate franchise, there has been a great development of public interest in this form of grant, especially for street railway companies. In its primitive form, the indeterminate franchise is found in Massachussets and the District of Columbia. In these jurisdictions, street railway grants may be revoked at any time without compensation to the companies having property in the streets. This form of franchise was described by Mr. Adam's committee as extremely illogical in theory but the practical results of its application, in Massachussets were such as to command the committee's praise. Shortly after the publication of the Massachussets Committee's report, the indeterminate franchise found an able advocate in Mr. George C. Sikes, a well-known municipal expert whose ideas had great practical influence, especially in Chicago. Still later, the advocacy of the indeterminate franchise has been taken up actively by Dr. Milo R. Maltbie, now a member of the public service commission for the first district in New York, and largely as a result of his efforts, the indeterminate franchise has also been recognized in the Wisconsin public utilities act passed in 1907, and in the new constitution of Michigan adopted in 1908. Congress, following its policy already well-established in the District of Columbia, incorporated the indeterminate franchise in its legislation for Porto Rico and the Phillippine Islands. The new street railway franchise of Chicago and Cleveland, which have already been described in a preceding chapter, also recognize the fundamental idea of the indeterminate grant, which has been characterized as "tenure during good behavior." Unquestionably, with the recognition of the unspeakable wrong that is inherent in the grant of the perpetual franchises and the great practical disadvantages that usually arise in connection with limited-term grants, public sentiment is rapidly crystallizing in favor of the indeterminate franchise as the most promising present basis for public control of the street railways. It is fair to say, however, that in Massachussets, where the indeterminate franchise is regarded by many as substantially a perpetual franchise, there is considerable sentiment for limited-term grants. Mayor James Logan, of Worcester, is one of those who disapprove of the indeterminate franchise.

"The policy of the state of Massachussets is not to limit franchises," says he. "It is not the law, but the policy of the state as laid down by the Railroad Commission. In 1907 there was an amendment made to the law whereby franchises could be revoked, subject to the Railroad Commission, but that does not meet with the approval of the writer. I want the franchise to state its limit, for the mind of man cannot now conceive what the conditions may be ten to twenty years from now, and I want the franchise to end so that the city can get a new one and put into it the conditions which time and experience develop."

The fact that a public official so intelligent and so highly reputed as Mayor Logan should express his discontent with conditions that prevail under the Massachusetts form of indeterminate franchise, calls attention to the importance of the particular form which the indeterminate franchise may take in any particular state or city. It is undoubtedly illogical as the Massachusetts committee of 1897 stated, that a street railway franchise should be treated as a mere revocable permit if by its revocation, at the whim of the governmental authorities temporarily in power, a great body of invested capital will be destroyed and a necessary public service interrupted. Whatever actual security the investor and the public may enjoy under such precarious conditions, must result from a continuous spirit of moderation among governmental officials and a complaisant attitude toward private corporation of public utilities which may perhaps be characteristic of the people of Massachusetts and the United States Congress, but which could hardly be expected in some of the communities and legislative bodies of the United States. It is important, therefore, to take notice of the modifications of the Massachusetts plan as incorporated in the Chicago and Cleveland franchises, the New York rapid transit law and the Wisconsin public utilities act. In those franchises and laws the principle of the indeterminate grant is coupled with the requirement that when a franchise is revoked, the city shall purchase the property which has been invested under the franchise. In other words, the indeterminate franchise in its later forms provides not only for continuous control by the city over its streets and its transit problems, but also for the guaranty of the capital which is invested in good faith in the rendering of a continuous public service.

Under the amendment to the rapid transit act (New York) the public service commission, with the approval of the local authorities, may grant a franchise for the construction and operation of a subway by private capital. It is required, however, that in any such franchise there shall be a reservation to the city of the right to terminate the grant and purchase the subway and its equipment, including power plant, at any time after the expiration of ten years from the commencement of operation. The price that may be paid is limited to actual cost, plus fifteen per cent if [of] the property if purchased immediately upon the expiration of the ten-year period. If purchase is deferred, however, it is provided that the price at which the property can be taken over shall gradually decrease until at the end of the full term of the grant nothing shall be paid except for equipment. The franchise must provide that the gross income derived from the operation of the railroad, after deducting operating expenses, taxes, payments to reserve and sinking funds and not more than six per cent annual interest on the actual cost of construction and equipment, shall be divided share and share alike between the city and the grantee. At any time within one year prior to the date of the termination or forfeiture of the franchise by the city, or prior to the expiration of the full term of the grant, the public service commission may, with the approval of the board of estimate and apportionment, grant a new franchise or may enter into contracts for the equipment, maintenance or operation of the railroad or may itself operate the road. After the proposed franchise has been prepared and approved as to form by the local authorities, the commission may advertise for proposals or bids, all of which shall refer to the proposed certificate or franchise and shall after the terms upon which the bidder will undertake to construct, equip, maintain and operate the railroad in so far as to set forth any or all of the following matters, as may be required by the commission: "(1) the annual interest desired upon the cost of construction and equipment prior to payment of any part of income or increase to the city; (2) the period at the end of which the plant and property except equipment, shall become the property of the city without compensation; (3) the amount of money for which galleries for subsurface structures to be paid for with public money in connection with the construction of such railroad will be constructed; (4) such transfer conveniences with other roads, specifications as to the cost of construction and other provisions as the commission may think proper to require." After receiving bids, the commission may reject all such proposals and readvertise, "or may accept any of such proposals as will, in the judgment of said commission, best promote the public interest and grant a franchise and execute such certificate accordingly, subject to the approval of the board of estimate and apportionment."

Massachusetts is the home of the indeterminate franchise. In that state street railway "locations" may be revoked by the local authorities at any time after the expiration of one year from the date of a franchise; but the revocation, unless accepted by the franchise holder, is subject to approval by the State Board of Railroad Commissioners. In legislating for the District of Columbia, Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands, the United States Congress has followed the example of Massachusetts and has established the indeterminate franchise. The new street railway ordinances of Chicago also reserve to the city the right to terminate them at any time by the purchase of the property. Wisconsin, in its public utilities law passed in 1907, adopted the principle of the indeterminate franchise for all future grants, and also authorized companies operating under limited-term franchises to surrender them and accept indeterminate permits.

The above extracts were taken from "Municipal Franchises" by Delos F. Wilcox.

Mr. Glackin, on behalf of the minority of the special joint committee appointed by the Forty-seventh General Assembly to investigate public utilities made the following report and, on motion of Mr. Glackin, 2,500 copies of the same were ordered printed:

MINORITY REPORT OF THE SPECIAL JOINT COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE PUBLIC UTILITIES CREATED BY HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 24 OF THE FORTY-SEVENTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY (KNOWN AS THE ILLINOIS LEGISLATIVE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION.)

To the Honorable Edward F. Dunne, Governor, and the Senate and House of Representatives of the Forty-eighth General Assembly:

The ultimate object of House Joint Resolution No. 24 was to make such an investigation and to gather such information from which a general public utilities law might be drafted and enacted in accordance with the institutions of government as organized and executed in the State of Illinois. To attain this end three main propositions must be clearly kept in mind.

First—Any such law enacted should contain the best that has been accomplished in other states not inconsistent with our laws, and should be so drawn as to give complete remedy for the evils now existing.

Second—The principle of local self-government has long been jealously guarded and preserved by the people of Illinois, and perhaps in no other state of the union is the measure of local government broader or more beneficially administered. Any law enacted should not interfere with or impair this principle, and should not only protect and preserve it, but should broaden the powers of the larger municipalities in the State to work out their own local public utility problems, and if sufficient breadth of power is granted, it may be certainly relied upon that the proper solution will follow. It is a doctrine that can generally be relied upon, that if those who are governed are allowed to make their own mistakes and at the same time given the power to correct them, that such correction is sure to follow.

Third—At the date of the drafting of this minority report, three general public utility bills have been put in print. Two of these have already been introduced into the Legislature, and the other bill will be introduced into the Legislature today. It is accordingly considered appropriate and desirable to make an analysis in detail of these three bills to see whether or not they measure up to the full standard of the principles laid down in this report which should be embodied in a well considered, progressive public utility law. There is submitted with this report a fourth general public utilities bill which, it is thought, meets and measures up to the standard herein set forth.

I.

Under the first of the foregoing subdivisions, it is certainly little less than axiomatic to say that a public utilities law should cover all the public utilities within the State in order to be fair to all citizens and to all financial interests. By this we mean all privately owned and operated public utilities. The theory of public utility ownership and operation by private corporations and individuals rests upon the principle that the right and franchise is in the first instance and is ultimately in the public, and that where private corporations and persons have been permitted to own and operate public utilities which supply to the public, services, products or commodities, this has been done because the public has not up to the present time found it advantageous to own and operate such public utilities, and it is because of this permission granted to private corporations and persons to own and operate these utilities and because of the fact that the right and franchise is in the public, that the public has a right to regulate such utilities. It likewise follows that where the public itself owns and operates a public utility that the reason for regulation does not exist. Consequently, all public utilities owned and operated by a municipality should be exempted from the scope and operation of a public utilities law so far as their regulation is concerned, but any public utilities law to be complete should make broad provision whereby the public may acquire, own, and operate the utilities by which it is supplied with services, products and commodities.

An efficient system of public utilities regulation should provide authority:

First—to investigate all utilities by the aid of experts to the end that full and complete information may be obtained and kept on file at all times covering the value of the property owned by the public utility, whether tangible or intangible; the location of the same; the method of conducting business; its officers; the names of all persons owning its stocks and bonds; and all information that may enable a public utilities commission to efficiently regulate the services performed or rendered by the public utility in the interest of both the public at large and the persons whose funds are invested in it.

Second—A uniform system of accounting for all public utilities of the same class or kind is one of the most efficient means for providing for regulation.

Third—The amount of capital stock issued and outstanding, the amount of bonded or other indebtedness issued and outstanding, should be kept carefully under the control and supervision of the commission which should be given power to grant or refuse an increase in capital stock or bonded indebtedness, and to require the public utility, whenever just and reasonable, to retire or reduce such portions of its capital stock or bonded indebtedness as do not represent a bona fide investment.

Fourth—The power to fix rates and to prescribe rules, practices and regulations for the operation of a public utility is the highest and most important power that can be conferred upon the commission, and all other powers granted by a public utilities law must lead up to this end. All such rates, rules and regulations must not only be just and reasonable, non-discriminatory and fair to the public, but such rates must alike be just and equitable to those who have invested their money in the public utility, and they must be high enough and the regulations for operation must be reasonable, to the end that sufficient income will be produced to pay a fair return upon the investment, and to provide, by way of depreciation and other funds, for repairs, replacements, extensions and additions.

Fifth—Lastly, after rates and regulations have been fixed by order of a commission, the method of judicial review must be very carefully considered and worked out to the end that those who have invested their money shall not be denied the just and equal protection of the law under its due process.

The public is entitled to receive under a public utilities law better and cheaper service and the assurance that it will not be required to pay dividends on watered stock and interest on bonds, the proceeds of which have not been put into the public utility enterprise, and the investor is entitled to receive protection and conservation of his investment and the taking of the business completely out of politics, whether State or local.

II.

There is a strong public sentiment in the city of Chicago and the larger cities throughout the State in favor of separate local regulation of public utilities. In the state of New York two commissions have been created; one for greater New York city, and the other for the state at large outside of the city. The large territorial area of the city of Chicago and the ever multiplying problems of her local transportation, as well as the problems relating to gas and electricity for heat, light, power and telephone service make it imperative that a separate commission should be created to give its entire time to their solution. A single commission composed of five members would be unable to deal with the problems for the entire State with Chicago included. The law should create a separate commission for Chicago, and the scope and powers of its jurisdiction should be clearly defined and set forth in the Act, and in keeping with the spirit that has made Chicago great and prosperous we believe that the members of this commission should be appointed by the mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the city council. It has been pointed out in the majority report of this committee that the New York city commission is appointed by the governor of the state. This does not necessarily argue or prove that the same course should be followed as to Chicago. The forces that control Chicago and make her great are different from those that control New York city. Chicago founded in 1837 is seventy-six years old. New York founded in 1613 is three hundred years old. The latter is ruled by traditions and interests. Chicago is built and governed by a resourceful citizenship of intelligent, common people, each generation of whom surpasses its predecessor in achievement and the secret of Chicago's success lies in the fact that she has been permitted to advance free from the imposition of burdensome State regulation. If she is to continue to grow and outstrip all of her competitors, this condition must be preserved.

The Honorable Edward F. Dunne, Governor of Illinois, in his inaugural address before the Forty-eighth General Assembly, speaking upon the subject of public utilities, had this to say of local regulation:

"In addition to a law conferring the right of municipal ownership, and another creating a State utilities commission, we need legislation conferring upon cities that choose to exercise it, the same rights of control over all their city utilities that they now possess with respect to water companies. Chicago secured such a right with respect to gas and electric companies about six years ago. A similar law, with perhaps some additional powers, should be passed for all cities.

After some experience with the legislation, recommended above, we shall be in better position to determine whether the powers of the city commission should be further increased. It is, of course, desirable, and in accordance with the Democratic policy, to confer as much home rule as possible upon cities, and to concentrate in State and national hands only such powers as are State or nation-wide in their scope.

To Chicago, and all cities over one hundred thousand population, might be given the right, enjoyed by the city of St. Louis, of creating its own commission, which would report directly to the city council, and be given as much powers and resources as may be conferred upon it by the city itself."

The Honorable Charles S. Deneen, Governor of Illinois, in his last biennial message, January 8, 1913, speaking of a public utilities commission, had this to say concerning home rule:

"The next matter of importance concerns the scope of authority of such commission. Home rule is the fundamental principle of government in this country. It is important that this principle shall be conserved as far as possible in all governmental activities, national, State and local. In pursuance of the principles of home rule, we would naturally expect to let at least the more important municipalities of the State create and manage their own commissions on public utilities. On the other hand, the efficiency of such commissions might possibly be impaired by a limitation of their authority by city lines. However, the greatest advantage to the people will doubtless accrue from the creation of two commissions, one for the city of Chicago, and the other for the rest of the State. The public utilities problems of the city of Chicago are so great and so complex as to require the entire attention of such a body of experts as would compose the commission."

Not less than the interest of the citizens of the city of Chicago is that of the larger cities throughout the State. While their public utility problems may not be as numerous or complex as those of a city having more than two million inhabitants, the proper solution of the problems in the smaller cities is just as vital to them and the interest taken by their citizens is just as keen as in the case of Chicago.

It should be borne in mind that the great bulk of work to be performed by a State public utilities commission, if one commission only should be created, would be done for the benefit of the inhabitants of the larger cities, and the expense of the commission would be due in large measure to this work done in behalf of the larger municipalities. It is here where the farmers and those living in the smaller municipalities or communities of the State in whose behalf only a minor portion of the commission's work would be expended should be thought of, and protected in the matter of expense. If only one commission is created for the State at large, the greater part of the burden of expense would fall upon the rural communities, and if a law is enacted which creates a city commission for Chicago, and authorizes the remaining larger municipalities in the State at their option to create municipal commissions, the expenses of these city and municipal commissions will be borne by the cities and the rural communities will be relieved. Why should the State at large pay the tax when the cities are willing to bear the burden? Furthermore, it is incumbent upon the State Legislature and the executive administration to keep down State appropriations and administer the State government as economically as possible.

It is estimated by the majority of this committee "that a single commission for Illinois would require about four hundred thousand dollars annually for its maintenance." It is further proposed: "The cost of maintenance should be imposed in the first instance, upon the utility companies, this cost will necessarily constitute part of the operating expenses of the company to be considered in the rates established for the particular class of service. Accordingly, your committee has provided for a tax of one hundred dollars upon each utility company in the State of Illinois, and an additional imposition of one mill upon the gross earnings of each of such companies in the State."

The foregoing proposal is open to two serious objections. In the first place, it is wrong in morals to require the public utility to pay for its own regulation, for if it is lawfully engaged in business, and is performing a service of benefit to the public, the expense of such regulation should be borne by the public, and if it is not lawfully engaged in business and is not performing a service beneficial to the public, it should be put out of business entirely. The second objection is that there are grave doubts as to whether or not the proposed tax of one hundred dollars upon each utility company and one mill upon gross earnings does not amount to an unjust discrimination by the way of taking property without due process of law, and at the same time it seems quite clear that such a provision would amount to class legislation.

The argument for jurisdiction of local utilities to be placed under the State commission if carried to its logical conclusion might readily be invoked to extend the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission over State and local utilities if the same were permissible under the Constitution. The principle is the same. The question of application is only a matter of degree and possibility under the United States constitution.

The majority of this committee through several labored paragraphs undertakes to demonstrate that city or municipal commissions mean political interference and that the public utilities, to use the language of Chairman Roemer of Wisconsin, "would be appointing the commission * * * and would be regulating themselves." This is an individual's opinion, and while entitled to a certain amount of respect and consideration it should not be forgotten that there is but very little difference in politics in one part of the State from that in another. The real question as to whether political interference would still remain would depend upon whether or not the city or municipal commission created was of such a permanent and stable character and clothed with such broad powers and supervision that it could accomplish the purpose of its creation. The fact should not be overlooked that the corporations of Wisconsin are quite fond of the Wisconsin commission, and that it has the reputation of being quite favorable to them. This commission has been organized along lines and theories laid down by certain professors and graduates of the University of Wisconsin, and while it has produced many commendable results, it might not be amiss to exercise a rather more careful supervision in the interest of the public at large.

The majority report, at page 32, says: "Almost without exception outside of the city of Chicago the municipal authorities freely admitted they are unable to deal intelligently with questions pertaining to rate making, valuations of utility properties, application of the principles of depreciation, the compulsion of proper and adequate service, and the many scientific, technical engineering and accounting questions necessary to the proper regulation of public service corporations."

This certainly does not prove that local municipal commissions would not accomplish what the municipal authorities thus far have been unable to attain. It rather proves that these local authorities have failed in their efforts because they have not been provided with the machinery and the power necessary to enable them to take up the solution of these questions in a scientific way. The city of Chicago during the past fifteen years, with very scant authority to handle public utility questions, has accomplished more than any other city on the continent along these lines.

Would anybody contend that the office of Commissioner of Public Works for the city of Chicago should be abolished, and that a State official should be appointed in his stead? We think not, and the reason is that this office can be exercised more wisely by a local official than by a distant authority.

The majority of the committee thinks it has a good illustration in the supervision of health, and says, "matters pertaining to the supervision of health, whether belonging to Cairo or Chicago, are supervised by the State authorities." This may be true to a certain extent, but the fact remains that Chicago has her local health department which carries on the real work of health supervision in the city. The city of Chicago for the year 1913 appropriated $723,211.20 for its health department, which is one of the most efficient in the land, while the Legislature appropriated for the State Board of Health only $103,000.00 for the year of 1912. It is readily seen that the city of Chicago expends more than seven times as much yearly for health protection of its citizens and those of the State at large as the State Board.

III.

PUBLIC UTILITY BILLS.

1. The public utility bill introduced into the Senate by Senator Ettelson, and known as the Senate Bill Number 7, is modeled after the New York Act, but does not contain some of the later amendments and improvements of that Act. It provides two commissions; one commission for the city of Chicago; in this respect it is to be commended. But there is considerable doubt, however, as to whether the section, as drafted, creating the commission for Chicago is constitutional. The bill is further to be commended in that it provides for abolishing the Railroad and Warehouse Commission, and in many other respects it is a good bill. It does not provide, however, for regulation by the smaller cities throughout the State, nor give them authority to create their own commissions. It contains no provisions for municipal ownership, and might be improved by broadening its stock and bond provisions.

2. The bill prepared by Senator Dailey, chairman of this committee, submitted with the majority report and which has been supervised and criticised by Dean Kinley, Dean Harker, and Professor Fairlie of the State University of Illinois, is open to many serious objections. This bill creates only one commission, and includes within its jurisdiction municipal and quasi municipal corporations. This would include the public waterworks of all the cities, villages and incorporated towns throughout the State. The public utilities included within its scope are, street railroads, telephone and telegraph lines, those furnishing water, steam, gas, electricity or energy for light, heat, fuel or power, tunnels or subways, in any city, for any purpose, for which a charge is made to the public, and storage, wharfage, yardage, depot and terminal facilities. Railroads and interurban railroads are not included, and the Railroad and Warehouse Commission is not abolished. This is certainly a weakness in the bill, while the Railroad and Warehouse Commission Act contains some good provisions, the Railroad and Warehouse Commission is not given broad enough jurisdiction to accomplish any great measure of positive good. Furthermore, the bill does not include any of the public utilities where their rates and services are now regulated and controlled by any commission, board or statute of this State. This latter is a very deceptive proviso, and in its final analysis might turn out to give the commission very little power.

The majority, after arguing at great length in this report against political interference with public utility regulation, proceeds to incorporate the proviso in this bill "that no more than three members of said public utilities commission shall be of the same political party," thus at the outset basing its composition upon political considerations rather than fitness.

A close analysis of section 64 of this bill we believe, will disclose that it has been most carefully drawn with the view of facilitating the sale, transfer, lease, merger or consolidation of public utility properties, rights, franchises and privileges. Such sales, transfers, leases, mergers and consolidations are expressly declared to be lawful, and the manner in which they may be effectuated is set out in detail. It is then provided that if any shareholder objects to any such purchase, lease, consolidation or merger, he shall give notice of his dissent within thirty days thereafter, and may demand payment for his stock, and shall thereupon receive from the utility its fair, cash value. If he shall refuse to part with his stock, or the value of the same cannot be agreed upon, then the public utility shall within ninety days proceed to acquire the stock and interest of such dissenting stockholder, by the exercise of the power and right of eminent domain which is conferred upon the public utility for that purpose, and any stock so acquired shall be cancelled. If the dissenting stockholder shall not give notice of his dissent within thirty days, as provided, he shall be held to have acquiesced in the agreement of sale, lease, consolidation or merger, and shall be subject thereto. These provisions are unmistakable in their terms and speak most eloquently in behalf of the majority stockholders of any public utility. They serve notice in advance that minority stockholders must keep silence or get out. This same section in item "I" also provides that the purchase, sale, lease or consolidation and merger authorized "shall not be held or construed as a violation of the provisions of any ordinance, or bond given thereunder * * *." This clause is evidently intended to impair rights of municipalities under ordinances already passed and obligations entered into, and further to impair the power of such municipalities to contract in the future by ordinance or to require bonds of public utilities. Here again the interests of the public are sacrificed and the privileges of the public utility are confirmed and strengthened.

Section 66 sets forth that "no municipal corporation or quasi municipal corporation or body politic shall build, maintain or operate for other than its sole municipal purposes, any works or system for the furnishing of any of the commodities or rendering any of the services herein referred to, without a certificate to so do, being first granted by the commission. If the commission refuses an application to issue such a certificate, no proceedings shall be taken by such municipal or like corporation before the commission. A new application, however, may be made for such privilege after one year from the date of such refusal." This is an open and direct attack upon municipal ownership. It is a clog or condition intended to make municipal ownership difficult and actually impossible where public utility corporations might be able to influence or control the action of the commission.

The bond and stock provisions of the bill are contained in section 67, which is quite lengthy, and at lines 50 to 56 includes a proviso as follows: "Provided, however, that the commission shall have no power or authority over any surplus earnings or assets of any public utility accrued prior to the taking effect of this Act, and all such surplus earnings and assets may at any time be distributed to the stockholders of such public utility, or such stockholders may be given certificates of increased capital stock, in such public utility, representing their aliquot part of such surplus earnings or assets." This proviso is questionable in that it is susceptible of a construction under certain circumstances which might work positive injury to the public. It is conceivable that a public utility whose stock had already been largely watered and inflated and which had yet by unfair discriminations and unjust rates been able to accumulate a large surplus. Now, to guarantee to this public utility the right to issue certificates of increased capital stock would be clearly giving it the power to oppress the public more grievously in the future than in the past. We deem this proviso to be hostile to the interest of the public at large, and are of the opinion that a properly drawn bill should confer the power upon the commission to grant or withhold its consent to all issues of stock subsequent to the taking effect of this Act.

This bill does not provide any means for regulation by the larger cities of the State. It holds out no hope or encouragement for municipal ownership, and far from being progressive in its terms and provisions we believe it to be unquestionably retrogressive.

3. A third bill has been prepared by Professors Fairlie and Dodd of the State University at the request of Governor Edward F. Dunne. This bill provides for one commission only consisting of five members to be appointed by the Governor. Cities, villages and incorporated towns, and other municipal corporations are included within its jurisdiction. This, as observed as to the preceding bill, would place all municipal water works under the supervision of the State commission, and take the control of the same out of the local municipal authorities.

Article 6 of the bill seeks to give to cities authority to prescribe terms and conditions by which public utilities may occupy streets; to require public utilities to make additions and extensions; to regulate adequacy and safety of product and service; to determine just and reasonable rates; to prevent unjust and unreasonable discrimination, and then clouds and qualifies these provisions by an ambiguous proviso contained in section 81, thereby rendering the grant of power to such municipalities very uncertain.

Section 82 of the bill provides as follows: "Any city of over twenty-five thousand inhabitants may by ordinance provide for a committee or local commission or commissioner to make investigation into all facts and matters relating to any public utility franchise, additions and extensions, the quality, quantity and safety of service, and the establishment of just and reasonable rates or other charges, or the prevention of discrimination in rates or other charges, and the service of public utilities within the territorial limits of such city. After any such investigation, the committee or local commission or commissioner shall report its or his findings and recommendations to the city council." This is the only provision for the creation of city or municipal commissions, and is entirely too scant and limited in its terms to give any adequate measure of relief or authority in this respect. If it is at all intended to authorize cities to create commissions, reasonably broad provisions should be given whereby the public utility problems in such cities can be properly solved. It should be provided that any municipal commission so created should be clothed with all the power and authority of proce-ture given to the State commission, both before the commission and in the courts. Otherwise, no real measure of relief is granted and the cities would be driven to seek redress under the State commission, and this is the evident intent clearly since so little authority and power is granted that they will be forced to rely upon the State commission.

This bill, while in some respects presenting some good features, grants so little in the way of home rule or local regulation, that it may be considered a negligible quantity in this respect.

4. The minority of this committee has prepared a bill which it presents with this report, and commends to the serious consideration and most careful scrutiny of the Governor of the State of Illinois, and the members of the Legislature. This bill seeks to give a careful definition of all public utilities, and to clearly define jurisdiction. It provides for the creation of a city commission for all cities having over one hundred thousand inhabitants, and for a State commission for the rest of the State, except as provided for cities having less than one hundred thousand inhabitants and more than twenty thousand inhabitants. As to cities of this latter class, they are given the option of regulating the public utilities within their corporate limits through their city councils, and to that end may apply to the State commission for information and data useful in such regulation. They may turn over to the jurisdiction of the State commission one or more public utilities for a period of five years and may thereafter resume the control of the same, or they are given the further power to create their own municipal commissions, and to pay such salaries as they may be able to pay. These municipal commissions which may be created by municipalities having less than one hundred thousand inhabitants and more than twenty thousand inhabitants are given "all and every the like, necessary and appropriate powers and full and complete supervision, regulation and control, including all powers of procedure, remedies, forfeitures and penalties provided for the State commission or any city commission." (See Section 24.) A city commission in a city of over one hundred thousand inhabitants shall consist of three members, and shall be appointed by the mayor for a term of six years, by and with the consent of the city council. The State commission shall consist of five members and shall be appointed for a term of six years by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The jurisdiction of the city commission shall extend to railroads, so far as local transportation is concerned, to street railroads and independent subways or tunnels, to other common carriers, so far as local transportation is concerned, to gas and electricity for heat, light and power, to telephone lines as operated within city limits, to water power, to the capital stock, bonds, and other securities of the aforesaid public utilities, and to the franchises, licenses, permits and contracts of any such public utilities: Provided, however, that the city shall still retain its jurisdiction over all licenses, permits, contracts and bonds relative to the laying of tracks, erecting of poles, stretching of wires, laying of pipes, and so forth, except where any extension or addition may be required. All other jurisdiction is conferred upon the State commission, except as provided for municipalities having less than one hundred thousand inhabitants and more than twenty thousand inhabitants. Public utilities owned and operated by municipalities are, however, excepted from the jurisdiction of any commission. The bill confers upon the commissions created thereunder broad powers to fix and regulate rates, and establish rules, practices and regulations for all public utilities under their jurisdiction; to prevent discrimination; to provide for quality; quantity; efficiency and investigation of public utility service or commodities supplied; forbids free or reduced service; abolishes passes, except as to public utility employees, ministers of religion and other excepted classes; makes broad provisions for uniform reports of all public utilities; provides for depreciation accounts and the valuation of all property of any public utility, and authorizes the commission to classify public utilities, and gives ample power to provide for extensions and additions of plant, line or equipment of service, and to provide for additional trains and schedules; provides for physical connections between railroads, street railroads and telephone and telegraph companies, and for joint rates and through routes. It abolishes the Railroad and Warehouse Commission, and repeals the Railroad and Warehouse Commission Act, retaining, however, the best provisions of that Act relating to reports by railroads and long and short haul provisions; makes ample provision for the testing, efficiency and quality of any service or product supplied to the public and provides for hearing of complaints.

The stock and bond provisions, and those relating to franchises, consolidations and reorganizations, of this bill, have been carefully considered and the best that is contained in the New York, Wisconsin and California acts have been adopted. An article of twelve sections has been included conferring powers of municipal ownership of public utilities. This has been drawn closely following the provisions of the Chicago Charter Act adopted by the Forty-fifth General Assembly in 1907.

The provisions with reference to practice and procedure before the various commissions and the courts have been drawn with especial care, and are carefully worked out within the limitations of our Constitution. They provide ample means for investigating all public utility questions, and specify forfeitures and penalties that may be imposed in case of violation of the provisions of the Act or any order or decision entered by a commission.

The minority of your committee firmly believe that the bill presented herewith and recommended to the Governor of the State and the members of the State Legislature if enacted into a law will afford the broadest possible measure of relief to the people of the State, and therefore, urge its adoption and enactment.

Respectfully submitted,

COMMITTEE

EDWARD J. GLACKIN,
Senate,

GEORGE W. ALSCHULER,
House of Representatives.

Mr. Thaddeaus B. Scouten, special Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, appointed April 16, 1913, to serve subpoenas issued in pursuance of Senate Resolution No. 57, adopted on yesterday, appeared at the Bar of the Senate and reported that he had served a subpoena, duly issued upon John Hill, Jr., of Chicago, Illinois, and that said John Hill, Jr., was now present at the Bar of the Senate as required by the subpoena.

The President of the Senate with the unanimous acquiescence of the Senate appointed on behalf of the Senate to examine the witness John Hill, Jr., the following: Senators Dailey, O'Connor, Jones.

On motion of Mr. Dailey, the Senate resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole with the President of the Senate presiding, as provided for by Senate Resolution No. 57.

After being in session for some time, Mr. Dailey, from the Committee of the Whole, made the following report to the Senate which had been reconvened by the President of the Senate:

Senator Dailey—The committee of the whole of the Senate in reference to Senate Resolution 57, beg leave to report to the Senate that pursuant to the terms of this resolution, Mr. John Hill, Jr. was subpoenaed to appear before the committee of the whole as a witness, and did appear, and testified to matters pertaining to the resolution. From the testimony of Mr. Hill it was apparent to the committee of the whole that he had no information or knowledge upon the question of any fund being collected for use for improper or illegitimate purposes, but that in his testimony he stated that he had knowledge of a fund being collected by certain persons in Chicago, whose names are as follows:

Charles B. Pierce, of Bartlett Frazer & Co.

Robert McDougall, of Knight & McDougall.

John H. Jones.

Arthur G. Delaney, of Logan & Bryan.

John E. Belot.

And the committee of the whole would therefore request that subpoenas be issued for the parties just named to be and appear before the Senate acting as a committee of the whole on next Wednesday at 10:00 o'clock a. m., and that the proper officer of the Senate be designated or appointed for serving process upon the persons to appear at the time and place hereinbefore mentioned.

On motion of Mr. Dailey, the foregoing report made by him was adopted, and subpoenas ordered issued for the parties named in said report.

PRESENTATION OF RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Tossey offered the following resolution, which, under Rule 39, was laid on the table for one day:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 36.

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives thereof concurring, That a joint committee of ten be appointed, composed of five Senators, to be named by the Senate, and five Representatives, to be named by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to examine the expenditures and condition of the public institutions of the State, and to confer with the officers of the different State institutions and departments and the State Board of Administration, in order to ascertain if it is possible to reduce the expenditures of these institutions without impairing their efficiency, and to report to the Governor.

The officers and employees of the public departments and institutions of the State are hereby requested to supply, on the request of said committee, all books, documents, and other information in their possession relevant to the purpose of such examination.

The committee shall have authority to employ stenographers, clerks and other assistants necessary to carry on such examination and to make their report; the expense thereof to be paid out of the contingent funds of the Senate and House of Representatives, or out of any appropriation made therefor, on vouchers properly signed and approved by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives and filed with the Auditor of Public Accounts.

Mr. Manny offered the following resolution:

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 59.

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate is hereby authorized to appoint a bill proof reader of the Senate for the remainder of the session at four dollars ($4.00) per day.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Manny, the rules were suspended and the foregoing resolution was taken up for immediate consideration, and, on his motion, was adopted.

The Secretary of the Senate then announced that as provided for by the foregoing resolution he had appointed George S. Skinner, Jr.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

Mr. Canaday introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 437, for "An Act to amend section 1 of an Act entitled, 'An Act to regulate the practice of pharmacy in the State of Illinois, to make an appropriation therefor, and to repeal certain Acts therein named,' approved May 11, 1901, in force July 1, 1901, as amended by Act approved and in force January 17, 1908,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Judiciary.

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Primary Elections.

Mr. Womack introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 451, for "An Act to amend section 244 of an Act entitled, 'An Act to revise the law in relation to criminal jurisprudence,' approved March 27, 1874, in force July 1, 1874,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Womack introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 452, for "An Act making an appropriation for the relief of the suffering and destitute residents in the State of Illinois, caused by the recent floods in the State and for the families and dependents of such sufferers,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. Cornwell, by request, introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 453, for "An Act to amend sections 5 and 8 of an Act entitled, 'An Act to revise the law in relation to ne creat,' approved March 12, 1874, in force July 1, 1874,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Judiciary.

The following resolution, received from the House of Representatives April 16, 1913, was taken up for consideration:

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 23.

WHEREAS, An Act was passed by the Forty-third General Assembly amending the general election law of this State, entitled, "An Act to provide for the use of voting machines at elections for casting, registering, recording and counting ballots or votes; also creating a board of voting machine commissioners and defining its duties." (Approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903.)

Sec. 430. SUBMISSION OF QUESTION OF ADOPTING VOTING MACHINE—CONSTRUCTION OF MACHINE—REQUIREMENTS SPECIFIED]. SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That anybody or board of public officials, or any officer or officers charged by law with the duty of providing material and supplies for holding an election or elections in any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State, may at any general or special election submit a proposition to the qualified voters thereof to adopt a voting machine or voting machines, and whenever a majority of the electors of any such city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division voting upon said proposition shall have declared therefor, may purchase or lease a voting machine or voting machines for any or all of the election precincts for which he, it or they are by law charged by law with the duty of providing material and supplies for holding an election or elections, at the expense of the city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State now chargeable by law with the expenses of the material and supplies for holding general elections in such civil division or divisions. If the question of using a voting machine or voting machines be not submitted to the voters by the proper public officials, a petition signed by 10 per cent of the voters of any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State and addressed to them at least sixty days before any general election asking the submission of the question of adopting a voting machine or voting machines shall compel the submission of the question to the voters at that election. Use of such machines may be discontinued on resubmission of the question and a vote in favor thereof at any subsequent election: Provided, and however, That no such voting machine shall be used, purchased, leased or adopted until the board of voting machine commissioners hereinafter provided for, or a majority thereof, shall have made and filed a report certifying that they have examined such machine; that it affords each elector an opportunity to vote in absolute secrecy; that it enables each elector to vote a straight party ticket; that it enables each elector to vote a ticket selected in part from the nominees of one party, and in part from the nominees of any or all other parties, and in part from an independent nomination and in part of persons not in nomination by any party or upon any independent ticket; that it enables each elector to vote a written or printed ballot of his own selection, for any person for any office for which he may desire; that it enables each elector to vote for all candidates for whom he is entitled to vote and prevents him from voting for any candidate for any office more than once, unless he is lawfully entitled to cast more than one vote for one candidate and in that event permits him to cast only as many votes for that candidate as he is by law entitled and no more; that it prevents the elector from voting for more than one person for the same office unless he is lawfully entitled to vote for more than one person therefor, and in that event permits him to vote for as many persons for that office as he is by law entitled and no more; and that such machine will register correctly by means of exact counters, every vote cast for the regular tickets thereon; and has the capacity to contain the tickets of seven political parties with the names of all the candidates thereon, together with all propositions to be voted upon except that it may be so constructed that the names of all candidates for presidential electors will not occur thereon, but in lieu thereof one ballot label in each party column or row shall contain only the words "Presidential Electors," preceded by the party name. That all votes cast on the machine on a regular ballot or ballots shall be registered; that voters may by means of irregular ballots or otherwise vote for any person for any office, although such person may not have been nominated by any party and his name may not appear on such machine; then when a vote is cast for any person for any such office, when his name does not appear on the machine, the elector cannot vote for any name on the machine for the same office; that each elector can, understandingly and within the period of one minute cast his vote for all candidates of his choice; that in case the machine is so constructed that the candidates for presidential electors of any party can be voted for only by voting for the ballot label containing the words "Presidential Electors," by voting an irregular ticket as hereinafter defined the elector may vote for any person or persons he may choose for presidential electors; that the machine is provided with a lock or locks by the use of which any movement of the voting or registering mechanism is absolutely prevented so that it cannot be tampered with or manipulated for any fraudulent purpose; that the machine is susceptible of being closed during the progress of the voting so that no person can see or know the number of votes registered for any candidate: Provided, also, that no such machine or machines shall be purchased unless the party or parties making the sale shall guarantee in writing to keep the machine or machines in good working order for five years without additional cost and shall give a sufficient bond conditional to that effect.

Sec. 431. MACHINE MUST MEET ALL REQUIREMENTS SPECIFIED.] Sec. 2. The voting machine or machines to be used, adopted, leased or purchased as herein provided must be so constructed as to meet all requirements specified in this Act.

Sec. 432. BOARD OF VOTING MACHINE COMMISSIONERS—TERMS OF OFFICE—EXAMINATION OF MACHINE—REPORT—APPROVAL—COMPENSATION.] Sec. 3. The Secretary of State and two persons appointed by the Governor, who shall be mechanical experts and not members of the same political party, shall constitute a board of voting machine commissioners. Their term of office shall be four years, except that the commissioners appointed by the Governor shall be subject to removal at his pleasure and that any Secretary of State on surrendering the duties of his office shall be succeeded on the board by the succeeding Secretary of State. If the office of Secretary of State for any reason shall become vacant the Attorney General of the State shall be a member of the board until the office of Secretary of State is filled. No member of the board shall have any interest in any voting machine. Any person or corporation owning or being interested in any voting machine may apply to said board to examine such machine and report on its accuracy, efficiency, capacity and safety. The commissioners shall examine the machine and make full report thereon in the office of the Secretary of State. They shall state in the report whether or not the kind of machine so examined complies with the requirements of this Act and can be safely used by voters at elections under the conditions prescribed in this Act. If the report be in the affirmative upon said questions, the machine shall be deemed approved by the board and machines of its kind may be adopted for use at elections as herein provided. When the machine has been so approved any improvement or change that does not impair its accuracy, efficiency, capacity or safety shall not render necessary a re-examination or re-approval thereof. Any form of voting machine not so approved cannot be used at any election. Each of the two mechanical experts on the board shall be entitled to one hundred dollars ($100.00) for his compensation and expenses in making such examination and report, to be paid by the person or corporation applying for such examination, which sum may be demanded in advance of making the examination, and which shall be the sole compensation to be received by any such expert. The board may, if it consents to do so, go to any point in the State for the purpose of examining a machine, but it shall not be compelled to make such examination at any place other than the capital of the State: Provided, that each of the two commissioners appointed as mechanical experts shall not receive and retain to exceed fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500.00) and reasonable expenses in any one year, and all sums collected for such examinations over and above said maximum salaries and reasonable expenses shall be turned into the State treasury.

[Sec. 433.] EXPERIMENTAL USE PERMITTED.] Sec. 4. The authorities of any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division authorized by section 1 of this Act to adopt a voting machine or voting machines may provide for the experimental use, at any election or elections, in one or more election precincts, of a machine which it might lawfully adopt, without a formal adoption thereof, and its use at such elections shall be as valid for all purposes as if it had been lawfully adopted.

Sec. 434. HOW PAYMENT FOR MACHINE MAY BE PROVIDED FOR.] Sec. 5. The local authorities, on the adoption and lease or purchase of a voting machine or voting machines, may provide for the payment therefor in such manner as may be deemed for the best interest of the city, village, incorporated town or county. They may for that purpose make leases, issue bonds, certificates of indebtedness, or other obligations, which shall be a charge on the city, village, incorporated town or county. Such bonds, certificates or other obligations may be issued with or without interest, payable at such time or times as the authorities may determine, but shall not be issued or sold at less than par.

Sec. 435. ELECTION PRECINCT IN WHICH MACHINES USED—NUMBER OF VOTERS—RE-DIVISION OF PRECINCTS.] Sec. 6. For any election in any city, village, incorporated town, county, election district or other civil division in which voting machines are to be used, the election precincts in which such machines are to be used may be created by the officers charged with the duty of creating election precincts so as to contain as near as may be six hundred votes each. Such re-districting or re-division shall be made, under such regulations as to time and manner as are now provided by law. Thereafter, so long as voting machines are (are) used, no re-division of such election precincts shall be made until at some general election the number of votes cast in one or more of such precincts shall exceed seven hundred.

Sec. 436. SUPPLYING PRECINCTS WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 7. The local authorities adopting a voting machine or voting machines shall, as soon as practicable thereafter, provide for each polling place a voting machine in complete working order, and shall thereafter preserve and keep it in repair, and shall have the custody thereof, and of the furniture and equipment of the polling place when not in use at an election. If it shall be impracticable to supply each election precinct with a voting machine at the election following such adoption, as many may be supplied as it is practicable to procure, and the same may be used in such election precinct or precincts within the city, village, incorporated town, county, election district or other civil division, as the officers adopting the same may direct.

Sec. 437. HOW MACHINE SHALL BE PLACED IN ROOM—ONE MINUTE FOR VOTING.] Sec. 8. The room in which the election is held shall have a railing separating the part of the room occupied by the judges and clerks of election from that part of the room occupied by the voting machine. The exterior of the voting machine and every part of the polling place shall be in plain view of the election officers. The voting machine shall be placed at least three feet from every wall and partition of the polling place and at least four feet from any election officer or table used by them, and it shall be so placed that no person on the opposite side of the railing can see or determine from the outside of the room how the voter casts his vote. After the opening of the polls the election judges shall allow no person to pass within the railing to the part of the room where the machine is situated, except for the purpose of voting, except as is provided in the next succeeding section of this Act; and they shall not permit more than one voter at a time to be in such part of the room. They shall not themselves remain or permit any other person to remain in any position or near any position that would permit one to see or ascertain how a voter votes or how he has voted. No voter shall remain within the voting booth or compartment longer than one minute, and if any voter shall refuse to leave after the lapse of that time, he shall at once be removed by the election officers or upon their order.

Sec. 438. WHERE VOTER CAN NOT READ OR IS UNABLE TO USE MACHINE—INTOXICATED PERSON.] Sec. 9. Any voter who may declare upon oath that he can not read the English language, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to use the voting machine, shall, upon request, be assisted by two of the election officers of different parties, to be selected by the judges and clerks of the precincts in which they are to act, to be designated by the judges of election at the opening of the polls. Such officers, in the voter's presence and in the presence of each other, shall register his vote upon the machine for the candidates of his choice, and shall thereafter give no information regarding the same. The clerks of election shall enter upon the poll list after the name of any elector who received such assistance in registering his vote a memorandum of the fact. Intoxication shall not be regarded as a physical disability, and no intoxicated person shall be entitled to assistance in registering his vote.

Sec. 439. WHERE VOTER ASKS FOR INSTRUCTION CONCERNING MANNER OF VOTING.] Sec. 10. In case any elector after entering the voting machine booth shall ask for further instructions concerning the manner of voting, two judges of opposite political parties shall give such instructions to him; but no judge or other election officer, or person assisting an elector, shall, in any manner, request, suggest or seek to persuade, or induce any such elector to vote any particular ticket, or for any particular candidate, or for or against any particular amendment, question or proposition. After receiving such instructions, such elector shall vote as in the case of an unassisted voter.

Sec. 440. BALLOT LABEL.] Sec. 11. That portion of cardboard, paper or other material, placed on the front of the machine and containing the names of the candidates, or a statement of the proposed constitutional amendment or other question or proposition to be voted on, shall be known in this Act as a ballot label. The ballot label shall be supplied by the official or officials charged by law with providing material for the holding of an election or elections and shall be printed in black ink on clear white material of such size as will fit the machine and in plain, clear type, as large as the space will reasonably permit. The party name or other designation shall be prefixed to the list of candidates of such party. The order of the lists of candidates of the several parties shall be arranged as is now provided by law, except that the lists may be placed in horizontal [rows] or vertical columns, which parties may, if desired, be divided into parallel and contiguous rows or columns, and except that where presidential electors are to be voted for at any election, and the machine to be used will not carry the names of all candidates for such electors, then there may be placed on the ballot label the words "Presidential Electors," under the name of each political party.

Sec. 441. SAMPLE BALLOT LABEL.] Sec. 12. The officers or board charged with the duty of providing ballots and ballot labels for any polling place shall provide therefor two sample ballot labels, which shall be arranged in the form of a diagram, showing the entire front of the voting machine as it will appear after the official ballot labels are arranged for voting on election day. Such sample ballot labels shall be displayed for public inspection at such polling place during the day preceding election day.

Sec. 442. FOUR SETS OF BALLOT LABELS PROVIDED—DUTY OF OFFICERS IN PUTTING MACHINE IN ORDER, ETC.—DELIVERY OF MACHINE IN ROOM WHERE ELECTION HELD—DUTY OF JUDGES AND CLERKS.] Sec. 13. Four sets of ballot labels for use in the voting machine shall be provided for each polling place for each election by the officer or officers now charged by law with the duty of furnishing such election precincts with ballots. In such manner shall be furnished also all other necessary material for the use of the voting machines. The same officer or officers shall, before the day of election, cause the proper ballot labels to be put on each machine corresponding with the sample ballot labels herein provided for, and the machine in every way to be put in order, set and adjusted, ready for use in voting when delivered at the precinct; and for the purpose of so labeling the machine, putting in order, setting and adjusting the same, they may employ one or more competent persons and cause him or them to be paid in the same manner as other election officers are paid. And the same officer or officers shall cause the machine so labeled in order, set and adjusted, to be delivered at the voting precinct, together with all necessary furniture and appliances that go with the same, in the room where the election is to be held in the precinct, not later than 6:00 o'clock p. m. of the day preceding the election. After the delivery of the machine and on the same day the judges and clerks of election of the precinct may meet at said room, open the package containing the sample ballots, and, if necessary, the ballot labels, and see that the machine is correctly labeled, set and adjusted, ready for use in voting; and if the same is not so labeled, set and adjusted and in order, they shall cause it to be done. On the morning of the election the election officers shall meet in the said room at least one hour before the time for opening the polls. They shall see that the sample ballot labels and instruction cards are posted properly, and everything put in readiness for the voting at the hour of opening the polls. The officers shall compare ballot labels on the machine with the sample ballots, see that they are correct, examine and see that all the counters in the machine are set at naught or zero (0) and that the machine is otherwise in perfect order, and they shall not thereafter permit the counters to be operated or moved except by electors in voting, and they shall also see that all necessary arrangements and adjustments are made for voting irregular ballots on the machine.

443. IRREGULAR BALLOTS.] Sec. 14. Ballots voted for any person whose name does not appear on the ballot label on the machine as a candidate for office, are herein referred to as irregular ballots. In voting for presidential electors a voter may vote an irregular ticket made up of the names of persons in nomination by different parties or partially of the names or persons so in nomination and partially of persons not in nomination by any party. Such irregular ballot shall be deposited, written or affixed in or upon the receptacle or device provided on the machine for that purpose.

Sec. 444. WITH CLOSE OF POLLS, MACHINE LOCKED AND COUNTING COMPARTMENT OPENED.] Sec. 15. As soon as the polls are closed, the voting machine shall be locked against voting and the counting compartment opened in the presence of all the judges and clerks of election and all other persons who may be lawfully within the room, giving full view of the numbers announcing the votes cast for each candidate and for and against the various constitutional amendments, questions or other propositions.

Sec. 445. ASCERTAINING NUMBER OF VOTES—WRITTEN STATEMENTS TO BE SIGNED BY ELECTION OFFICERS—IRREGULAR BALLOTS—MACHINE TO BE LOCKED FOR THIRTY DAYS.] Sec. 16. The election officers shall then ascertain the number of votes which the candidates have received both on the machine and by the voting of irregular ballots, if any, and one of the judges shall publicly announce in a distinct voice the total vote of each candidate thus ascertained in the order of the offices as their titles are arranged on the ballot label. He shall then announce in the same manner the vote on each constitutional amendment, proposition or other question. Before leaving the room and before closing and locking the counting compartment, the election officers shall make and sign written statements or returns of such election, as now required by law. When irregular ballots have been voted they shall be returned, preserved and finally destroyed, as is now provided by law in the case of other election ballots. The written statements or returns so made, after having been properly signed, shall be distinctly and clearly read in the hearing of all persons present, and ample opportunity shall be given to compare the results so certified with the counter dials of the machine. After such comparison and correction, if any such is made, the election officers shall then close the counting compartment and lock the same. Thereafter the machine shall remain locked for a period of at least thirty days unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 446. KEYS TO BE RETURNED WITH WRITTEN STATEMENT.] Sec. 17. When the machine is locked at the close of an election in the manner required by this Act, the judges shall place all keys of the machine on a single piece of flexible wire, unite the ends of such wire in a firm knot, label the same with the make and number of the machine and the precinct at which it was used at such election, and return such keys along with the written statements or returns of such election.

Sec. 447. WHERE MACHINE SUPPLIED WITH RECORDING DEVICE.] Sec. 18. A voting machine which possesses all the qualities required by this Act may be supplied in addition with any recording device on which all the votes registered on the mechanical counters will be separately recorded. When a machine is supplied with such device the same shall not be taken out or examined by the election officers who make the return [returns] from the precinct, but such machine shall be locked with such device therein and so remain for a period of at least thirty days unless within that time the machine shall be ordered open by some court of competent jurisdiction. At the end of thirty days such device may be taken out unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 448. PENALTY FOR PERSON TAMPERING WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 19. Any person not an election officer or other public officer who shall tamper or attempt to tamper with such voting machine or voting machines, or in any way intentionally impair or attempt to impair its use, and any such person who shall be guilty of or shall attempt any dishonest practice upon any such machine, or with or by its use, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and shall be punishable by a fine of from $100.00 to $1,000.00, or by imprisonment for a term of from one to five years, or by both fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 449. PENALTY FOR OFFICIAL TAMPERING, ETC., WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 20. Any clerk or judge of an election or any other public officer authorized to take part in the holding of an election or in preparing for an election, who, with intent to cause or permit any voting machine to fail to register correctly all votes cast thereon; who tampers with or disarranges such machine in any way, or any part or appliance thereof, or who causes or consents to said machine being used for voting at any election with knowledge of the fact that the same is not in order, or not perfectly set and adjusted so that it will correctly register all votes cast thereon; or who, with the purpose of defrauding or deceiving any voter or of causing it to be doubtful for what ticket or candidate or candidates or proposition any vote is cast, or of causing it to appear on said machine that votes cast for one ticket, candidate or proposition were cast for another ticket, candidate or proposition, removes, changes or mutilates any ballot label on said machine or any part thereof, or does any other thing intended to interfere with the validity of the election, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be imprisoned in the State prison not less than one year nor more than ten years, to which may be added a fine not exceeding $1,000.00.

Sec. 450. PENALTY FOR NEGLECT OF DUTY BY PUBLIC OFFICER OR ELECTION OFFICER.] Sec. 21. Any public officer or any election officer upon whom any duty is imposed by this Act, and who shall willfully omit or neglect to perform such duty, or who shall do any act prohibited herein for which imprisonment is not otherwise provided herein, shall, upon conviction, be imprisoned in the State prison for not less than one year nor more than ten years or be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000 or may be punished by both such imprisonment and fine.

Sec. 451. PROVISIONS OF ELECTION LAW NOT INCONSISTENT WITH ACT APPLY.] Sec. 22. All the provisions of the election law not inconsistent with this Act shall apply to all the elections in the precincts where such voting machines are used. Any provisions of law which conflict with the use of such machine or machines as herein set forth shall not apply to the precinct or precincts in which an election is conducted by the use of such machine or machines.

WHEREAS, Under the authority reposed in them, by this statute, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago, did, in July, 1911, contract to purchase one thousand (1,000) voting machines for use in the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, The extreme dissatisfaction caused by their, the said election commissioners', alleged gross disregard for the provisions of the foregoing statute, and their alleged lack of respect for the rights of the voters of the entire State of Illinois, and the taxpayers of the city of Chicago, in making said purchase; did cause an investigation to be made and a protest to be filed by the "Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency" with the mayor and aldermen of the city of Chicago, as follows:

"To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Chicago:

"Your Honorable Body is again called upon to take official cognizance of the ill-advised and extravagant contract made by the Board of Election Commissioners in July, 1911, for the purchase of 1,000 voting machines, the contract price of which amounts in the aggregate to $942,500.00. The election commissioners are requesting the council to include in its appropriations for 1913 an item of $282,750.00 to be used for the payment of 300 of these machines. The first 300 machines delivered, the contract price of which was $188,500.00, have already been paid for under an appropriation made in 1912. The remaining 500 machines have not been delivered. If these 500 machines are delivered and have to be paid for by the city, it will be necessary for the council to appropriate within the next two years a total of $754,000.00 (including the appropriation now sought), for the purpose of paying for voting machines, which the Supreme Court of Illinois has recently decided do not comply with the requirements of the voting machine statute."

In compliance with the request of the election commissioners, the Finance Committee has included in the appropriation ordinance submitted to the Council Dec. 30, 1912, the following item:

"Voting machines and trucks—

Three hundred voting machines, at $942.00 each.....	$282,750 00
All other items	585 00

Subject to payment by judgments or issuance of certificates $283,335 00

It further appears from the ordinance that this sum of $283,335.00 is not appropriated from the corporate fund, but that it is "appropriated subject to judgments or issuance of certificate." No fund, however, is designated from which either judgments or certificates can be paid. Under these circumstances it is [not] clear in what manner the council intends this $283,335.00 shall be paid in case judgment is rendered or certificates are issued.

In this connection it should not be overlooked, however, that the contract price of these machines is to be regarded as an "expense" incurred by the election commissioners. This is the view taken by the corporation counsel in his opinion rendered January 29, 1912. Section 1 of Article VII of the City Election law provides that "such expenditures shall be paid by the city treasurer * * * out of any money in the city treasury not otherwise appropriated." Attention is directed to the fact that the city's traction fund is "money in the city treasury not otherwise appropriated" and out of which it is possible the holders of voting machine certificates or warrants might enforce their claims.

The Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency believes that the council should take notice of this situation and should refuse to appropriate further for these machines, which were purchased by the Board of Election Commissioners without consultation with the council and in utter disregard of the policy of caution demanded by the interests of the taxpaying public.

THE 1911 INVESTIGATION AND REPORT OF THE BUREAU.

When it was learned in May, 1911 that the Board of Election Commissioners was planning to make a contract for the purchase of voting machines, the Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency made an investigation of the subject. This investigation disclosed the fact that the voting machine was still in the experimental stage and that there were numerous objections to the purchase of a large number of such machines. In a report issued at that time the bureau stated:

"The Chicago situation presents unusual obstacles to the successful use of voting machines. Among these are the long ballot made necessary by the large number of offices to be filled at some elections; the group voting for certain offices, such as judges and county commissioners; and the system of cumulative voting for members of the Lower House of the General Assembly, which is peculiar to Illinois. The fact that women may vote for university trustees, but not for other officers requires a restrictive device that introduces additional complications. The long ballot necessitates the use in Chicago of a larger and heavier machine than is required in other cities that have adopted voting machines. The size and weight of the machine cause it to present problems of transportation, of storage and of setting up in the voting booth. There are special complexities due to the use of the voting machine at a preliminary [primary] election at which nominations are to be made for a large number of offices.

"Aside from the mechanical operation of the machine itself, there are other elements of uncertainty connected with the use of voting machines that call for experimentation and caution. It cannot be told until the actual trial is made how rapidly the voting can be done by machine, even assuming the mechanism to operate perfectly so far as all except the human element is concerned. This bureau learns that in Minneapolis, where voting machines are in use, the voting has been so much slower than anticipated that it has been found necessary to install two machines to a precinct of 600 voters, instead of one. The Illinois law contemplates a single machine to a precinct of 600 voters. Then there are the problems of transportation and storage and the proper setting of the machines in the booths. Three of these machines will make a truck load and it will require at least three men to handle one. Skilled persons will be required to set them up when taken from the storage room to the voting booth. It would seem that the Board of Election Commissioners ought to acquire experience in handling 50 or 100 machines before undertaking the burden of managing 1,200. This experience, moreover, should be in connection with the most trying elections, such as the primary of April, 1912, and the election of the following November, when the long ballot must be voted."

Inquiries made at that time disclosed the fact also that although the city of Chicago would be expected to make provision for paying for the machines to be purchased, the financial officers of the city had not been consulted in regard to the matter and further, that prior Boards of Election Commissioners had secured appropriations from the city council before taking steps looking to the purchase of voting machines. In this connection it was pointed out that although the plans of the present board contemplated the expenditure of approximately $1,000,000, no prior board had deemed it wise to consider an initial expenditure in excess of $100,000.00.

As a result of this investigation, it seemed obvious, in view of the difficulties and uncertainties which existed, that ordinary business prudence demanded a policy of experimentation and caution on the part of the election commissioners. The main conclusions reached by the bureau were summarized in its report, as follows:

1. The number of voting machines to be purchased in the near future should be limited to one hundred at the most; and the purchase of a greater number of machines should be postponed until after trial at the primaries of April, 1912, and at the election of November, 1912, of such limited number of machines.

2. The Board of Election Commissioners should seek to secure the cooperation of the financial authorities of the city in advance of action looking to the purchase of voting machines, whatever the amount involved.

THE CONTRACT OF 1911 AND THE APPROPRIATION OF 1912.

In the face of the situation above set forth, of which they were fully advised, and notwithstanding the adverse comments of the public press, the Board of Election Commissioners and the Empire Voting Machine Company disregarded every principle of business prudence, and in July, 1911, entered into the contract mentioned for the purchase of 1,000 machines.

When the 1912 appropriation ordinance was before the council, that body was asked to appropriate $188,500.00 for the payment of 200 of the machines. While the matter was still pending, the bureau, on Feb. 5, 1912, petitioned the council not to make any appropriation "unless it (the contract) should be modified (1) to provide for the delivery of not to exceed 100 machines on the first installment, and (2) to relieve the board from the obligation to take 1,000 machines if those delivered on the first installment shall not prove satisfactory when placed in use." This suggestion on the part of the bureau was disregarded. The appropriation asked for was made and the 200 machines were delivered and paid for.

At the time the council was considering this appropriation of $188,500.00, it had before it, however, the opinion of the corporation counsel in which he advised that it was "incumbent on the city of Chicago to pay the obligations incurred by the Board of Election Commissioners in buying such voting machines." It is perhaps fair to assume that many of the aldermen voting for that appropriation believed it their duty to do so on the advice thus given by the corporation counsel.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

The situation at the present time differs radically from that which existed in January and February, 1912. The corporation counsel in his opinion then rendered confined himself to the question of the liability of the city to pay the "obligations" incurred by the Board of Election Commissioners. At that time no opportunity had been afforded to test the machines at either a primary or a general election. He assumed apparently that the voting machines contracted for and to be delivered would meet the requirements of the voting machine law and that, when such machines were accepted by the Board of Election Commissioners, a binding obligation would be incurred.

The voting machine statute is explicit on the point that no voting machine shall be purchased unless it is so constructed as to meet all the requirements specified in that Act, among which is the requirement that "each elector can understandingly and within the period of one minute cast his vote for all candidates of his choice." The Board of Election Commissioners is given no power to purchase any machine which does not meet this requirement and it seems obvious that, if the board were to make a contract for a machine which did not meet the above requirement, the contract so made would not create a binding obligation on the city because of the lack of power in the board to make such a contract. It would seem equally clear that, no matter what may be the terms of the contract made by the board, if the machine itself when delivered does not, in fact, meet the requirements of the voting machine statute, the city would not be bound. Attention is called, however, to the contract under which the machines in question were purchased. By its terms the company "agrees that each machine so furnished shall in all respects comply with all the requirements of the statutes of Illinois now in force relating to the use of voting machines."

If it be said that the Board of Election Commissioners has accepted the machines and in so doing has found that they meet the requirements of the statute, it is sufficient answer to say that the finding of the board in this respect is not conclusive and that in the case of these particular machines the board has only recently been overruled by the Supreme Court of the State.

THE DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

On December 17, 1912, the Supreme Court handed down an opinion in the case of The People ex rel. Hull v. Taylor et al., in which it holds that the voting machines, for the payment of which an appropriation is now asked, do not comply with the voting machine statute in that they are not so constructed that "each elector can, understandingly and within the period of one minute, cast his vote for all candidates of his choice." Moreover, the decision in this case requires the election commissioners to furnish ballot boxes and paper ballots in all precincts.

In its opinion in the foregoing case the court said:

"It is insisted on behalf of the respondents (the election commissioners) that the action of the Board of Voting Machines Commissioners and the Board of Election Commissioners in determining that the voting machines complied with the requirements of the law in this particular should be held conclusive upon this question; that the powers conferred on these officers require the exercise of judgment and are discretionary in their character, and that their determination of the question of fact is final. If a discretionary power is exercised so as to produce a manifest injustice, the courts may interfere to require its due exercise and prevent a public wrong. * * * If votes cannot, in fact, be cast upon the machines within the time allowed by law, their use will result in some voters being deprived of their votes. Such an injustice, if clearly shown, will justify the interference of the court to afford a remedy by mandamus. It is alleged in the answer that the voting machines in question have been in satisfactory use in various cities of different states for a number of years, and that arrangements have been made for the instruction on the day of election, and before that day, of voters in the use of the machine. On the argument of the cause one of the machines was present and demonstrations of the manner of its use were made by various persons. Fifty-three officers were to be voted for besides the presidential electors, and there were three public policy questions and four propositions to issue bonds. There were party nominations by six parties, although one was for a part only, of the offices. It is easy to vote a straight party ticket on the machine. It can be done in a few seconds. An expert in the use of the machine can vote a split ticket, even as large as the ticket at the November election, in one minute. The requirement of the statute, however, is that 'each elector can, understandingly, and within the period of one minute, cast his vote for all candidates of his choice.' 'Each elector' does not mean here absolutely every elector, for a voter may be blind or crippled so as to be physically unable to use the machine, and the statute provides for such a condition, but the term does include at least every elector of ordinary intelligence having the reasonable use of his faculties and members. If the voter must be a trained expert—if he must be a man of more than ordinary intelligence, keenness of vision or alertness of motion—in order to be able to vote as he wishes within a minute, then the machine which requires these things of him does not comply with the law. As a matter of fact, we find that the machine does not comply with the law in enabling the voter understandingly to cast his vote in one minute. It is not enough that one voter or many voters can possibly, by strenuous effort, vote for the candidates they desire in one minute. It is necessary, at least, that the average voter who wishes to vote for candidates upon two or more or all of the various tickets can by a reasonable effort be surely able to cast the vote he desires to cast, within the time allowed him by law for doing so. We take into consideration the action and finding of the Board of Voting Machine Commissioners and the Board of Election Commissioners as well as our own observation, and we are constrained to find that the machines do not comply with the law in respect to the time within which votes can be cast, and that their use, if voters were allowed only one minute to vote, would result in the disfranchisement of many electors."

CONCLUSION.

In entering into a contract for the purchase and sale of 1,000 voting machines, the Board of Election Commissioners and the Empire Voting Machine Company chose to disregard not only the interest of the taxpaying public, but the counsel of caution and the principles of ordinary business prudence. They acted with their eyes open. There are no equities to be considered or preserved.

It is the opinion of the Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency that there is no legal liability on the part of the city to pay for the voting machines in question. The bureau believes that any appropriation by the council would not only be illegal, but because of the flagrant wrong resulting to the community from the transaction, would expose the members of the council to severe criticism.

The bureau, therefore, respectfully petitions the city council not to make any appropriation for the payment of said voting machines. It submits that the claim of the Empire Voting Machine Company should not be recognized by a contingent appropriation or in any other form. The bureau further petitions the council to adopt an order directing the corporation counsel to contest vigorously any suit or proceeding which may be brought to enforce payment for any of said machines.

Respectfully submitted,

CHICAGO BUREAU OF PUBLIC EFFICIENCY,
JULIUS ROSENWALD, Chairman;
HARRIS S. KEELER, Director.

Chicago, Jan. 1, 1913.

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the State Board of Voting Machine Commissioners, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago and the Empire Voting Machine Company, entered into a conspiracy to qualify the Empire Voting Machines, contrary to the provisions of the Election law; and it is further alleged, that the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago and the Empire Voting Machine Company entered into a conspiracy to defraud the taxpayers of the city of Chicago, of a sum of money alleged to fall little short of four hundred thousand dollars ($400,000.00), by agreeing to a purchase price of nine hundred and forty-two thousand five hundred dollars ($942,500.00) in the aggregate, to be paid to the Empire Voting Machine Company, by the city of Chicago for the delivery of one thousand (1,000) Empire Voting Machines, to the said Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the Empire Voting Machines can be manipulated at will for the purpose of fraudulent voting, and are wholly inadequate for the uses as specified in the statutes, and it is further alleged that after having been used and fairly tried in Omaha, Burlington, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Los Angeles and in more than fifty cities in New Jersey, these machines have been discarded as inefficient, because wholly unsafe, cumbersome and subject to fraudulent manipulation; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that there exists a gigantic conspiracy, engineered by the shrewd intelligence of powerful and corrupt influences, to use the election machinery of the city of Chicago, through and by the further use of the said Empire Voting Machines, that in the end, city, county, state and national elections may be absolutely controlled or materially influenced; and,

WHEREAS, Great scandal has resulted by these persistent and repeated allegations of fraud, directed at the election machinery of the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, The city of Chicago casts approximately forty (40) per cent of the vote of Illinois; the entire electorate of this State stands in eminent danger of disfranchisement in general elections should these allegations be true; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the peculiar political and governmental conditions now existing in the city of Chicago and county of Cook, precludes the possibility of a thorough and impartial investigation as to the facts by the local authorities; and,

WHEREAS, There appears to be ample grounds for a thorough, searching, exhaustive and impartial investigation of the alleged scandalous conditions; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring therein, That a joint committee of twelve (12,) shall be appointed; six (6) to be named by the Chairman of the Committee on Elections of the House of Representatives, and six (6) to be named by the Senate; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination of the official conduct and acts of the State Board of Voting Machine Commissioners, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago, and any and all of the official conduct and acts of all of the election officers of the city of Chicago, and the county of Cook in whatsoever capacity heretofore or now employed; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into the contract entered into between the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago or its agents and the Empire Voting Machine Company, its agents, trustees, assigns, heirs or receivers; that this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into the organization, creation, incorporation or establishment of the Empire Voting Machine Company, for the purpose of ascertaining the identity of its stockholders, officers, owners, trustees, agents, heirs, assigns, or receivers; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into its workings, mechanism, efficiency, quality, material, manufacture, cost and sale price of the Empire Voting Machines; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination of any and all matters of whatsoever nature referred to; in the foregoing preamble and this resolution proper; that this committee be and is hereby authorized and empowered to issue subpoenas for the purpose of compelling witnesses to attend upon their deliberations and compel said witnesses to answer their inquiry, and to issue subpoenas for the purpose of compelling the production into their hands of any and all books, papers, writings, documents, records, machines, instruments, tools or whatsoever objects, utensils or things that they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution; that this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to employ such assistance as they deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution, however no State moneys, now or hereafter appropriated for expense incurred under the provisions of this resolution, shall be spent outside the boundaries of this State, except that foreign witnesses coming before this committee may be reimbursed as to their actual transportation expenses only, or for the purpose of actual expense incurred in having any depositions taken by others than the members of this committee, outside the boundaries of this State; and, be it, further

Resolved, That this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to make their investigations and examinations to cover a period, dating from January 1, 1903, to and including the conclusion of their deliberations; that this committee, be and is, hereby authorized, empowered and instructed to report its findings with its recommendations to any special session of this General Assembly, or, and not later than to the Forty-ninth General Assembly.

Mr. Cleary moved that the consideration of the resolution be postponed to and made a special order for Tuesday, April 22, 1913, immediately after the reading of the Journal, which motion was decided in the negative.

After discussion, by unanimous consent, it was ordered that the consideration of the resolution be made a special order for Tuesday, April 22, 1913, immediately after the reading of the Journal.

At 1:30 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Hurburgh, the Senate adjourned.

FRIDAY, APRIL 18, 1913, 10:00 O'CLOCK A. M.

Senate met pursuant to adjournment.

Hon. Walter I. Manny, President pro tempore of the Senate, presiding.

The President pro tempore of the Senate announced that he had examined the Journal of yesterday and found no corrections or changes to be made, and if the Senate had no changes or corrections to offer, the Journal would be ordered to stand approved. No corrections being offered, the Journal was ordered to stand approved.

Martin A. Brennan, of McLean County, Presiding Judge and member of the Court of Claims, vice Lawrence Y. Stringer, resigned.

And I respectfully ask your concurrence therein.

Very respectfully,

E. F. DUNNE,
Governor.

SPECIAL ORDERS.

The President of the Senate announced the special order for this hour to be the consideration of the following House joint resolution received by the Senate April 16, 1913:

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 23.

WHEREAS, An Act was passed by the Forty-third General Assembly amending the general election law of this State, entitled, "An Act to provide for the use of voting machines at elections for casting, registering, recording and counting ballots or votes; also creating a board of voting machine commissioners and defining its duties." (Approved May 14, 1903, in force July 1, 1903.)

Sec. 430. SUBMISSION OF QUESTION OF ADOPTING VOTING MACHINE—CONSTRUCTION OF MACHINE—REQUIREMENTS SPECIFIED.] SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly: That anybody or board of public officials, or any officer or officers charged by law with the duty of providing material and supplies for holding an election or elections in any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State, may at any general or special election submit a proposition to the qualified voters thereof to adopt a voting machine or voting machines, and whenever a majority of the electors of any such city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division voting upon said proposition shall have declared therefor, may purchase or lease a voting machine or voting machines for any or all of the election precincts for which he, it or they are by law charged by law with the duty of providing material and supplies for holding an election or elections, at the expense of the city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State now chargeable by law with the expenses of the material and supplies for holding general elections in such civil division or divisions. If the question of using a voting machine or voting machines be not submitted to the voters by the proper public officials, a petition signed by 10 per cent of the voters of any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division of the State and addressed to them at least sixty days before any general election asking the submission of the question of adopting a voting machine or voting machines shall compel the submission of the question to the voters at that election. Use of such machines may be discontinued on resubmission of the question and a vote in favor thereof at any subsequent election: Provided, and however, That no such voting machine shall be used, purchased, leased or adopted until the board of voting machine commissioners hereinafter provided for, or a majority thereof, shall have made and filed a report certifying that they have examined such machine; that it affords each elector an opportunity to vote in absolute secrecy; that it enables each elector to vote a straight party ticket; that it enables each elector to vote a ticket selected in part from the nominees of one party, and in part from the nominees of any or all other parties, and in part from an independent nomination and in part of persons not in nomination by any party or upon any independent ticket; that it enables each elector to vote a written or printed ballot of his own selection, for any person for any office for which he may desire; that it enables each elector to vote for all candidates for whom he is entitled to vote and prevents him from voting for any candidate for any office more than once, unless he is lawfully entitled to cast more than one vote for one candidate and in that event permits him to cast only as many votes for that candidate as he is by law entitled and no more; that it prevents the elector from voting for more than one person for the same office unless he is lawfully entitled to vote for more than one person therefor, and in that event permits him to vote for as many persons for that office as he is by law entitled and no more; and that such machine will register correctly by means of exact counters, every vote cast for the regular tickets thereon; and has the capacity to contain the tickets of seven political parties with the names of all the candidates thereon, together with all propositions to be voted upon except that it may be so constructed that the names of all candidates for presidential electors will not occur thereon, but in lieu thereof one ballot label in each party column or row shall contain only the words "Presidential Electors," preceded by the party name. That all votes cast on the machine on a regular ballot or ballots shall be registered; that voters may by means of irregular ballots or otherwise vote for any person for any office, although such person may not have been nominated by any party and his name may not appear on such machine; then when a vote is cast for any person for any such office, when his name does not appear on the machine, the elector cannot vote for any name on the machine for the same office, that each elector can, understandingly and within the period of one minute cast his vote for all candidates of his choice; that in case the machine is so constructed that the candidates for presidential electors of any party can be voted for only by voting for the ballot label containing the words "Presidential Electors," by voting an irregular ticket as hereinafter defined the elector may vote for any person or persons he may choose for presidential electors; that the machine is provided with a lock or locks by the use of which any movement of the voting or registering mechanism is absolutely prevented so that it cannot be tampered with or manipulated for any fraudulent purposes; that the machine is susceptible of being closed during the progress of the voting so that no person can see or know the number of votes registered for any candidate: Provided, also, that no such machine or machines shall be purchased unless the party or parties making the sale shall guarantee in writing to keep the machine or machines in good working order for five years without additional cost and shall give a sufficient bond conditional to that effect.

Sec. 431. MACHINE MUST MEET ALL REQUIREMENTS SPECIFIED.] Sec. 2. The voting machine or machines to be used, adopted, leased or purchased as herein provided must be so constructed as to meet all requirements specified in this Act.

Sec. 432. BOARD OF VOTING MACHINE COMMISSIONERS—TERMS OF OFFICE—EXAMINATION OF MACHINE—REPORT—APPROVAL—COMPENSATION.] Sec. 3. The Secretary of State and two persons appointed by the Governor, who shall be mechanical experts and not members of the same political party, shall constitute a board of voting machine commissioners. Their term of office shall be four years, except that the commissioners appointed by the Governor shall be subject to removal at his pleasure and that any Secretary of State on surrendering the duties of his office shall be succeeded on the board by the succeeding Secretary of State. If the office of Secretary of State for any reason shall become vacant the Attorney General of the State shall be a member of the board until the office of Secretary of State is filled. No member of the board shall have any interest in any voting machine. Any person or corporation owning or being interested in any voting machine may apply to said board to examine such machine and report on its accuracy, efficiency, capacity and safety. The commissioners shall examine the machine and make full report thereon in the office of the Secretary of State. They shall state in the report whether or not the kind of machine so examined complies with the requirements of this Act and can be safely used by voters at elections under the conditions prescribed in this Act. If the report be in the affirmative upon said questions, the machine shall be deemed approved by the board and machines of its kind may be adopted for use at elections as herein provided. When the machine has been so approved any improvement or change that does not impair its accuracy, efficiency, capacity or safety shall not render necessary a re-examination or re-approval thereof. Any form of voting machine not so approved cannot be used at any election. Each of the two mechanical experts on the board shall be entitled to one hundred dollars ($100.00) for his compensation and expenses in making such examination and report, to be paid by the person or corporation applying for such examination, which sum may be demanded in advance of making the examination, and which shall be the sole compensation to be received by any such expert. The board may, if it consents to do so, go to any point in the State for the purpose of examining a machine, but it shall not be compelled to make such examination at any place other than the capital of the State: Provided, that each of the two commissioners appointed as mechanical experts shall not receive and retain to exceed fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500.00) and reasonable expenses in any one year, and all sums collected for such examinations over and above said maximum salaries and reasonable expenses shall be turned into the State treasury.

Sec. 433. EXPERIMENTAL USE PERMITTED.] Sec. 4. The authorities of any city, village, incorporated town, county, precinct, election district or other civil division authorized by section 1 of this Act to adopt a voting machine or voting machines may provide for the experimental use, at any election or elections, in one or more election precincts, of a machine which it might lawfully adopt, without a formal adoption thereof, and its use at such elections shall be as valid for all purposes as if it had been lawfully adopted.

Sec. 434. HOW PAYMENT FOR MACHINE MAY BE PROVIDED FOR.] Sec. 5. The local authorities, on the adoption and lease or purchase of a voting machine or voting machines, may provide for the payment therefor in such manner as may be deemed for the best interest of the city, village, incorporated town or county. They may for that purpose make leases, issue bonds, certificates of indebtedness, or other obligations, which shall be a charge on the city, village, incorporated town or county. Such bonds, certificates or other obligations may be issued with or without interest, payable at such time or times as the authorities may determine, but shall not be issued or sold at less than par.

Sec. 435. ELECTION PRECINCT IN WHICH MACHINES USED—NUMBER OF VOTERS—RE-DIVISION OF PRECINCTS.] Sec. 6. For any election in any city, village, incorporated town, county, election district or other civil division in which voting machines are to be used, the election precincts in which such machines are to be used may be created by the officers charged with the duty of creating election precincts so as to contain as near as may be six hundred votes each. Such re-districting or re-division shall be made, under such regulations as to time and manner as are now provided by law. Thereafter, so long as voting machines are (are) used, no re-division of such election precincts shall be made until at some general election the number of votes cast in one or more of such precincts shall exceed seven hundred.

Sec. 436. SUPPLYING PRECINCTS WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 7. The local authorities adopting a voting machine or voting machines shall, as soon as practicable thereafter, provide for each polling place a voting machine in complete working order, and shall thereafter preserve and keep it in repair, and shall have the custody thereof, and of the furniture and equipment of the polling place when not in use at an election. If it shall be impracticable to supply each election precinct with a voting machine at the election following such adoption, as many may be supplied as it is practicable to procure, and the same may be used in such election precinct or precincts within the city, village, incorporated town, county, election district or other civil division, as the officers adopting the same may direct.

Sec. 437. HOW MACHINE SHALL BE PLACED IN ROOM—ONE MINUTE FOR VOTING.] Sec. 8. The room in which the election is held shall have a railing separating the part of the room occupied by the judges and clerks of election from that part of the room occupied by the voting machine. The exterior of the voting machine and every part of the polling place shall be in plain view of the election officers. The voting machine shall be placed at least three feet from every wall and partition of the polling place and at least four feet from any election officer or table used by them, and it shall be so placed that no person on the opposite side of the railing can see or determine from the outside of the room how the voter casts his vote. After the opening of the polls the election judges shall allow no person to pass within the railing to the part of the room where the machine is situated, except for the purpose of voting, except as is provided in the next succeeding section of this Act; and they shall not permit more than one voter at a time to be in such part of the room. They shall not themselves remain or permit any other person to remain in any position or near any position that would permit one to see or ascertain how a voter votes or how he has voted. No voter shall remain within the voting booth or compartment longer than one minute, and if any voter shall refuse to leave after the lapse of that time, he shall at once be removed by the election officers or upon their order.

Sec. 438. WHERE VOTER CAN NOT READ OR IS UNABLE TO USE MACHINE—INTOXICATED PERSON.] Sec. 9. Any voter who may declare upon oath that he can not read the English language, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to use the voting machine, shall, upon request, be assisted by two of the election officers of different parties, to be selected by the judges and clerks of the precincts in which they are to act, to be designated by the judges of election at the opening of the polls. Such officers, in the voter's presence and in the presence of each other, shall register his vote upon the machine for the candidates of his choice, and shall thereafter give no information regarding the same. The clerks of election shall enter upon the poll list after the name of any elector who received such assistance in registering his vote a memorandum of the fact. Intoxication shall not be regarded as a physical disability, and no intoxicated person shall be entitled to assistance in registering his vote.

Sec. 439. WHERE VOTER ASKS FOR INSTRUCTION CONCERNING MANNER OF VOTING.] Sec. 10. In case any elector after entering the voting machine booth shall ask for further instructions concerning the manner of voting, two judges of opposite political parties shall give such instructions to him; but no judge or other election officer, or person assisting an elector, shall, in any manner, request, suggest or seek to persuade, or induce any such elector to vote any particular ticket, or for any particular candidate, or for or against any particular amendment, question or proposition. After receiving such instructions, such elector shall vote as in the case of an unassisted voter.

Sec. 440. BALLOT LABEL.] Sec. 11. That portion of cardboard, paper or other material, placed on the front of the machine and containing the names of the candidates, or a statement of the proposed constitutional amendment or other question or proposition to be voted on, shall be known in this Act as a ballot label. The ballot label shall be supplied by the official or officials charged by law with providing material for the holding of an election or elections and shall be printed in black ink on clear white material of such size as will fit the machine and in plain, clear type, as large as the space will reasonably permit. The party name or other designation shall be prefixed to the list of candidates of such party. The order of the lists of candidates of the several parties shall be arranged as is now provided by law, except that the lists may be placed in horizontal rows or vertical columns, which parties may, if desired, be divided into parallel and contiguous rows or columns, and except that where presidential electors are to be voted for at any election, and the machine to be used will not carry the names of all candidates for such electors, then there may be placed on the ballot label the words "Presidential Electors," under the name of each political party.

Sec. 441. SAMPLE BALLOT LABEL.] Sec. 12. The officers or board charged with the duty of providing ballots and ballot labels for any polling place shall provide therefor two sample ballot labels, which shall be arranged in the form of a diagram, showing the entire front of the voting machine as it will appear after the official ballot labels are arranged for voting on election day. Such sample ballot labels shall be displayed for public inspection at such polling place during the day preceding election day.

Sec. 442. FOUR SETS OF BALLOT LABELS PROVIDED—DUTY OF OFFICERS IN PUTTING MACHINE IN ORDER, ETC.—DELIVERY OF MACHINE IN ROOM WHERE ELECTION HELD—DUTY OF JUDGES AND CLERKS.] Sec. 13. Four sets of ballot labels for use in the voting machine shall be provided for each polling place for each election by the officer or officers now charged by law with the duty of furnishing such election precincts with ballots. In such manner shall be furnished also all other necessary material for the use of the voting machines. The same officer or officers shall, before the day of election, cause the proper ballot labels to be put on each machine corresponding with the sample ballot labels herein provided for, and the machine in every way to be put in order, set and adjusted, ready for use in voting when delivered at the precinct; and for the purpose of so labeling the machine, putting in order, setting and adjusting the same, they may employ one or more competent persons and cause him or them to be paid in the same manner as other election officers are paid. And the same officer or officers shall cause the machine so labeled in order, set and adjusted, to be delivered at the voting precinct, together with all necessary furniture and appliances that go with the same, in the room where the election is to be held in the precinct, not later than 6:00 o'clock p. m. of the day preceding the election. After the delivery of the machine and on the same day the judges and clerks of election of the precinct may meet at said room, open the package containing the sample ballots, and, if necessary, the ballot labels, and see that the machine is correctly labeled, set and adjusted, ready for use in voting; and if the same is not so labeled, set and adjusted and in order, they shall cause it to be done. On the morning of the election the election officers shall meet in the said room at least one hour before the time for opening the polls. They shall see that the sample ballot labels and instruction cards are posted properly, and everything put in readiness for the voting at the hour of opening the polls. The officers shall compare ballot labels on the machine with the sample ballots, see that they are correct, examine and see that all the counters in the machine are set at naught or zero (0) and that the machine is otherwise in perfect order, and they shall not thereafter permit the counters to be operated or moved except by electors in voting, and they shall also see that all necessary arrangements and adjustments are made for voting irregular ballots on the machine.

443. IRREGULAR BALLOTS.] Sec. 14. Ballots voted for any person whose name does not appear on the ballot label on the machine as a candidate for office, are herein referred to as irregular ballots. In voting for presidential electors a voter may vote an irregular ticket made up of the names of persons in nomination by different parties or partially of the names [of] or persons so in nomination and partially of persons not in nomination by any party. Such irregular ballot shall be deposited, written or affixed in or upon the receptacle or device provided on the machine for that purpose.

Sec. 444. WITH CLOSE OF POLLS, MACHINE LOCKED AND COUNTING COMPARTMENT OPENED.] Sec. 15. As soon as the polls are closed, the voting machine shall be locked against voting and the counting compartment opened in the presence of all the judges and clerks of election and all other persons who may be lawfully within the room, giving full view of the numbers announcing the votes cast for each candidate and for and against the various constitutional amendments, questions or other propositions.

Sec. 445. ASCERTAINING NUMBER OF VOTES—WRITTEN STATEMENTS TO BE SIGNED BY ELECTION OFFICERS—IRREGULAR BALLOTS—MACHINE TO BE LOCKED FOR THIRTY DAYS.] Sec. 16. The election officers shall then ascertain the number of votes which the candidates have received both on the machine and by the voting of irregular ballots, if any, and one of the judges shall publicly announce in a distinct voice the total vote of each candidate thus ascertained in the order of the offices as their titles are arranged on the ballot label. He shall then announce in the same manner the vote on each constitutional amendment, proposition or other question. Before leaving the room and before closing and locking the counting compartment, the election officers shall make and sign written statements or returns of such election, as now required by law. When irregular ballots have been voted they shall be returned, preserved and finally destroyed, as is now provided by law in the case of other election ballots. The written statements or returns so made, after having been properly signed, shall be distinctly and clearly read in the hearing of all persons present, and ample opportunity shall be given to compare the results so certified with the counter dials of the machine. After such comparison and correction, if any such is made, the election officers shall then close the counting compartment and lock the same. Thereafter the machine shall remain locked for a period of at least thirty days unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 446. KEYS TO BE RETURNED WITH WRITTEN STATEMENT.] Sec. 17. When the machine is locked at the close of an election in the manner required by this Act, the judges shall place all keys of the machine on a single piece of flexible wire, unite the ends of such wire in a firm knot, label the same with the make and number of the machine and the precinct at which it was used at such election, and return such keys along with the written statements or returns of such election.

Sec. 447. WHERE MACHINE SUPPLIED WITH RECORDING DEVICE.] Sec. 18. A voting machine which possesses all the qualities required by this Act may be supplied in addition with any recording device on which all the votes registered on the mechanical counters will be separately recorded. When a machine is supplied with such device the same shall not be taken out or examined by the election officers who make the return [returns] from the precinct, but such machine shall be locked with such device therein and so remain for a period of at least thirty days unless within that time the machine shall be ordered open by some court of competent jurisdiction. At the end of thirty days such device may be taken out unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Sec. 448. PENALTY FOR PERSON TAMPERING WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 19. Any person not an election officer or other public officer who shall tamper or attempt to tamper with such voting machine or voting machines, or in any way intentionally impair or attempt to impair its use, and any such person who shall be guilty of or shall attempt any dishonest practice upon any such machine, or with or by its use, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and shall be punishable by a fine of from $100.00 to $1,000.00, or by imprisonment for a term of from one to five years, or by both fine and imprisonment.

Sec. 449. PENALTY FOR OFFICIAL TAMPERING, ETC., WITH MACHINE.] Sec. 20. Any clerk or judge of an election or any other public officer authorized to take part in the holding of an election or in preparing for an election who, with intent to cause or permit any voting machine to fail to register correctly all votes cast thereon; who tampers with or disarranges such machine in any way, or any part or appliance thereof, or who causes or consents to said machine being used for voting at any election with knowledge of the fact that the same is not in order, or not perfectly set and adjusted so that it will correctly register all votes cast thereon; or who, with the purpose of defrauding or deceiving any voter or of causing it to be doubtful for what ticket or candidate or candidates or proposition any vote is cast, or of causing to appear on said machine that votes cast for one ticket, candidate or proposition were cast for another ticket, candidate or proposition, removes, changes or mutilates any ballot label on said machine or any part thereof, or does any other thing intended to interfere with the validity of the election, shall be deemed guilty of a felony and, upon conviction, shall be imprisoned in the State prison not less than one year nor more than ten years, to which may be added a fine not exceeding $1,000.00.

Sec. 450. PENALTY FOR NEGLECT OF DUTY BY PUBLIC OFFICER OR ELECTION OFFICER.] Sec. 21. Any public officer or any election officer upon whom any duty is imposed by this Act, and who shall willfully omit or neglect to perform such duty, or who shall do any act prohibited herein for which imprisonment is not otherwise provided herein, shall, upon conviction, be imprisoned in the State prison for not less than one year nor more than ten years or be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.00 or may be punished by both such imprisonment and fine.

Sec. 451. PROVISIONS OF ELECTION LAW NOT INCONSISTENT WITH ACT APPLY.] Sec. 22. All the provisions of the election law not inconsistent with this Act shall apply to all the elections in the precincts where such voting machines are used. Any provisions of law which conflict with the use of such machine or machines as herein set forth shall not apply to the precinct or precincts in which an election is conducted by the use of such machine or machines.

WHEREAS, Under the authority reposed in them, by this statute, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago, did, in July, 1911, contract to purchase one thousand (1,000) voting machines for use in the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, The extreme dissatisfaction caused by their, the said election commissioners,' alleged gross disregard for the provisions of the foregoing statute, and their alleged lack of respect for the rights of the voters of the entire State of Illinois, and the taxpayers of the city of Chicago, in making said purchase; did cause an investigation to be made and a protest to be filed by the "Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency" with the mayor and aldermen of the city of Chicago, as follows:

"To the Mayor and Aldermen of the City of Chicago:

GENTLEMEN—Your Honorable Body is again called upon to take official cognizance of the ill-advised and extravagant contract made by the Board of Election Commissioners in July, 1911, for the purchase of 1,000 voting machines, the contract price of which amounts in the aggregate to $942,500.00. The election commissioners are requesting the council to include in its appropriations for 1913 an item of $282,750.00 to be used for the payment of 300 of these machines. The first 300 machines delivered, the contract price of which was $188,500.00, have already been paid for under an appropriation made in 1912. The remaining 500 machines have not been delivered. If these 500 machines are delivered and have to be paid for by the city, it will be necessary for the council to appropriate within the next two years a total of $754,000.00 (including the appropriation now sought), for the purpose of paying for voting machines, which the Supreme Court of Illinois has recently decided do not comply with the requirements of the voting machine statute."

In compliance with the request of the election commissioners, the Finance Committee has included in the appropriation ordinance submitted to the Council Dec. 30, 1912, the following item:

Voting machines and trucks—

Three hundred voting machines, at $942.50 each.....	$282,750 00
All other items.....	585 00

Subject to payment by judgments or issuance of certificates	$283,335 00

It further appears from the ordinance that this sum of $283,335.00 is not appropriated from the corporate fund, but that it is "appropriated subject to judgments or issuance of certificates." No fund, however, is designated from which either judgments or certificates can be paid. Under these circumstances it is not clear in what manner the council intends this $283,335.00 shall be paid in case judgment is rendered or certificates are issued.

In this connection it should not be overlooked, however, that the contract price of these machines is to be regarded as an "expense" incurred by the election commissioners. This, in the view taken by the corporation counsel in his opinion rendered Jan. 29, 1912. Section 1 of Article VII of the City Election law provides that "such expenditures shall be paid by the city treasurer * * * out of any money in the city treasury not otherwise appropriated." Attention is directed to the fact that the city's traction fund is "money in the city treasury not otherwise appropriated" and out of which it is possible the holders of voting machine certificates or warrants might enforce their claims.

The Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency believes that the council should take notice of this situation and should refuse to appropriate further for these machines, which were purchased by the Board of Election Commissioners without consultation with the council and in utter disregard of the policy of caution demanded by the interests of the taxpaying public.

THE 1911 INVESTIGATION AND REPORT OF THE BUREAU.

When it was learned in May, 1911 that the Board of Election Commissioners was planning to make a contract for the purchase of voting machines, the Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency made an investigation of the subject. This investigation disclosed the fact that the voting machine was still in the experimental stage and that there were numerous objections to the purchase of a large number of such machines. In a report issued at that time the bureau stated:

"The Chicago situation presents unusual obstacles to the successful use of voting machines. Among these are the long ballot made necessary by the large number of offices to be filled at some elections; the group voting for certain offices, such as judges and county commissioners; and the system of cumulative voting for members of the Lower House of the General Assembly, which is peculiar to Illinois. The fact that women may vote for university trustees, but not for other officers requires a restrictive device that introduces additional complications. The long ballot necessitates the use in Chicago of a larger and heavier machine than is required in other cities that have adopted voting machines. The size and weight of the machine cause it to present problems of transportation, of storage and of setting up in the voting booth. There are special complexities due to the use of the voting machine at a preliminary [primary] election at which nominations are to be made for a large number of offices.

"Aside from the mechanical operation of the machine itself, there are other elements of uncertainty connected with the use of voting machines that call for the experimentation and caution. It cannot be told until the actual trial is made how rapidly the voting can be done by machine, even assuming the mechanism to operate perfectly so far as all except the human element is concerned. This bureau learns that in Minneapolis, where voting machines are in use, the voting has been so much lower than anticipated that it has been found necessary to install two machines to a precinct of 600 voters, instead of one. The Illinois law contemplates a single machine to a precinct of 600 votes. Then there are the problems of transportation and storage and the proper setting of the machines in the booths. Three of these machines will make a truck load and it will require at least three men to handle one. Skilled persons will be required to set them up when taken from the storage room to the voting booth. It would seem that the Board of Election Commissioners ought to acquire experience in handling 50 or 100 machines before undertaking the burden of managing 1,200. This experience, moreover, should be in connection with the most trying elections, such as the primary of April, 1912, and the election of the following November, when the long ballot must be voted."

Inquiries made at that time disclosed the fact also that although the city of Chicago would be expected to make provision for paying for the machines to be purchased, the financial officers of the city had not been consulted in regard to the matter and further, that prior Boards of Election Commissioners had secured appropriations from the city council before taking steps looking to the purchase of voting machines. In this connection it was pointed out that although the plans of the present board contemplated the expenditure of approximately $1,000,000.00, no prior board had deemed it wise to consider an initial expenditure in excess of $100,000.00.

As a result of this investigation, it seemed obvious, in view of the difficulties and uncertainties which existed, that ordinary business prudence demanded a policy of experimentation and caution on the part of the election commissioners. The main conclusions reached by the bureau were summarized in its report, as follows:

1. The number of voting machines to be purchased in the near future should be limited to one hundred at the most; and the purchase of a greater number of machines should be postponed until after trial at the primaries of April, 1912, and at the election of November, 1912, of such limited number of machines.

2. The Board of Election Commissioners should seek to secure the cooperation of the financial authorities of the city in advance of action looking to the purchase of voting machines, whatever the amount involved.

THE CONTRACT OF 1911 AND THE APPROPRIATION OF 1912.

In the face of the situation above set forth, of which they were fully advised, and notwithstanding the adverse comments of the public press, the Board of Election Commissioners and the Empire Voting Machine Company disregarded every principle of business prudence, and in July, 1911, entered into the contract mentioned for the purchase of 1,000 machines.

When the 1912 appropriation ordinance was before the council, that body was asked to appropriate $188,500.00 for the payment of 200 of the machines. While the matter was still pending, the bureau, on Feb. 5, 1912, petitioned the council not to make any appropriation "unless it (the contract) should be modified (1) to provide for the delivery of not to exceed 100 machines on the first installment, and (2) to relieve the board from the obligation to take 1,000 machines if those delivered on the first installment shall not prove satisfactory when placed in use." This suggestion on the part of the bureau was disregarded. The appropriation asked for was made and the 200 machines were delivered and paid for.

At the time the council was considering this appropriation of $188,500.00, it had before it, however, the opinion of the corporation counsel in which he advised that it was "incumbent on the city of Chicago to pay the obligations incurred by the Board of Election Commissioners in buying such voting machines." It is perhaps fair to assume that many of the aldermen voting for that appropriation believed it their duty to do so on the advice thus given by the corporation counsel.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

The situation at the present time differs radically from that which existed in January and February, 1912. The corporation counsel in his opinion then rendered confined himself to the question of the liability of the city to pay the "obligations" incurred by the Board of Election Commissioners. At that time no opportunity had been afforded to test the machines at either a primary or a general election. He assumed apparently that the voting machines contracted for and to be delivered would meet the requirements of the voting machine law and that, when such machines were accepted by the Board of Election Commissioners, a binding obligation would be incurred.

The voting machine statute is explicit on the point that no voting machine shall be purchased unless it is so constructed as to meet all the requirements specified in that Act, among which is the requirement that "each elector can understandingly and within the period of one minute cast his vote for all candidates of his choice." The Board of Election Commissioners is given no power to purchase any machine which does not meet this requirement and it seems obvious that, if the board were to make a contract for a machine which did not meet the above requirement, the contract so made would not create a binding obligation on the city because of the lack of power in the board to make such a contract. It would seem equally clear that, no matter what may be the terms of the contract made by the board, if the machine itself when delivered does not, in fact, meet the requirements of the voting machine statute, the city would not be bound. Attention is called, however, to the contract under which the machines in question were purchased. By its terms the company "agrees that each machine so furnished shall in all respects comply with all the requirements of the statutes of Illinois now in force relating to the use of voting machines."

It is said that the Board of Election Commissioners has accepted the machines and in so doing has found that they meet the requirements of the statute, it is sufficient answer to say that the finding of the board in this respect is not conclusive and that in the case of these particular machines the board has only recently been overruled by the Supreme Court of the State.

THE DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT.

On Dec. 17, 1912, the Supreme Court handed down an opinion in the case of The People ex rel Hull v. Taylor et al, in which it holds that the voting machines, for the payment of which an appropriation is now asked, do not comply with the voting machine statute in that they are not so constructed that "each elector can, understandingly and within the period of one minute, cast his vote for all candidates of his choice." Moreover, the decision in this case requires the election commissioners to furnish ballot boxes and paper ballots in all precincts.

In its opinion in the foregoing case the court said:

"It is insisted on behalf of the respondents (the election commissioners) that the action of the Board of Voting Machines Commissioners and the Board of Election Commissioners in determining that the voting machines complied with the requirements of the law in this particular should be held conclusive upon this question; that the powers conferred on these officers require the exercise of judgment and are discretionary in their character, and that their determination of the question of fact is final. If a discretionary power is exercised so as to produce a manifest injustice, the courts may interfere to require its due exercise and prevent a public wrong. * * * If votes cannot, in fact, be cast upon the machines within the time allowed by law, their use will result in some voters being deprived of their votes. Such an injustice, if clearly shown, will justify the interference of the court to afford a remedy by mandamus. It is alleged in the answer that the voting machines in question have been in satisfactory use in various cities of different states for a number of years, and that arrangements have been made for the instruction on the day of election, and before that day, of voters in the use of the machine. On the argument of the cause one of the machines was present and demonstrations of the manner of its use were made by various persons. Fifty-three officers were to be voted for besides the presidential electors, and there were three public policy questions and four propositions to issue bonds. There were party nominations by six parties, although one was for a part only, of the offices. It is easy to vote a straight party ticket on the machine. It can be done in a few seconds. An expert in the use of the machine can vote a split ticket, even as large as the ticket at the November election, in one minute. The requirement of the statute, however, is that 'each elector can, understandingly, and within the period of one minute, cast his vote for all candidates of his choice.' 'Each elector' does not mean here absolutely every elector, for a voter may be blind or crippled so as to be physically unable to use the machine, and the statute provides for such a condition, but the term does include at least every elector of ordinary intelligence having the reasonable use of his faculties and members. If the voter must be a trained expert—if he must be a man of more than ordinary intelligence, keenness of vision or alertness of motion—in order to be able to vote as he wishes within a minute, then the machine which requires these things of him does not comply with the law. As a matter of fact, we find that the machine does not comply with the law in enabling the voter understandingly to cast his vote in one minute. It is not enough that one voter or many voters can possibly, by strenuous effort, vote for the candidates they desire in one minute. It is necessary, at least, that the average voter who wishes to vote for candidates upon two or more or all of the various tickets can by a reasonable effort be surely able to cast the vote he desires to cast, within the time allowed him by law for doing so. We take into consideration the action and finding of the Board of Voting Machine Commissioners and the Board of Election Commissioners as well as our own observation, and we are constrained to find that the machines do not comply with the law in respect to the time within which votes can be cast, and that their use, if voters were allowed only one minute to vote, would result in the disfranchisement of many electors.'"

CONCLUSION.

In entering into a contract for the purchase and sale of 1,000 voting machines, the Board of Election Commissioners and the Empire Voting Machine Company chose to disregard not only the interest of the taxpaying public, but the counsel of caution and the principles of ordinary business prudence. They acted with their eyes open. There are no equities to be considered or preserved.

It is the opinion of the Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency that there is no legal liability on the part of the city to pay for the voting machines in question. The bureau believes that any appropriation by the council would not only be illegal, but because of the flagrant wrong resulting to the community from the transaction, would expose the members of the council to severe criticism.

The bureau, therefore, respectfully petitions the city council not to make any appropriation for the payment of said voting machines. It submits that the claim of the Empire Voting Machine Company should not be recognized by a contingent appropriation or in any other form. The bureau further petitions the council to adopt an order directing the corporation counsel to contest vigorously any suit or proceeding which may be brought to enforce payment for any of said machines.

Respectfully submitted,

JULIUS ROSENWALD, Chairman;
HARRIS S. KELLER, Director;
Chicago Bureau of Public Efficiency.

CHICAGO, January 1, 1913, and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the State Board of Voting Machine Commissioners, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago and the Empire Voting Machine Company, entered into a conspiracy to qualify the Empire Voting Machines, contrary to the provisions of the Election law; and it is further alleged, that the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago and the Empire Voting Machine Company entered into a conspiracy to defraud the taxpayers of the city of Chicago, of a sum of money alleged to fall little short of four hundred thousand dollars ($400,000.00), by agreeing to a purchase price of nine hundred and forty-two thousand five hundred dollars ($942,500.00) in the aggregate, to be paid to the Empire Voting Machine Company, by the city of Chicago for the delivery of one thousand (1,000) Empire Voting Machines, to the said Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the Empire Voting Machines can be manipulated at will for the purpose of fraudulent voting, and are wholly inadequate for the uses as specified in the statutes, and it is further alleged that after having been used and fairly tried in Omaha, Burlington, Cleveland, Denver, Detroit, Los Angeles and in more than fifty cities in New Jersey, these machines have been discarded as inefficient, because wholly unsafe, cumbersome and subject to fraudulent manipulation; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that there exists a gigantic conspiracy, engineered by the shrewd intelligence of powerful and corrupt influences, to use the election machinery of the city of Chicago, through and by the further use of the said Empire Voting Machines, that in the end, city, county, state and national elections may be absolutely controlled or materially influenced; and,

WHEREAS, Great scandal has resulted by these persistent and repeated allegations of fraud, directed at the election machinery of the city of Chicago; and,

WHEREAS, The city of Chicago casts approximately forty (40) per cent of the vote of Illinois; the entire electorate of this State stands in eminent danger of disfranchisement in general elections should these allegations be true; and,

WHEREAS, It is alleged that the peculiar political and governmental conditions now existing in the city of Chicago and county of Cook, precludes the possibility of a thorough and impartial investigation as to the facts by the local authorities; and,

WHEREAS, There appears to be ample grounds for a thorough, searching, exhaustive and impartial investigation of the alleged scandalous conditions; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring therein, That a joint committee of twelve (12) shall be appointed; six (6) to be named by the Chairman of the Committee on Elections of the House of Representatives, and six (6) to be named by the Senate; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination of the official conduct and acts of the State Board of Voting Machine Commissioners, the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago, and any and all of the official conduct and acts of all of the election officers of the city of Chicago, and the county of Cook in whatsoever capacity heretofore or now employed; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into the contract entered into between the Board of Election Commissioners of the city of Chicago or its agents and the Empire Voting Machine Company, its agents, trustees, assigns, heirs or receivers; that this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into the organization, creation, incorporation or establishment of the Empire Voting Machine Company, for the purpose of ascertaining the identity of its stockholders, officers, owners, trustees, agents, heirs, assigns, or receivers; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination into its workings, mechanism, efficiency, quality, material, manufacture, cost and sale price of the Empire Voting Machines; that this committee be, and is, hereby authorized and empowered to make searching investigation and exhaustive examination of any and all matters of whatsoever nature referred to; in the foregoing preamble and this resolution proper; that this committee be and is hereby authorized and empowered to issue subpoenas for the purpose of compelling witnesses to attend upon their deliberations and compel said witnesses to answer their inquiry, and to issue subpoenas for the purpose of compelling the production into their hands of any and all books, papers, writings, documents, records, machines, instruments, tools or whatsoever objects, utensils or things that they may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution; that this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to employ such assistance as they deem necessary to carry out the provisions of this resolution, however no State moneys, now or hereafter appropriated for expense incurred under the provisions of this resolution, shall be spent outside the boundaries of this State, except that foreign witnesses coming before this committee may be reimbursed as to their actual transportation expense only, or for the purpose of actual expense incurred in having any depositions taken by others than the members of this committee, outside the boundaries of this State; and, be it further

Resolved, That this committee be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to make their investigations and examinations to cover a period, dating from January 1, 1903, to and including the conclusion of their deliberations; that this committee, be and is, hereby authorized, empowered and instructed to report its findings with its recommendations to this session of the General Assembly, if within the range of possibilities or to any special session of this General Assembly, or, and not later than to the Forty-ninth General Assembly.

Mr. Denvir offered the following amendment to the resolution:

Amend House Joint Resolution No. 23 by striking out the figures "49" in line 667, page 24 of the printed resolution and insert in lieu thereof the figures "48."

The question then being, "Shall the amendment be adopted?" and the yeas and nays being called, it was decided in the negative by the following vote: Yeas, 11; nays, 32.

The following voted in the affirmative: Messrs.

Canaday,
Carroll,
Compton,

Denvir, Glackin,

Haase,
Keller,

Shaw,
Tossey,

Waage,
Womack,

Yeas—11.

The following voted in the negative: Messrs.

Andrus,	Chamberlin,	Gray,	Hurburgh,	Maclean,

The following voted in the negative: Mr.

Tossey,

Nays—1.

Mr. Chamberlin moved that the vote whereby the Senate concurred in the adoption of the resolution be reconsidered.

On motion of Mr. Magill, the motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

Mr. Bailey introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 454, for "An Act to provide for liens by persons erecting monuments, gravestones, enclosure or other structures in cemetery or burial grounds, and providing for the manner of enforcing such liens."

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Barr introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 455, for "An Act making an appropriation for the necessary expenses of the commission appointed to investigate and inquire into the condition of walls in Will County, pursuant to Senate Resolution No. 48,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. Barr introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 456, for "An Act to make an appropriation for ordinary and other expenses of the Illinois State Penitentiary,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. Broderick introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 457, for "An Act making an appropriation to cover the unexpended balance of moneys heretofore appropriated for the relief of the suffering and destitute miners and the families and dependents of miners who lost their lives in the mine disaster at Cherry, Illinois, which lapsed and was covered back into the State treasury by the Board of Administration,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. Cornwell, by request, introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 458, for "An Act to amend section 47 of an Act entitled, 'An Act concerning local improvements,' approved June 14, 1897, in force July 1, 1897,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Cornwell, by request, introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 459, for "An Act to amend section 56 of an Act entitled, 'An Act concerning local improvements,' approved June 14, 1897, in force July 1, 1897," composed of the Governor, the Lieutenant Governor, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Chairmen of the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and of the House, the Chairmen of the Committees on Judiciary of the Senate and of the House, five other Senators and five other members of the House of Representatives. The Governor shall be ex-officio chairman of said commission.

Sec. 2. Immediately after the passage and approval of this Act, and thereafter at the beginning of each regular session of the General Assembly, each house shall appoint from its membership, in the same manner as the members of other committees are appointed, the members of said commission from such house, who are not hereinbefore made members of said commission by virtue of being chairmen of committees of such house.

Sec. 3. The Governor, Lieutenant Governor, and the Speaker of the House of Representatives shall serve as members of the commission during the term of office for which they shall have been elected, and the members appointed from either house, including those serving on said commission by virtue of being chairmen of committees of either house, shall serve until the convening of the next General Assembly after their appointment.

Sec. 4. The commission shall meet during the regular and special sessions of the General Assembly, and during the intervals between the regular sessions, and at such times and places as it may determine. The members of the commission shall receive no compensation for their services as members thereof, but shall be allowed their actual and necessary expenses, incurred in the performance of their official duties, out of any money appropriated for the use of the commission.

Sec. 5. The commission shall appoint a secretary who shall be the executive officer of the commission, and who shall devote his entire time to the duties of his office, and shall follow no other gainful profession, occupation or employment. The commission shall also appoint such other officers, agents and employees as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, and shall fix the compensation of each of its appointees: Provided, the salary of the secretary shall be fixed at a sum not to exceed five thousand dollars ($5,000.00) per annum.

Sec. 6. The commission shall have power:

(a) To make a survey and thorough investigation of the governmental, industrial, social and economic needs of the State, and to make recommendations of needed legislation based upon such survey and investigation.

(b) To investigate and report upon the operation of laws of other states and countries in cases where such investigation and report will afford information of value to the General Assembly.

(c) To investigate the administration of any department of the State Government.

(d) To investigate the expenditures of any appropriation made by the General Assembly.

(e) To prepare and submit to the General Assembly drafts of bills upon matters investigated by it when such investigation shows further legislation to be desirable.

(f) To act through committees appointed by it from within or without its membership or or partly within and partly without its membership.

Sec. 7. It shall be the duty of said commission

(a) To establish in the State Capitol a legislative reference bureau which shall be open daily, excepting Sundays and legal holidays, in which shall be collected and kept in such manner as may make the same readily accessible such laws, reports, books, periodicals, documents, catalogues, check lists, digests, summaries of the laws of other states upon current legislation and such other printed or written matter as may aid the members of the General Assembly in the performance of their official duties.

(b) To cause to be prepared, printed and distributed for the use of the members of the General Assembly, before the convening of the regular session of the General Assembly, a detailed budget of the appropriations which the officers of the several departments of the State government report to it are required for their several departments for the biennium for which appropriations are to be made by the next General Assembly, together with a comparative statement of the sums appropriated by the preceding General Assembly for the same purposes, and the recommendations of the State Civil Service Commission with reference to standardizing the salaries in the Civil Service of the State.

(c) To investigate and report upon such matters as it may have been directed so to do by the General Assembly or either house thereof.

(d) To afford to any member of the General Assembly upon his request such legal assistance and information as may be practicable in the preparation of bills proposed to be introduced into the General Assembly by such member.

(e) To keep a full and correct record of its proceedings and of all investigations conducted by it, to afford public access to the record of its proceedings and investigations, and to report the same or parts thereof to the General Assembly at its convening.

(f) To furnish to either house of the General Assembly, upon request of such house, a copy of any file or record in the possession of said commission.

Sec. 8. Every officer of the State government and of the municipal and quasi municipal corporations within this State shall give to the commission and to its employees when acting under the authority of the commission free access to his accounts and shall, without compensation, upon written request from said commission or any committee thereof or its authorized officer, employee or agent, furnish such facts and information as shall be requested when such facts or information are within his knowledge or contained in any accounts or investigations in his office or under his control.

Sec. 9. Every department of the State government or officer thereof when so requested by said commission, shall co-operate with said commission in any investigation or inquiry being conducted by said commission.

Sec. 10. The officers of the several departments of the State government shall make duplicate reports by the first day of November next preceding the convening of the regular sessions of the General Assembly of the appropriations which are required for their several departments for the biennium for which appropriations are to be made by such General Assembly. One of said duplicate reports shall be filed with the Governor and the other with the secretary of said commission.

Sec. 11. The Secretary of State shall provide said commission with suitable offices in the State Capitol, convenient to the place of meeting of the General Assembly, and shall further provide said commission with the necessary furniture, stationery and supplies.

Sec. 12. The board of commissioners for the management of the State library shall co-operate with the said commission and shall make the facilities of said library accessible so far as practicable for the use of said commission, and are hereby authorized to loan to said commission any books, periodicals, documents, reports or other printed or written matter belonging to said library.

Sec. 13. All proper expenses incurred by said commission shall be paid out of the appropriation made for its use upon itemized vouchers drawn by the secretary and approved by the Governor.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Ettelson, Senate Bill No. 210, a bill for "An Act to amend an Act entitled, 'An Act to authorize judges of courts of record to appoint jury commissioners and prescribing their powers and duties,' approved June 15, 1887, in force July 1, 1887, as amended by Act approved June 9, 1897, in force July 1, 1897, and Act approved and in force April 24, 1899, by amending sections one (1), two (2), three (3), four (4), five (5) and six (6), and by adding thereto two new sections to be numbered four "a" (4-a) and four "b" (4-b),"

The foregoing message, under the rules, was laid over for one day.

A message from the Governor by William L. Sullivan, Secretary to the Governor:

Mr. President—I am directed by the Governor to lay before the Senate the following communication.

STATE OF ILLINOIS,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
SPRINGFIELD, April 23, 1913.

Gentlemen of the Forty-eighth General Assembly:

Herewith I submit to you for your consideration the unanimous report of the Mining Investigation Commission appointed by the Forty-seventh General Assembly, in which certain recommendations are made in relation to amending the mining laws of this State.

I have not had time to examine this report, but in view of the fact that the recommendations are unanimous, I would respectfully suggest that a bill be introduced amending the mining laws of this State in accordance with the recommendations of this commission and that your honorable body take such action thereon as may be for the best interests of the people of the State of Illinois.

Respectfully submitted,

E. F. DUNNE,
Governor.

The foregoing message and accompanying report were referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

A message from the Governor by William L. Sullivan, Secretary to the Governor:

Mr. President—I am directed by the Governor to lay before the Senate the following communication.

STATE OF ILLINOIS,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
SPRINGFIELD, April 23, 1913.

Gentlemen of the Forty-eighth General Assembly:

An investigation of the Fish and Game Departments of the State Government, made at my direction by the State Civil Service Commission, has shown a condition to exist of waste and extravagance in the expenditure of public money, coupled with almost utter failure properly to enforce the Fish and Game Laws and a serious neglect to conserve great natural resources of the State.

The extent of the public wealth in the Illinois River fishing grounds is not generally known. It is estimated that the value of fish yielded by the river, which, in 1908, according to census reports, was $900,000.00, has increased to more than $1,500,000.00 annually. The value of the game which the State laws seek to protect is also great, though incomparable with the fish product commercially. In the great fishing grounds of the Illinois the State has a natural resource which will increase in value tremendously as food prices become higher and which should be conserved by wise laws firmly and impartially enforced. Our present laws are not enforced. Owing to this, the destruction of commercial fish has reached a scale that is alarming. Unless it is permanently checked the Illinois River will eventually cease to be a great natural asset. There is also need of some intelligent effort directed by scientific minds to provide spawning grounds and fish hatcheries which will insure the continuance of the fish supply, and this need the present system makes no attempt to meet.

Immediate and radical action is required to reorganize both the Fish and the Game Departments on a basis which will insure enforcement of the laws and protection of our valuable game and fish. In my judgment this can best be accomplished by the consolidation of the two departments and the creation of a Game and Fish Conservation Commission, with authority to appoint wardens who shall have jurisdiction in the enforcement of all laws relating to both subjects. In practically every other state of the union such consolidation was long ago effected and it is my opinion that the same consolidation should take place here.

Not only will such consolidation effect a substantial saving in money but by reorganizing the system of wardens and deputy wardens, by disposing of the expensive and impractical fish boat, the Steamer Illinois, and substituting inexpensive and useful launch patrols, and by abolishing the game farm at Auburn or conducting it in an economical manner for the propagation of game birds which may add to the natural wealth of the State, the money which is expended can be made to accomplish a great amount of real good where now it accomplishes little or nothing.

As organized at present the Game Department consists of a game commissioner, who is paid $4,700.00 a year, including all of his various salaries and allowances; sixteen district game wardens, who are paid $75.00 a month and expenses; 100 deputy wardens, who are paid $2.00 a day and expenses, and special deputy game wardens without compensation except for a share in fines which they may have imposed. I am reliably informed there are in the neighborhood of 500 of these special deputies in Cook County alone.

The Fish Department consists of a commissioner and chief warden, who is paid $175.00 a month and expenses in this dual capacity; two commissioners, who are paid $100.00 a month and expenses; seven district fish wardens, who are paid $75.00 a month and expenses, and forty-five deputy fish wardens, who are paid $2.00 a day and expenses.

In the report of the Civil Service Commission, facts are cited which raise grave doubt as to whether the employees in either of these departments give any efficient service to the State. Further facts regarding failure to enforce laws, waste of money in the game farm and on the fish boat, prevalence of fraudulent per diem claims and expense accounts, and the entire absence of any intelligent and constructive effort to conserve the public wealth in either fish or game, are given in detail in the report of the Civil Service Commission and in the reports of audits of these departments conducted under the direction of the State and Department Auditor, all of which are herewith transmitted.

I recommend that a bill be passed abolishing both Fish and Game Departments as they now exist and substituting therefor a Game and Fish Conservation Commission, to be composed of three commissioners, the president to be the executive officer and to be paid $5,000.00 a year, and the remaining two commissioners to be persons of scientific attainments, versed in the biology of fish and game, to be paid $2,500.00 a year each.

I recommend that under the direction of this commission a force of six wardens at $1,500.00 a year each and sixty deputy wardens at $1,200.00 a year each shall be employed continually in the enforcement of the conservation laws, and that in such seasons as extra service is required, not more than sixty deputy wardens may be appointed temporarily at $100.00 a month each.

I recommend further that in adopting the bill for such reorganization and consolidation, particular attention shall be given to the drafting of wise and effective measures for the conservation of commercial fishing as well as for the protection of the interests of sportsmen, and that in consideration of these measures the advice of scientific experts shall be consulted.

Respectfully submitted,

E. F. DUNNE,
Governor.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION REPORT ON GAME AND FISH DEPARTMENTS.

Hon. Edward F. Dunne, Governor of the State of Illinois:

DEAR SIR—The Civil Service Commission, pursuant to your direction and the requirements of the Civil Service Statute, has conducted an investigation into the efficiency of the Fish and Game Departments of the State Government and herewith submits a preliminary report with recommendations for immediate action toward reorganization of these departments.

A mass of information has been obtained, through the examination of witnesses and otherwise, and this report is only a summary of the most significant portions of this information. Material assistance has been given by audits of these departments conducted under the direction of the State Department and Institution Auditor, Paul Matthews, and information obtained through these audits is made use of in this report.

As organized at present, the Game Department consists of a Game Commissioner who is paid $4,700.00 a year, including all of his various salaries and allowances; sixteen district game wardens who are paid $75.00 a month and expenses; one hundred deputy game wardens who are paid $2.00 a day and expenses, most of whom work only 20 days or less a month; and special deputy game wardens, of whom it is reported there are 500 in Cook County alone.

The Fish Department consists of a commissioner and chief warden who is paid $175.00 a month and expenses in this dual capacity; two commissioners who are paid $100.00 a month and expenses; seven district fish wardens who are paid $75.00 a month and expenses; and forty-five deputy fish wardens who are paid $2.00 a day and expenses not exceeding $35.00 a month each, and who are paid for the most part for not more than 20 days a month.

It has been the experience of the Civil Service Commission for a long time past that whether the deputies in either of these departments gave any efficient service to the State was open to grave question. It was obvious that competent persons would be difficult to find who would perform the services which these deputies should render for $2.00 a day, especially when this employment did not exceed more than 20 days a month.

In an effort to establish some degree of efficiency in these departments, the commission has required each deputy to submit a monthly report specifying day by day the duties he claimed to have performed on the days for which he was to be paid. Suspicion had arisen that these reports in a majority of cases were being falsified. The first steps in the investigation was to ascertain how the time of these deputies was being actually occupied and compare the facts with the reports which they sent in to the commission. The following instances are offered as typical of the prevailing condition in both departments. It is not contended that there are no industrious and efficient deputies in either department, for the contrary is true, but the efficient men are the exceptions that prove the rule.

Peter Rush, Deputy Fish Warden at Danville, is also a freight brakeman for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad. The substance of his reports to the Civil Service Commission, indicating services rendered during November and December, 1912, and January, February and March, 1913, is hereby submitted for comparison with a statement of his working time for the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railroad prepared under the direction of the superintendent of the Chicago division.

The comparison discloses that Rush charged the State for services on thirty-one days when he was employed exclusively by the railroad. In addition to the per diem claim, expense accounts were presented to the Fish Department for alleged expenses in enforcing the fish laws at times when Mr. Rush was on top of his freight train, miles away from Danville.

The railroad accountants explain that the heading "miles" represents the number of hours worked before overtime began, figuring 10 miles to 1 hour. Thus, on February 7th Mr. Rush worked 14 hours and 50 minutes for the road (145 miles). On March 7th he worked 11 hours (110 miles) regular time and 4 hours, 55 minutes overtime, or 15 hours, 55 minutes in all. In parallel columns are shown the work performed by Mr. Rush for the railroad and the work he alleged in his per diem bills he performed for the Fish Commission on the same days:

In March information reached the Civil Service Commission that Edward Bennett, a deputy game warden of Danville, accompanied by a party of Vermilion County hunters, had gone to Meredosia on the Illinois River for a two weeks' hunting trip. A reliable investigator was sent to Meredosia and arrived there March 22d. He visited the cabin where Bennett and his party had been and was told that Bennett had left the night before. He found the ground about the cabin strewn with the feathers of red-wing black birds, which are protected by the game laws and was told that Bennett and his companions had engaged in a slaughter of these birds on the previous day.

Bennett made a report to the Civil Service Commission purporting to show that he had been in Vermilion County enforcing the game laws during the time when he was hunting on the Illinois River and a similar report to the Game Commissioner was accompanied by an expense account, much of which was obviously falsified.

John R. Marshall, Colonel of the 8th Infantry, I. N. G., and district game warden, stationed at Chicago, drew $208.33 for 15 days' service inspecting the companies of his regiment between March 4th and April 1st. He made a report to the Civil Service Commission and presented an expense account for $51.95 to the Game Department purporting to show that he was occupied as game warden every day of March, Sundays included, and on most of these days had been put to expense traveling.

Under oath Colonel Marshall testified that he had inspected Company I at Quincy March 14th. On this date his expense account and monthly report have him checking up county clerks at Kangley and Streator. He testified that he inspected Company M at Metropolis March 17th, and was in Springfield the following day. According to his report and expense account he was in Chicago March 17th and in Genoa and Kingston March 18th. He testified that he inspected Company K at Peoria March 21st, but he charges the Game Department expenses for a visit on that day to Rochelle and for work in Chicago. Colonel Marshall was asked to explain these discrepancies but could not do so.

The Game Department has a rule permitting deputy and district wardens to make a charge of $1.00 per day for livery hire and 25 cents per day for horse feed. Every bill rendered, with comparatively few exceptions, contains charges for livery. In nearly every instance the deputy game wardens claim to be the owners of the rigs and render receipts for moneys paid to themselves. In other words, John Smith, deputy game warden, writes that he received of John Smith (himself) the sum of $30.00 for one rig owned by himself. These vouchers are invariably OK'd by the accounting officer of the Game Department. Apparently no attempt has been made to ascertain whether the men who render such bills actually own or use the rigs for which they are paid.

One deputy warden living at Pontiac, Mr. J. W. Morris, rendered a bill for $35.75 for the use of his automobile during the months of March and February, at the rate of $2.00 per day for the automobile and 75 cents per day for gasoline supplies.

The vouchers for expenses sent in by deputy wardens are, in many instances, of a suspicious character. The accounting officer of the Game Department stated when his attention was called to certain curious irregularities in these vouchers that he had observed those things and many others since he was connected with the department, that when he undertook to check them up the similarity of hand-writings in receipts gave him a headache and that he only passed them because in most instances they called for small sums for meals.

STEAMER ILLINOIS AND THE ILLINOIS RIVER SITUATION.

Approximately a third of the appropriation for the work of the Fish Commission has been expended in the operation of the Steamer "Illinois," which makes its headquarters at Havana and plies up and down the river.

Commissioner Caldwell under oath during the investigation at Havana, said of the "Illinois": "The fact of the business is I have never seen any very big use made of the Steamer 'Illinois' except to work politics."

Q. What do you mean by "working politics?"

A. Well, the custom has been since I have known anything about it, if the Governor had a bunch of people he wanted to have take a boat ride and have a good time, it was ordered out for that purpose. It didn't make much difference what the work was, that is what it has been and that is what it will be yet.

When asked if there was not a great deal of work to be done in preserving fish or in enforcing the law with a steamboat, he replied: "I judge there is not a great deal you can do by a steamboat."

Q. If you were advising as to means of obtaining greater efficiency in this department, would you believe in retaining the boat "Illinois?"

A. No, sir; that is, now understand me, if I was doing this as a private business where I could absolutely do as I saw fit, I would take about the number of launches that could be used for the same amount of money that the "Illinois" costs to maintain and I would do ten times the business that is done now.

Q. With the same money?

A. Yes, you can do ten times the business for half the money.

Q. In other words, the "Illinois" is a "white elephant?"

A. Yes, sir; that is my judgment of it.

Mr. Caldwell stated that during two months of last summer the boat was used in patrolling the Mississippi River and that six arrests were made in that service. Whether any fines were collected from these arrests, he did not know. Much of the time the boat was stationed at East St. Louis where it served the purpose of a floating hotel for deputy fish wardens who were riding about the city checking up on non-resident fishing licenses. The expense of these six arrests and of this hotel service was about $1,800.00 for the two months.

In 1912 it cost the State $3,382.00 to maintain the boats of the Fish Commission, most of this being spent on the "Illinois." The most important service of the "Illinois" to the commission during the year was the patrolling of the Mississippi above referred to.

Apparently no attempt is made by the commission to enforce the fishing laws either on the Illinois River or elsewhere in the State. Wm. Courey, District Fish Warden at Bloomington and B. J. Merrill, Deputy Fish Warden at Hinsdale, both testified under oath that they had never received any encouragement from their superiors in their efforts to enforce the laws, but on the contrary, Mr. Caldwell had forbidden them to bring prosecutions against shippers on the Illinois River whom they had detected shipping black bass.

Black bass is the highest priced fish caught in the Illinois River and its sale is forbidden by the law; nevertheless it can be stated with assurance that a large and profitable traffic in this fish exists with little attempt on the part of the fish commissioners and the wardens stationed along the Illinois River to suppress it. What confiscations are made are made not at the shipping point but at the destination.

Both Mr. Courey and Mr. Merrill stated that the traffic could easily be stopped if a bona fide attempt to enforce the law was made along the river. A portion of the testimony of Mr. Merrill is of interest. He said:

"My first confiscation made was of the United States Express Company at the Rock Island Depot, Chicago, on a shipment of under-sized buffalo shipped by Bauter Brothers, of Henry, Illinois. I wanted to prosecute them but the fish warden said: 'You have got eighteen months to prosecute them, wait until after the primaries.'"

This policy of the department has put a premium on law breaking and led to a systematic violation of the law by shippers who, as Mr. Merrill phrased it,

"If they ship black bass they figure that if it goes through, they are that much ahead and if they confiscate it, they are just out the fish and in no danger of a fine."

Black bass has retailed as high as 40 cents a pound in Chicago. It is caught nowhere except in the Illinois River in commercial quantities. Messrs. Merrill and Courey make nearly all the confiscations made. Both were asked:

"Do the confiscations made by you represent only a small proportion of all the illegal shipments made?"

Both replied, "Yes."

It will not be disputed by anyone well informed that the Illinois River is the center of hunting as well as fishing in this State. A visit was paid to Havana, which is the headquarters of the Fish Department and the river headquarters of the Game Department, on March 31st. Duck shooting in that vicinity was then at its height.

Witnesses testified under oath that shooting before sunrise and after sunset in violation of the law, was common, that professional hunters slaughtered ducks unmolested, and that on the grounds of private clubs bordering the river, the law was constantly violated as regards size of bag, and time of shooting. H. W. Thomas, Deputy Game Warden at Havana, was examined. He testified that his activities this spring (1913) had been chiefly looking after a cabin boat owned by the Game Department. He could hear illegal shooting any morning or evening on the river, but had made no arrests this spring. He had not visited the private clubs, nor made any attempt to curb the professional hunters. Thomas, in excuse for his failure to enforce the laws, said he had received no instructions from Springfield. What is true of the present season has been to a great extent true in the past. No serious attempt ever has been made to secure efficiency in the game organization by sending capable men to locations where their services to the State would be valuable.

THE GAME FARM.

The audit made under the direction of the Department and Institution Auditor shows that the game farm at Auburn cost the State, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, $67,142.00. Of this, living expenses of commissioner and purchases of food supplies, etc., consumed $20,665.00; purchases of game birds, $18,267.00; employees of game farm, $21,662.00; lease, $3,442.00; freight and express charges for shipments of birds and eggs, $3,106.00.

The last item is explained in part by the mailing list of the department which gives the persons to whom birds were shipped but no information is recorded concerning payments for birds or eggs shipped from the game farm; nor is there a record of the numbers of birds or eggs shipped.

John Junemann, Chief Clerk of the Game Department, said that, while there was no record, he believed in 1912 some 20,000 birds were shipped to citizens. The names on the shipping list numbered 677. This would average nearly 30 birds per citizen. The farm cost about $60,000.00, which would make the average cost per bird $3.00 and the average present made by the State to each of the persons on the mailing list $90.00 in value.

As a matter of fact few, if any, of the persons on the shipping list received 30 birds. Mr. Junemann revised his first estimate and guessed that only 15,000 were sent out in 1912. However that may be the 677 persons on the mailing list for birds apparently were the recipients of presents that cost Illinois over $60,000.00. It is conceded by game experts that there is no well grounded hope that the pheasant can ever be made a game bird in this State. Their distribution has been merely a compliment from the State and the Game Department. In the year ending June 30, 1912, $18,267.00 was expended in the purchase of game birds and eggs. This was $8,267.00 in excess of the appropriation for that fiscal year. One thousand ring necked pheasant hens cost the State $2,500.00 or $2.50 each. Seven hundred and eighty-three pairs of Hungarian partridges cost $5.00 per pair.

The cost of the game farm during the period discussed was about 39 per cent of the $163,768.00, which represented the total expenditures of the department. This exceeded the salaries paid to district and deputy wardens ($43,295.00) by the sum of $23,847.00. It nearly equals the combined salaries and expense allowances of the wardens ($69,937.00). The game farm has been the chief concern of the Game Commissioner. He concentrated the resources of his department upon its maintenance and up-keep. The game farm embraces 533.93 acres. None of the land is owned by the State. It is held under eight separate leases representing as many parcels of land. All of the leases run to J. A. Wheeler personally or J. A. Wheeler, Game Commissioner, instead of the State of Illinois, and there is a serious question as to whether the State can be held liable under them. One parcel of land embracing 139 acres, adjoining the town of Auburn, and belonging to Mrs. K. B. Wheeler, was leased in 1910 for a term of four years at an annual rental of $6.00 per acre. This is equal to $834.00 per annum. Mrs. K. B. Wheeler is the mother of Dr. J. A. Wheeler, Game Commissioner.

CONSERVATION.

The importance of the Illinois River fishing industry is indicated by the statement, from a reliable authority, that 1,500 power boats are engaged in the industry at present along the river. The number of men who gain a livelihood from the industry were about 2,500, according to the census of 1910. The number is said to have increased nearly one thousand since the census figures were taken.

In 1908 the Illinois yielded 46,000,000 pounds of all kinds of fish, valued at nearly $900,000.00. The yield of carp alone in that year was 21,642,000 pounds, valued at $574,000.00. Carp is the largest single commercial product of the river. It is shipped from the market points such as Peoria, Pekin, Havana, Liverpool, Meredosia and Beardstown in enormous volume during the fishing season. Shipments at Havana alone during the present season have aggregated between forty and fifty carloads in a single month.

John Dickson, of Peoria, one of the largest fish dealers on the river, is authority for the statement that the production of carp from the Illinois at the present time will aggregate nearly $1,500,000.00 per annum. Mr. Dickson also says that the capital invested in Illinois River fisheries has mounted up to nearly $1,000,000.00. Five years ago it was a little more than $500,000.00.

Conservation of this great natural resource is a matter of the highest consideration. As fishing operations are conducted at the present time conservation receives very little consideration.

Fishermen destroy thousands of young fish with trammel nets. Bass, which are caught in their nets, are not infrequently gilled before being thrown back into the water. Every day boats containing large quantities of fish, which are not of legal size, are brought into the markets along the river and the illegal fish offered for sale. Testimony was given that more than 30,000 pounds of small fish have been thrown back into the river in one week at Havana. Most of these fish were dead or dying when restored to the water.

Owing to the non-enforcement of the fish laws this destruction of commercial fish has reached a scale that is alarming. Unless it is permanently checked the Illinois River will eventually cease to be one of the great natural assets of the State.

No adequate attempt is made at the present time to put back in the river channels hundreds of thousands of small fish that are left stranded by receding waters after the spring flood.

A great need of the river is the establishment of permanent spawning grounds. Those that are now accessible must sooner or later be shut off through the extension of drainage projects unless the State steps in and secures for purposes of propagation submerged fields that can be purchased at very low figures. The Fish Commission never has paid any attention to this phase of conservation.

Professor Stephen A. Forbes, entomologist of the State University, one of the best informed men in Illinois concerning natural resources of the Illinois River, says that the establishment of a few spawning grounds and their subsequent maintenance in a state of cleanliness would add enormously to the wealth of the State.

The German Government has taken up this subject, through its Department of Agriculture, in a manner that has produced large results. One of the features of the German activities has been an effort to educate fishermen to an understanding of their responsibilities. Lecture courses have been provided for them. Gradually their old habits of fishing illegally and destroying fish have been abandoned and generally they are coöperating with the government in conserving the resources of the German rivers. Professor Forbes believes that a similar propaganda could be carried on in Illinois with valuable results through the Department of Entomology of the University. The University for a number of years has undertaken the education of the farmers for the purpose of improving their agricultural methods. The fishermen along the Illinois River are a sturdy, honest body of men, who probably would be very glad indeed to feel that the State was taking some interest in their welfare. As matters stand now, fishermen, dealers and everybody connected with the business know the law is not being impartially enforced. They are sure that some fishermen and some dealers are being treated with suspicious favoritism. Rumors seriously affecting certain employees of the department are current along the river. The natural result of this situation is that those who feel that they are not on the inside take advantage of every opportunity that presents itself to help themselves. That, in a measure, accounts for the continuing violations of the fish law.

Increase in population and in the expense of food supplies, especially meat, will have the effect of increasing the importance of the river as a producer of food. The time may come in the near future when fish will be a general article of diet and for that reason immediate and intelligent conservation of the supply of fish is a matter of great economic importance.

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

The present system of two separate departments for the protection of game and fish is wasteful and inefficient. The present method of paying deputy wardens renders it impossible to establish permanent forces on a basis of discipline and efficiency.

It is manifestly impossible to secure the exclusive services of capable men to act as deputy game or fish wardens for $2.00 per day, even if they were guaranteed continuous employment. This difficulty is increased when continuous employment is not given. A majority of the present deputies have to be content with receiving pay for periods of not more than fifteen or twenty days each month. During part of the year when appropriations run low they are frequently cut down to the privilege of rendering expense accounts. The result, as has been shown, is that frequently no services are rendered, other occupations are undertaken, and the State position becomes a sinecure, with an accompaniment of falsified per diem reports and expense accounts.

The only way to procure a valuable force of capable, intelligent men is to decrease numbers and increase salaries. In this manner it will be possible to engage the exclusive services of wardens and deputy wardens who will render efficient service to the State, at no greater expense than the cost of the present indefensible system.

The two departments should be united. A warden can enforce the game laws and the fish laws with equal facility. The Illinois River alone offers an excellent reason why the two departments should be combined. It is not only the greatest fishing grounds but the greatest hunting grounds of the State, and a single force of wardens could protect both fish and game.

A force of say sixty deputy wardens with not less than six wardens and a commission consisting of an executive invested with authority to enforce the game and fish laws and two men of scientific attainments and information concerning the resources and needs of the State in the matter of game and fish would be capable of constructive and efficient conservation service, and it is recommended that a reorganization be undertaken on this basis.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES H. BURDETT,
WILLIAM B. MOULTON,
State Civil Service Commission.

AUDIT OF GAME DEPARTMENT.

CHICAGO, April 11, 1913.

Hon. James J. Brady, Auditor of Public Accounts, Springfield, Ill.:

DEAR SIR—We have made an examination of the affairs of the Illinois State Game Commission and now report thereon under headings which will convey to you in comprehensive form the results of such examination.

Books and Record—All figures quoted herein were taken from an appropriation and expenditure record, duplicate copies of voucher transmittal sheets, license record cards and cancelled bank checks. These records, while apparently well kept, are far from meeting the requirements of a modern office and are wholly inadequate to properly safeguard the interests of the State, particularly when it is considered that the expenditures of this department aggregate approximately $150,000.00 annually. No original or duplicate bills are on file in the department and no records showing the receipt of goods approved as to quantity, and quality, as a means of proper accounting, appear to ever have been required.

Appropriations—Reference is directed to Schedule "A" herewith. From this statement it will be seen that at the close of the first fiscal year, under the Appropriation Act of June 10, 1911, five out of seven appropriated funds had been overdrawn to the extent of $14,388.49. Inasmuch as the provisions of the aforesaid act without doubt contemplate the appropriations and expenditures of funds on a "per annum" basis, it would seem that the expenditure of the allotted funds had not been strictly in accordance with the provisions of said appropriation bill. Our contention is that the expenditures for the first fiscal year, as stated, should have been limited to the amount of the appropriation.

The funds appropriated to cover the "living expenses of the Game Commissioner as superintendent of the Game Farm," $1,000.00, and "food and supplies for game birds and animals," $15,000.00, have for some reason, been consolidated on the books of the office, so that the identity of many of the expenditures is lost.

Attention is called to Schedules "B-1" to "B-7" and "C-1" to "C-7," being exhibits of expenditures, classified, for the periods 1st of July, 1911 to the 30th of June, 1912, and the 1st of July, 1912 to the 28th of March, 1913, respectively. Items in these schedules marked "X" are questioned for the reason that the purpose of the funds appear to have been ignored and that the items are not properly distributed. Had such items been charged against the appropriations to which they should apply, the balances shown, at 28th of March, 1913 (Schedule "A") would have indicated the exact status of the several funds. The real object of proper classification of expenditures is lost and the records become defective whenever there is any deviation from established methods of accounting.

Expenditures—We found the entire system of disbursing the State moneys to be unbusinesslike and open to abuse and error, either intentional or otherwise. Moneys are drawn in lump sums by the Game Commissioner and by him disbursed by means of personal checks drawn on the State Bank of Girard, Ill.; at considerable distance from the department headquarters, the reason for which is not clear to us; absence of receipts or receipted vouchers for payrolls, etc., are instances which appear to us deserving of criticism and condemnation. We suggest that some system be adopted reversing such methods, by having all warrants drawn on the State Treasurer, approved by the Department and Institution Auditor, and thence transmitted directly to the various employees and other creditors of the State. Remarks under the caption "Payroll checks" will serve to further illustrate the necessity of a safeguarding method along the lines suggested above.

Payroll Checks—We made a thorough examination of all cancelled checks drawn against the account of J. A. Wheeler, Game Commissioner, on the State Bank of Girard. Schedule "D" herewith is a statement of certain inconsistencies which we could not reconcile, our investigation being limited to the office records. With particular reference to the names of Thomas Crowe and J. E. McClure we would suggest that further investigation be made, in order to ascertain, if possible, whether these men ever performed any service for the State and whether or not the endorsements, etc., are proper and in order. The above mentioned schedule is supplemented by the following information:

J. E. McClure appears upon the office payroll as bookkeeper at a salary of $150.00 a month, checks cashed without exception at Carlinville. We were told that Mr. McClure is a newspaper man permanently located at Carlinville, Ill. He has drawn $2,740.00 from the 1st of July, 1911, to the 30th of January, 1913, and, we understand, has since resigned.

Thomas Crowe is on the payroll of office employees as clerk at Springfield at $150.00 per month. All checks, with but one exception, cashed at Paxton, Ill. We understand that this man has not, admittedly, ever been a bona fide employee of the State. Has drawn $2,850.00 salary up to the 31st of January, 1912.

Expense Statements—We present in Schedule "E" the details of Game Farm employees' expenses, which apparently have been incurred by reason of the employees' residence being in Springfield, as we were informed, and which it was not contemplated should be borne by the State. Expense statements in no case contain details as to the nature of the expenditures and are not supported by sub-vouchers.

Product of Game Farm—We were unable to secure definite information, from the records available, as to the results of the operation of the farm, hence would be in no position to state, even in a general way, as to whether the benefits warrant the expenditures made. While a record, showing birds and eggs distributed to the citizens of the State, is kept, this is nothing more than a mailing list, as the most important information, i. e. the number of birds or eggs shipped, is omitted from the record. No records were produced to us showing sales of birds, eggs, or other products, if any, so that we could not ascertain whether the proceeds of sales, if any, are properly covered into the State treasury.

Cash Receipts—Owing to the destruction of all license stub books and unused licenses at the close of each season it was impossible for us to verify the collections by the various county, city and village clerks or to reconcile unissued licenses with the treasurer's reports of cash receipts. The present method of allowing the various deputies to make reconciliements of licenses and cash remitted to the treasurer should be abolished and this work transferred to the general offices. In a large number of cases the provisions of the law, regarding monthly settlements of cash receipts, are not being complied with, and as will be observed from Schedule "F" showing only the most conspicuous cases, large sums of money are held for a long time by the various county, city and village clerks, when the same should have been remitted to the State Treasurer at the close of each month. Although about 50 per cent of all reports are received by the department monthly from the State Treasurer showing collections of license fees and moneys received as fines levied for violations of the game laws, there exists no method of proving the amounts remitted as being correct until after the close of the season each year. In the case of fines collected for violation of the game laws no provision is made for verification of these collections at any time and such collections cannot be balanced to any fund or controlling account, either in the offices of the Game Commission or the State Auditor. This leaves the accounts open to manipulation of all kinds to dilatoriness in reporting violations, and is certainly not in conformity with efficient accounting methods.

Leases for Game Farm Lands—Leases covering the occupancy of 533.93 acres of land were produced to us for inspection. These leases vary considerably in form and phraseology, a number of them apparently defective for the following reasons:

1. Lessor stated as John A. Wheeler or John A. Wheeler, Game Commissioner, instead of the "State of Illinois."

2. Reservation clauses as to occupancy by lessee. Lease from L. F. Hamilton, 20 acres (See Schedule "G") contains the following clause:

"It is agreed between the parties hereto that, subject to such occupation and use of said premises for a State Game Preserve and Refuge, as aforesaid, the party of the first part hereby reserves and retains the full possession, use and control of said premises, as now enjoyed by him."

The clause is not only self-contradictory but susceptible of misinterpretation.

Lease from J. B. Andrews, 44.12 acres, is signed by "John A. Wheeler" personally, and would not therefore, in our opinion, be binding upon the State.

In the cases of assigned leases, such leases do not contain "assignment clauses" but merely a notation calling attention to the transfer of ownership.

We would suggest that all contracts of this nature be drawn up by and with the approval of the Attorney General. Also, that such records be placed on file with the Secretary of State, as we experienced some difficulty in obtaining the lease of K. B. Wheeler, the same having been in the possession of the Game Commissioner, who was almost continuously absent from the office at the farm in Auburn.

State Property—No records are kept of the physical State property, such as furniture, fixtures, horses, wagons, improvements, etc., neither can property be identified as belonging to the State. We would suggest that some provision be made for an inventory of such property and the keeping of proper records of addition, renewals and condemned or obsolete articles.

General—We could find no record or evidence of the receipt of interest on State funds on deposit in the State Bank of Girard. The salary and other allowances of the Game Commissioner are as follows:

Salary as State Game Commissioner.....	$2,500.00 per annum
Salary as superintendent of Game Farm.....	1,200.00 per annum
Living expenses as superintendent of Game Farm.....	1,000.00 per annum

Owing to the consolidation of the last named fund with another, hereinbefore mentioned, it cannot definitely be stated whether the expenditures on account of living expenses have been limited to the amount of the appropriation.

The entire methods of accounting, as well as departmental reports of operations, are sorely in need of revision, the present methods being entirely inadequate for an efficient and safe administration of the affairs of the commission.

The office force appears to be sufficiently large to properly handle all the work of the office at the present time, and no additional help would be required if the recommendations for improvement herein contained were adopted, as we feel they should be.

Yours respectfully,

BARROW, WADE, GUTHRIE & Co.

(Financial schedules omitted on account of lack of time to set up).

AUDIT OF FISH DEPARTMENT.

March 8, 1913.

Hon. James J. Brady, Auditor of Public Accounts, Springfield, Illinois.

DEAR SIR—In compliance with your request we have made an investigation of the records of the Illinois State Fish Commission, located at Havana, Illinois, and now report thereon, under headings which are intended to convey to you, in comprehensive form, the results of our investigation.

Books of Account and Office Records—The records in this office consist of an Expenditure Distribution Book, classified as to appropriations (see House Bill No. 675, Article 47); duplicate copies of invoice transmittal sheets to the State Auditor; and license stubs and stub books. From these records were taken all figures presented in the accompanying schedules A, B, C and D. All data in the office is, therefore, of a duplicate or "copy" nature, and, while the balances in the various funds, in the main, agree with those purporting to have been furnished by the State Auditor, the statements are, of necessity, contingent upon the records on file in the office of the State Auditor.

There seems to be no requirement for an authorization of purchases, and payments for the same, nor are means provided whereby the receipt of supplies, both as to quantity or quality, is certified to by any employee. The records are wholly inadequate to properly safeguard the interests of the State.

State Property—Under Schedule "D" are shown the various physical properties of the State, which were inspected by us, except where otherwise noted, and which were represented to us as being the property of the State. In a few cases, the fact of such ownership is supported by entries upon the records at the time of purchase, but more often records are lacking as to the acquisition or disposal of State property. No inventory of State property is kept, neither are means provided for the identification of same, as would appear to be both practicable and desirable.

Appropriations—The records of the office show appropriations to have been made for the use of the commission as follows:

General Expenses	$6,000 00
Personal Expenses	6,000 00
Maintenance of Boats	7,000 00
Clerk Hire	1,200 00
Hatchery	3,000 00
Laws, License Tags, etc.	2,500 00
Office Expenses	1,000 00

We were unable to reconcile this division of the appropriation with House Bill No. 675, Article 47, to which we were referred by the Clerk in charge. It will become at once apparent, also, by an examination of Schedule "B"—Classification of Expenditures—that there has been an apparent disregard of the provisions of the appropriation bill, both as to the limitations in the amounts as well as in the nature of the expenditures. Inasmuch as the appropriation bill provides that all sums be set aside on a "per annum" basis, the question is raised as to whether or not there did not exist on December 31, 1912, an overdraft in the "Maintenance of Boats" fund of $1,382.20.

A re-classification of expenditures to the proper funds, would, of course, materially affect all funds available to the commission. In this connection we make reference to House Bill No. 676, Section 1, providing that "all balances in the State treasury on July 1, 1911, to the credit of the State Fish Protection Fund be transferred on a warrant of the Auditor of Public Accounts to the "General Revenue Fund." It is impossible, from the records kept at Havana, to show what remained in the several appropriations of July 1, 1911, but we were able to ascertain that the balances in the various funds at August 28, 1911, were as follows:

Personal Expenses	6,012 31
Maintenance of Boats	7,313 34
Clerk	1,100 00
Hatchery	3,039 37
Laws, License, Tags, etc.	2,500 00
Office Expense	1,000 00

The "Maintenance of Boats" and "Personal Expenses" funds, showing balances of $313.34 and $12.31 respectively, in excess of the amount of the appropriations, leads us to infer that the necessary transfer of funds to the general revenue fund was never made.

Errors of $5.85 in the "General Expenses" fund transmittal sheets for June, 1912, remain unadjusted upon the records of the office, and, as far as could be ascertained, upon the records of the State Auditor, both accounts being in agreement without the adjustment of these errors.

Licenses—We found no license blanks on hand, and no record to account for the licenses printed. Section 18 of the Fish Laws, providing for the accounting for license collections at the end of each calendar month, is being complied with in only about one-half of the cases. S. P. Dodd, Village Clerk of Browning, Illinois, is withholding $125.50 of license collections for the period from July 1, 1911 to May 1, 1912, upon the excuse that he has a counter-claim against the State. We were informed the matter had been referred to the Attorney General, but so far, has not been adjusted.

Cash Receipts—No records are kept, except in memorandum form, of cash received for the rent of boats, sale of supplies, etc. Receipts amounting to $1,151.50 from April 2, 1910 to August 7, 1911, were covered into the State treasury on December 2, 1911, having been carried, up to that time, in the personal bank account of Mr. E. E. Caldwell. We are not in a position to state whether or not interest was received on such deposits, nor can it be ascertained from the records, whether there were, or should have been, other receipts.

General—While a secretary's office with one clerk is maintained at Quincy, the major portion of the clerical work is being done at Havana, which also employs a clerk. At Havana, a part of the office room is occupied by the clerk as sleeping quarters.

There exists in the commission an urgent need of a comprehensive system of accounting, although we feel that much criticism is due the office of the State Auditor for the passing of vouchers in apparent disregard of the provisions of the appropriation bills.

In this report we have commented only upon such matters as have come under our notice and of which we have direct knowledge.

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) BARROW, WADE, GUTHRIE & Co.

SCHEDULE D.

INVENTORY.

OFFICE FIXTURES.

- 2 Roll Top Desks and Chairs.
- 2 Small Tables.
- 1 Smith Premier No. 10 Typewriter.
- 1 Edison Mimeograph.
- 6 Leather Seat Chairs.
- 1 Electric Fan.
- Carpets and Rugs.
- Files, Books, etc.

BOATS.

Steamer "Illinois," fully equipped, lying in Illinois River at Havana. Launch "Venus," purchased Sept. 21, 1911; $300.00 paid on this date to E. E. Caldwell, charged against Hatchery Fund. We did not see this boat nor do we know its whereabouts. We were not shown any contract regarding this purchase, so do not know if this was the full amount or not.

November, 1912. Paid H. P. Bauer, Meredosia, Illinois, $250.00 for launch. Mr. Whitman states that this launch remains at Meredosia, Illinois, and is used by W. E. Nolden, Deputy Fish Warden. Purchase was made by Mr. Bartlett, Secretary of the Illinois Fish Commission.

Mr. E. E. Caldwell, Commissioner and Chief Warden, made the statement that Mr. Bartlett and himself made a trade of the Gasoline Launch "Dougherty" at Grafton, Illinois, for one complete launch engine and all, one flat boat, two launch hulls and fixtures, etc., all boats built of steel, with Mr. Ripley of the Ripley Hardware Co. We did not see any of this property.

Life boat on Steamer "Illinois," purchased for $46.80.

Mr. Whitman states that the commission owns a houseboat at Lake Mantanza. No record or history shown to us.

May 1, 1912. Voucher paid for skiff, $18.00.

Aug. 31, 1912. Voucher paid to Mrs. John Warren, Liverpool, Ill., for skiff purchased under Commissioner Cohen's administration, $20.00.

April 30, 1912. Purchased skiff from M. M. Clark, Havana, $15.00.

(NOTE—Other schedules omitted on account of lack of time to set up.)

The foregoing message was referred to the Committee on Fish and Game.

Thaddeus B. Scouten, Special Sergeant-at-Arms, appointed to serve subpoena on the following witnesses in the investigation by virtue of Senate Resolution No. 57:

Robert McDougal.
John H. Jones.
Arthur T. Delaney.
Charles B. Pierce.
J. E. Bellot.

Appeared at the bar of the Senate and reported that the witnesses were all present and at the bar of the Senate ready to testify.

On motion of Mr. Clark the Senate resolved itself into a Committee as the Whole to continue the investigations by virtue of Senate Resolution No. 57.

The Senate then resolved itself into a Committee as the Whole with the President of the Senate presiding, after a session at 11:25 o'clock a. m., reported that the committee had made progress in the examination of the witnesses and asked leave to sit again on tomorrow morning immediately after the reading of the Journal, for the purpose of hearing Mr. White.

On motion of Mr. Dailey, the request of the committee was granted.

PRESENTATIONS OF RESOLUTION BY UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

Mr. Beall offered the following resolution which, under Rule 39, was laid on the table for one day:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 38.

WHEREAS, A resolution has been adopted by the House of Representatives directing that a special committee be appointed to investigate the State Game Department and in pursuance of which such a committee has been appointed; and,

WHEREAS, The State Game Commissioner is desirous that a thorough and impartial investigation of the affairs of the Game Department be made by the General Assembly and invites such an investigation; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate, the House concurring herein, That a joint committee of the Senate and House, to be composed of three members of the Senate and six members of the House, be appointed by the respective presiding officers of the Senate and House, such committee to have full power to act in the premises and make report to the Senate and House respectively of its investigation of said department.

At 2:30 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Hurburgh, the Senate took a recess until 5:00 o'clock p. m.

5:00 O'CLOCK P. M.

Senate re-convened.

At 5:00 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Hurburgh, the Senate adjourned.

JOINT SESSION DOUGLAS CENTENNIAL NATAL ANNIVERSARY.

At two-thirty o'clock p. m., the Senate preceded by its President, proceeded to the House of Representatives to hold a Joint Session, as provided for by the following resolution adopted by both Houses:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 33.

WHEREAS, April 23, 1913, is the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Stephen A. Douglas, who was one of Illinois' foremost sons of his time and generation; and,

WHEREAS, It is fitting and proper that the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, a State which he so ably represented in the Senate of the United States and a State which he also served so well as a member of its Supreme Court should pause in its deliberations long enough to pay tribute to the memory of this man, one who also did so much at the opening of the Civil War to uphold the hands of the then President, Abraham Lincoln, whose opponent he was for that office and whose political competitor he had been for years in the political arena of Illinois and the nation; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring therein, That a committee of five be appointed from each house, who shall make all the necessary arrangements for the holding of a joint session of the General Assembly on April 23, at two o'clock p. m., in the hall of the House of Representatives for the purpose of listening to such appropriate addresses as the committee hereby authorized shall arrange for.

The Senate, having been admitted to the House, and the Joint Session being convened with the Speaker of the House of Representatives, as presiding officer, he called Governor E. F. Dunne to the Chair to act as temporary presiding officer when the following proceedings were had:

SPEAKER MCKINLEY.

Governor Dunne, Senators Lewis and Sherman, Members of the General Assembly, and Ladies and Gentlemen:

It indeed gives me very great pleasure, this afternoon, to turn the gavel over to our distinguished Governor, to conduct the exercises of this day, in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the birth of an illustrious son of Illinois, Stephen A. Douglas. (Applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

Gentlemen of the Senate, Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, Ladies, Fellow Citizens of the State of Illinois:

I have been honored by the Committee on Arrangements, representing the Joint Assembly, in being asked to preside over this memorable meeting.

One hundred years ago, in a little village in Vermont, there was born a man, who, when he arrived at the years of manhood, made his home in the State of Illinois, and who, from the time when he came to this State, until the time of his untimely death in 1861, was one of the great intellectual leaders, not only of the State of Illinois, but of the United States of America.

In the political struggles which attracted the attention not only of this State, but of the whole United States, he became one of the great moving figures, and in his intellectual combats with another great Illinoisan, Abraham Lincoln, he riveted the attention of the whole of the United States upon the issues of his day.

These two great sons of Illinois become so prominent in the political life of the United States that they were both nominated for the highest executive office in the gift of the people of the United States, and after a most memorable struggle, Abraham Lincoln, his competitor, was elected President of the United States.

At this juncture this nation was faced with a situation full of peril, if not complete extinction, and upon that great occasion the man whose name we now meet to commemorate, proved himself a patriot among patriots, and next to Abraham Lincoln, himself, did more for the preservation of the integrity of the United States than any other man within its confines. (Applause.)

You are exceptionally fortunate, my friends, in being tendered an intellectual treat this afternoon; and in view of the fact that there are so many eminent, and so many eloquent speakers here today, I shall confine myself, from this time on, to the pleasant duty of introducing to this audience these distinguished gentlemen.

Before introducing any of the speakers, it is my pleasure to introduce the Honorable Euclid B. Rodgers, who will deliver the invocation. The audience will please rise.

INVOCATION—DR. EUCLID B. RODGERS.

Almighty God, our Heavenly Father! We bow in adoration before Thee! Thou art our Maker and our God. We thank Thee for all Thou hast been unto us, for all that Thou art unto us at this hour.

We thank Thee for our country's past, not long but big. We thank Thee for the names that shine like stars up in our Illinois sky. We thank Thee for him, in whose memory we are met.

Great as a public school teacher, great as a lawyer, great as a jurist, great as a legislator, great as a statesman, great as an orator, great as a man, great in victory and greater still in defeat.

We thank Thee for that epoch-making deliverance of April 25, 1861, when his voice rang like a bell in the air of the world, calling men north, south, east, west, everywhere, to rally 'round the flag.

Fallible he was, human, strikingly, emphatically, splendidly human. To be that is to be almost Divine.

We thank Thee for Stephen A. Douglas, for what he was and what he did.

And now we crave the presence, the felt presence with us, of the Highest, and His blessing upon us. O, Lord, Bless the Governor of this State and all his coadjutors.

The Lord Bless these law-making bodies, and these interpreters of the law. The Lord Bless these distinguished gentlemen who are to speak to us, and the singers who are to sing.

Grant that all that is said and done here today may have a tendency to help us to do our work devotedly and well, to carry freedom beyond the mere Declaration of Independence, to carry liberty beyond the mere machinery of government, to carry the rights of man, the rights of woman, the rights of every little child, into mine and mill, and home and shop, anywhere, everywhere, where folks hope and dream and pray and suffer and die.

That is the task of this era—a task worthy of a race of immortals; and we pray that out of this hour there shall come an influence and inspiration, from each heart of us, that shall stimulate us to do our bravest and our best, from this time on, for the common weal.

Amen!

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

We will be favored with music by the Apollo Quartette.
Music—"My country 'tis of Thee."

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

The genius of Douglas was of that character that it could not be distinguished in the life of any one man. His eloquent son, Stephen A., Jr., made his impress in his lifetime upon the people of this State.

The next address will be delivered by a grandson of the great Stephen A. Douglas, the Honorable Robert D. Douglas, the eldest son of his eldest son, and the former Attorney General of the state of North Carolina. (Applause.)

HON. ROBERT DICK DOUGLAS.

Governor Dunne, and my Friends of Illinois:

Although a stranger to most of you, I feel that I can call you my friends. Please allow me in behalf of his family to express to you their appreciation of your tender kindness in turning aside from the busy life of today to do honor to the memory of Stephen A. Douglas, a century after his birth and more than half a century after his death. Allow me also to thank you for inviting my father and myself to be present on this occasion and to tell you of my father's sincere regret that ill health has compelled his absence.

Though bearing his name and blood, fate has cast my lot in a state far distant from this your State in which Stephen A. Douglas lived and labored and which he so devotedly loved. And this fact, coupled with the further fact that he died when my father was but twelve years of age, renders it difficult for me to attempt to tell anything new about him to this audience, some of whom possibly knew him personally, and many of whom know more people who knew him, than I do.

But while positively I can tell you little about him that you do not already know, negatively I can tell you that there is little to tell. The fact that he began his public life at such an unusually early age and continued in the public service almost uninterruptedly to the time of his death, and that aside from his immediate home ties he had few interests outside his public duties, renders it true of Stephen A. Douglas, that there is less difference between his public life as the public knew him and his private life as known to his family, and intimate friends, than of perhaps any other man prominently before the public.

He never accumulated wealth. If he ever had what might be called a "hobby," I never heard of it, and, so far as I know, his sole recreation consisted of extensive reading, especially works of a historical or political nature, and discussions with his friends upon political matters.

In a way he was, and in a way he was not, what would be called a well educated man. His father's early death prevented his receiving the college training he so much desired, and during his later life he had little time for reading of a lighter sort. But, regarding matters bearing directly upon the things in which he was most interested he was a thorough and indefatigable student. He was widely conversant with general history, especially with regard to its bearing upon political development; while few men equalled him in his intimate knowledge of the political and legislative history of his own country from its foundation to his own time and with what the great men of the country had said or written on fundamental principles or measures of a general and constructive nature.

He was noted for his power and dexterity in extemporaneous debate, but it was only the form of the speech which was extemporaneous. The substance came from the accumulated knowledge acquired by months and sometimes years of study. (Applause.)

Much of his fame rests upon his reputation as an orator, but personally, I like to think of him, not so much as an orator, swaying the crowds with his eloquence, as to think of him as the builder, the chairman of the Senate committee on territories; the legislator, the constructive statesman, looking with prophetic vision at the future possibilities of the great and unknown west; carving territories out of its wilderness, building states out of its territories, promoting transcontinental railways, the Illinois Central, and encouraging local development; laying the foundations of a greater nation, and at the same time ever planning, working, striving to save it from disruption while it grew in population, wealth and power.

In mentality he was remarkably versatile, and would have made his mark in any occupation which he had made his life's work; but like all men whose life is made worth living, he had one dominant idea that colored all his thoughts and shaped all his actions. This idea was the preservation of the Union. It was to him more than the feeling of patriotism, it possessed the qualities of a personal love.

His advent into public life was contemporaneous with the first serious mutterings of sectional discord, and thereafter, throughout his life, his dominant thought and desire was to bring agreement out of discord and peace out of impending strife, to the end that the Union might be preserved—the Union, whose constitution was to him as the tables of stone to the Israelites in the desert, whose flag was to him as the banner of the cross to the crusaders of old. (Applause.)

This was the desire of his life, to preserve the Union and at the same time to develop its immense resources, to further the welfare of its people, to extend its domain whenever honorably possible; and with it all to insure national concord throughout its vast and varying territory by giving to every section of the country the fullest measure of local self-government compatible with the national strength and welfare. (Applause.)

Of his country and his country's future, he dreamed great dreams, but he did not allow those dreams to become his master. Both his mental trend and his concrete acts looked to practical results rather than to fine-spun theories.

It is said of Solon of old, that when asked if his code of laws was the best he was capable of formulating, answered that it was not, but that it was the best he could get the Athenians to accept.

The same reasoning might be applied to many of the public measures associated with the name of Stephen A. Douglas. They may not entirely have represented his views, or been exactly as he would have wished them to be; but they were the best he could get others to accept, and as such he accepted them himself, preferring the practical benefits of an adopted law, approximating what he thought the law should be, to the theoretical perfection of a measure which the opposition of others or the force or circumstances made it impossible for him to write into the statute books of the nation. (Applause.)

His last days were his darkest because they were the darkest for his beloved country; but those days gave him an opportunity of appearing in a new light to many of his countrymen who had theretofore viewed him from the standpoint of partisan opposition.

The gallant political army he had so long and so brilliantly led to victory had at last been defeated and the national government put into the hands of his political opponents; but when the echo of the guns at Sumpter told the country that at last civil war was a dreadful reality, he did not hesitate, but promptly offered his services to the government in any capacity in which he could best be used for the preservation of the Union, and immediately began his efforts to hold loyal the great middle west.

Here in your city of Springfield was made one of his last speeches in which he pleaded, and pleaded not in vain, that all should forget past differences and rally to the support of the Union. How great was his love for the Union, how intimately it was interwoven even with his personal affection, is shown by the thoughts that filled his mind in his dying moments.

In June, 1861, he lay upon his bed in Chicago, knowing that his end had come. He was asked if he had any message to send to his two young sons, then in the city of Washington. "Yes" said the dying man. And what was that message? "Tell them to obey the laws and support the constitution of the United States." (Applause.)

But the man himself had not changed. His ideals and aspirations were the same that they had always been. His love for the Union was no stronger in 1861 than it had been throughout all the years during which he had been striving to preserve it. It was simply that his former opponents were seeing the same man in a new light.

I proudly think that Stephen A. Douglas would have been a man among men in any country or amidst any surroundings; but I do not forget that you, the people of the great State of Illinois, welcomed the unknown boy to your midst; believed in him, trusted him, loved him, and so, wherever their home or whatever their fortunes or their destinies may be, so long as his name and blood shall last, they will love you for it. (Applause.)

Whether you, looking backward in the light of subsequent events, agree or disagree with the ultimate wisdom of each particular measure which he, looking into the unknown future, originated, or to which he gave his aid, is a matter of little moment. But as one who through filial affection reveres his memory, as one who through the accident of birth represents him here today, I would, if I thought the occasion fitting, make one request of you—that you give him credit for unselfish sincerity and unfaltering courage. (Applause.)

Before a hostile audience I would make this request, and only this; but standing here in your capitol at Springfield, before you, the people of Illinois, knowing what you have done in the past, seeing and hearing what you are doing today, I feel that such a request coming from me would by implication be more than unjust, it would be most ungracious.

More than half a century has passed since Stephen A. Douglas ended his short and storm-tossed life and laid his head for his last long sleep on the bosom of his adopted mother. Cities have arisen where he knew only prairies; a new generation has come to take the places of his friends and associates; almost all has changed; but Illinois is fast making real his fondest dreams of her future greatness, and the nation that he loved has escaped the fate he feared and set in the political heavens a rainbow of perpetual Union.

My only regret is that he could not have lived to see the civic tempest, which beclouded his dying hours, give place to the sunshine of today.

I thank you. (Applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

In the galaxy of orators that we have with us today, we are fortunate not only in having the two distinguished and brilliant Senators who represent us from this State in the United States Senate, but a Senator from an adjoining state, one of the most gifted orators and able statesmen in the United States Senate, United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri. (Applause.)

HONORABLE JAMES A. REED.

Mr. President, Gentlemen of the Illinois General Assembly, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am never favored with a flattering introduction, which comes by the way frequently, not to me alone, but to every man who occasionally makes a speech, not because it is the solemn truth, but because the chairman of the meeting wants to be hospitable and kind and flattering. (Laughter.) I never hear that sort of introduction and of the hopes and expectations it may arouse in the minds of auditors but I recall the somewhat threadbare anecdote told by my fellow citizen, or former fellow citizen, the late lamented Mark Twain. He said that in his youth he had heard about Niagara Falls. He had read wonderful descriptions of that marvelous cataract. He had looked at the pictures of it in the old school atlas until there had been formed in his mentality a vision of all the pent up waters of the seas of all the world, leaping over the sharp edge of a declivity into a bottomless abyss with the roar and crash of contending worlds. That at last he scraped enough money together to go and feast his eyes upon this natural marvel and when he got there the hack fares were so much higher than the falls that the falls appeared inconsequent. (Laughter.) He added, that he did not dam the falls, but he did the hackmen. (Laughter.) So if expectation were to plume its flight according to these kindly introductions, I had better plead illness now and let you believe what has been told you, not stand here to make profert of myself, at once to destroy my reputation as a speaker, and your Governor's reputation for truth and veracity. (Laughter and applause.)

My time to speak is limited because I must catch a train. I congratulate the audience upon that fact. My chance to make a speech that would really be a gem is denied me by that fact, because I really do not reach my highest altitudes until about the third hour. (Laughter.)

Besides all of that, I am to be followed here by your distinguished United States Senators, one of whom I have been told carries with him in his ample brain all of the skill and acumen of the statesman, as well as the wisdom of the Republican party. (Laughter.)

The other I know well, as indeed does the entire country. We have made exhibition of him in Washington. We have convinced the effete and polished east that the statement that his whiskers are pink is an infamous slander. (Laughter.)

We have also exhibited him as the glass of fashion, but I make the prediction that he will not have been there long until they will find that the glass will scintillate with intellectual and poetical gems that will dazzle the eyes of some of the gentlemen who have hitherto regarded themselves as leaders in the forum. (Applause.)

As I have been looking over this audience of Illinois people, I have been impressed with the fact that all of this country is pretty much alike. I observe that here in Illinois, as in my own state of Missouri, the home of the rose in its ripest and most perfect blush is in the fair cheeks of your lovely women, and I have observed that your men are about as homely a looking crowd as even in the "hound-dawg" state. (Laughter.)

That reminds me that I cannot resist the temptation of thanking the Democrats of Illinois for having given their loyal support to Missouri's great son in the recent primary contest.

In what I have said there is a thought or a suggestion of a thought to myself, for not only to the people of Illinois and the people of Missouri resemble each other so much that we could not tell the difference in the audience, but here stands before us the grandson of the great citizen of Vermont and afterwards the adopted child of this commonwealth who now makes his home in a far southern state, and it has changed him so little that as we gaze upon him we see once more standing before us the figure of the "Little Giant of Illinois." (Applause.)

And so as we go from one part of this republic to another, we find, at last, that we are bone of one bone, and flesh of one flesh; that there is no north, no south, no east and no west; that this is one people, one language, one country, one flag, one destiny, and one God for us all, (applause), and that wherever you scratch the white skin of the American citizen, the same rich red blood of manhood answers to the touch.

And when men begin to despair of their country, and see the horizon covered with clouds, and the future overshadowed with fear, I ask them all to stand in front of such an audience as this, to look into the earnest faces where thought has plowed its furrows, into the fearless flashing eyes, that know nothing but the sense of duty, and the determination to conquer, and to answer then the questions of apprehension.

This is a race that has conquered the wilderness, plowed the prairies, dotted the country with magnificent cities, glorified by seminaries of learning and temples of religion, that has erected the family altar, and made love and home, and womanhood and manhood sacred and holy. I ask him to gaze at that picture, and to contemplate that history, and to answer if the republic, under the kindness of God, shall not live forever, and liberty survive all time! (Applause.)

We are confronted with difficulties. It was the question of slavery and anti-slavery before the war. In the baptism of fire and blood we settled that great question, and the heroic figure in the contest was that man whose memory we meet to glorify today.

Other problems confront the American people. We hear it frequently said that our heroes have feet of clay. We heard it all too frequently said in the ante-bellum days, that Lincoln was a traitor. We heard it frequently charged that Douglas was a traitor; and yet, in the calm after life, we have come to know that each of them, in the balance of eternal justice, held by the hand of Almighty God, were pure gold, every atom of body and every principle of soul. (Applause.)

We know that these two men had the same end and object, each placing country and duty above every other principle, each subordinating every selfish end to the great common cause. One of them saw the highway leading to that fruition in a certain direction. The other thought a better road could be chosen. Then came the battle of these giants.

It was a battle of two men equipped by Nature as but few men are. They told us that Lincoln was an uneducated rail-splitter; but Lincoln was a master of our English tongue.

They told us that Douglas was merely a lawyer and a judge; and yet Douglas' master hand could touch all the heart strings, and sweep the chords of human emotion.

These men met and struggled. When the hour came, when the gage of battle had been cast, Lincoln stood forth, a heroic figure, but scarce more heroic than that other son of Illinois, who summoned the nation to Lincoln's aid and his support. (Applause.)

We had our bitter struggles then. We have them now. The political prophet is abroad in the land. He has sack-cloth and ashes prominently displayed—sack-cloth upon his shoulders, and ashes in his hair; and the tears of grief for our country are plowing their way over his sorrowful countenance—and he has political nostrums to cure all these ills!

We have others who see evil here, and weakness there, and conspiracy yonder. Our democratic friends (of which I am one) will charge some times that the republicans are trying to destroy this country; and the republicans will charge, first, that the Bull Moosers are trying to destroy this country (laughter); and after they have finished with the Bull Moosers, will pay their respects to us democrats, (laughter).

And all of them, in the past, have been engaged in denouncing, as bad citizens, that other organization which has elected some representatives here—the socialists.

The mistake is not in denouncing the methods of these political organizations. The mistake is in denouncing the purposes of these political organizations.

The doctors are honest, and have diagnosed the complaint of the patient (as doctors generally do, with a considerable difference of opinion) and in like manner they are seeking to apply different remedies; but the cold, unembellished truth is, all of them are honest doctors, wanting to apply an honest remedy, for the benefit of the patient (applause) and the sooner we discover that, and give credit for honesty to each other, the sooner we will be on a plane where we can meet and compare views, and analyze facts, and ascertain the truth.

I am glad to say this, because I believe this to be true, that whether our people be socialists or republicans, or Bull Moosers, (and I wish you would get a more genteel term, gentlemen, for your party), (laughter), or democrats—that all are patriots, all are sincere, and all are seeking to make this republic the ideal spot of our fair earth.

Ladies and gentlemen, in Douglas' and Lincoln's day, it was the question of black slavery. The problem that now confronts our race is the question of white slavery.

The question, then, was the breaking of the chains of the law. The question, now, is the breaking of chains of fact, that have been riveted upon the energies of many of the people of our country.

I do not come to denounce those who have gained wealth. I do not come to make war upon those who have prospered, but I come to announce this doctrine this afternoon, that eighteen hundred years ago, it was said, "The Sabbath was made for man; and not man for the Sabbath."

I paraphrase that utterance, by declaring that money was made for man, and not man for money, (applause) that the sole and proper end of human government is human happiness, that government was not erected to protect property, it was erected to make men and women happy (applause); and that the reason we proceeded to protect property was because men and women could not be happy unless we did protect them in their property; but the protection of property was a thing subordinate, and secondary, to the happiness of the race.

Now, let me not be misunderstood, and let no man infer I have announced a doctrine in favor of the destruction of property.

I announce merely this doctrine, that property rights must never be so construed as to destroy human rights (applause) and that such constructions of our laws must come about as will keep the resources of this country free and open for the children of men who are here now, and so that the generations yet to come, upon this continent, may walk with free men's feet, upon a freeman's soil. (Applause.)

The problem that must be worked out, and that confronts us today, is a gigantic one. God Almighty filled the bowels of the earth with lakes and rivers of oil—enough of oil to light the feet of all the men who shall come here for a thousand years—and it has gone into the hands of one concern, substantially.

He put vast acres of rich iron ore about us, and throughout our land it has gone into the hands of one concern.

He put vast deposits of copper under our mountains, and those copper deposits have gone into the hands of one concern.

He put other great resources here, enough to have kept busy the brains and hands of countless generations yet to come; and they have been gathered into the hands of a few great institutions.

The result has been with the opportunity for the individual man, not merely to make a living, but to do more than to make a living, and to become an independent factor in the business life of the community has been circumscribed, and will eventually be destroyed. (Applause.)

And it is against that, because I love human liberty and individual independence, that I raise my voice in solemn protest. (Applause.)

No property right, ever, should be permitted to be so construed that it can destroy another man's property right. No property right should be so construed that it can destroy the chance of the individual of the race, himself, to gain property; for by so doing you make of property, not a blessing, but a curse.

My fellow citizens, I might follow that theme for some time, but I choose to stop where I am. I want to call your attention to what I think made our race great and wonderful and splendid. It was not, sirs, the blue blood of an aristocratic ancestry. The fathers who came here were of the earth—earthly. They bore upon their backs the burdens of twenty centuries of oppression. Their minds were clouded with ignorance, and their hearts bowed down with fear.

You hear of our revolutionary, and ante-revolutionary ancestry as a superior class of men!

Let him who entertains that delusion remember the scenes where, in southern plantations, they were buying their wives upon the auction block and paying for them with long green tobacco.

Let him turn to the picture of Roger Williams, driven into the wilderness.

Let him contemplate that southern colony that was wiped out, men, women and children, because they worshipped God according to the tenets of the church that lifts its spires and raises its crosses, today in every county of the Union!

Let him turn his eyes to the hills of Massachusetts, lurid with the red flames that licked up the blood of poor old women, dying by fire for the imaginary crime of witch-craft!

And when you have contemplated these pictures, you will agree with me that the men who built this country, originally, were simply the common stock of European countries. (Applause.)

What was the training, the emergency, the inspiring, uplifting cause, that made them become great?

Why sirs, the wild forest sang the song of liberty. The wild waves beckoned them, and called them to these shores. In the forest fastness, the voices of opportunity were whispering in their ears. These oppressed and expatriated sires saw how their feet might tread on soil that they might own.

Yonder stretched the broad highway, that would lead to commercial ascendancy. They might become bankers, or lawyers, or ministers. They might build vessels, and ply the waves of the ocean.

All lands were theirs to conquer. All the fields of opportunity were open to them; and so at night, the sons of these sires were bending to their tasks. Beside the tallow dip, they were looking into the future, and storing knowledge for the struggles yet to come; and in one generation of time we made a race of poets whose words will be read as long as man shall love the music of our tongue.

We made orators whose words of flame could light the fires of patriotism in every human heart, and thrill the universal breast of man, and make us all love liberty.

We made a race of soldiers who could stand in the red line of battle, through the snows of winter, who could write the story of their patriotism in bloody foot-prints, amid the snows and frosts.

We made mothers who could stand in the cabin door, rifle in hand, and beat back the naked savage, and keep the home while the father stood in the red line at the front.

We made soldiers who could follow Paul Jones from the decks of his sinking vessel upon the great British man of war, climbing like tigers up her bloody, slippery side, as through the smoke and flame of battle, the British commander's challenge was heard, asking, "Have you struck your colors yet?" and they cheered until the vaulted Heavens echoed, as Paul Jones' voice rang on their ears, with his profane but holy rejoinder—"Struck our colors! Why, by God, we Yankees haven't begun to fight yet!" (Applause.)

We made that kind of men, and that kind of women, and as long as we shall keep the faith, as long as these fair fields shall so be held that the proprietors may till the soil, these mines shall still yield their richness to the hand of enterprise, and every field of opportunity shall be open to the youth of this land, so long there will be happy homes, and every home will be a citadel; so long there will be happy firesides, and every fireside will be an altar; so long there will be an aggregate of manhood and of womanhood that will keep the flag in the Heavens, liberty's glowing fires burning throughout the land; and a race will develop that can lift their eyes without fear to all the world, and bow their heads in reverence alone to the Almighty God.

That is the hope I entertain, and this is the problem that we must solve.

Sometimes I dream of a republic in which the brain of man shall have harnessed and made slave all the forces of Nature; where there shall be neither parasites to eat that which others have produced, nor drudges to toil at half-required tasks; a republic from which shall have been banished the sweat-shops of labor, where the tired fingers of women may find time to rest, and little children in the morning of their lives shall not be herded in the shadow of great mills that men may make a profit from their toil, a republic in which to be merely rich shall be to be only vulgar; a republic in which the crown of manhood, and the robe of glory shall be reserved for the men and the women who have toiled and fought for the benefit of the race of men. (Applause.)

To this great task, each true American will devote his heart. To this great problem, we must give our energies with all the force with which Lincoln and Douglas gave their energies in the days of the past, and we will solve this problem.

This mighty race will solve it, and through all the contests and all the bitternesses there shines, forever bright, the star of America's unconquerable and unclouded destiny!

I thank you!

(Applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

Among the notable citizens of Illinois who would truly love to be here today to join in this testimonial to the illustrious dead, is a man who is prevented by circumstances over which he had no control from being here, a man who has the love and respect and admiration of every citizen of the State of Illinois, and who has served this great State in the United States Senate, for so many years past, Shelby M. Cullom. (Applause.)

I will read a telegram from former Senator Cullom.

"WASHINGTON, D. C., April 23, 1913.

"Honorable Walter I. Manny, Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, Springfield, Illinois:

I am exceedingly sorry that I am unable to join you tomorrow, in celebrating the 100th anniversary of the birth of Stephen A. Douglas.

He was a very great man, a great debater, a great senator, and a great patriot.

I have always felt proud of the fact that I introduced him to the Joint Session of the Illinois Legislature on the occasion of the last address but one that he delivered in our State, before he gave up his life.

I have always regarded Stephen A. Douglas and Lyman Trumbull as two of the greatest senators who ever did honor to our State and country.

I sincerely hope the occasion tomorrow will be fully worthy of the great services to the country of Stephen A. Douglas.

[Signed] SHELBY M. CULLOM."

(Applause).

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

Over half a century has passed away since Stephen A. Douglas went to his great reward. We are fortunate today in having in our midst a man who was an intimate of Douglas in his lifetime and who will now address this audience.

I take great pleasure in introducing to you the Honorable William L. Davidson, a very intimate friend of Douglas while he was living. (Applause.)

HONORABLE WILLIAM L. DAVIDSON.

Your Excellency, Governor Dunne, Gentlemen of the Joint Assembly, Ladies and Gentlemen:

In introducing my address to you, I beg your permission to begin in a somewhat old fashioned way, like a Methodist preacher, and start with a text—which is in this case, perhaps, a very remarkable one.

In the opening of the great debates, the first one was held at the city of Ottawa. At that time Judge Douglas spoke first and with exquisite courtesy paid a beautiful compliment to his boyhood friend but lifetime political opponent, to which, when Mr. Lincoln rose, at the close of the first hour, to make his brilliant reply, he responded with one of the world's classics.

I call your attention to the remarkable language employed that day in opening those debates, twenty-two years ago, and how like the Gettysburg speech was the phrasing then employed:

'Twenty-two years ago, Judge Douglas and I became acquainted. We were both young then, he being a trifle younger than I; and we were both ambitious, I quite as much as he; but my race of ambition has been a failure, a flat failure—and his race has been one of wonderful success. His name is known in every state in this Union, and indeed is not unknown in foreign lands. I pretend no contempt for the eminence that he has reached—I would rather stand upon that eminence, (said Lincoln) than to wear the richest crown that ever decked a monarch's brow.'

That was at a time three years before he was elected President of the United States. It is safe to say that he did not at that time dream that such an event would possibly take place. He had no way to foretell or even dream that in the providence of God he was going to be lifted up, through sorrow and tribulation, like another Moses, to lead the children of this country, as Moses led the children of Egypt, out of the wilderness and into the land of promise that is ours today.

But Lincoln said, and nailed it down too—'the judge means to keep me down—not to put me down. I should not say, because I have never been up.'

Now my friends, there is my speech today—in eighty-four words—sixty-four or sixty-five of them being short simple words of one syllable.

That marvelous man, who has come to be acknowledged by the greatest of scholars to have been a marvelous master of the English language, told not only the story of his own life, his boyhood life; his ambition, his hopes, his disappointments, and his sorrow, but in the same statement with that sweet and beautiful Lincolnesque love and generosity of his soul, picked up his opponent and boyhood friend and elevated him to the stars as a man who had made a wonderful success of life.

If I were to speak of Lincoln today, as I have been wont to point out, it would be the joy of my life to picture this incident as an illustration of the lovable character of that sweetest soul that old earth has ever known, that dearest and sweetest nature that mortal man has ever possessed since the Christ, that man that not only has reached that eminence but in all the scenes of his active life exhibited at all times that sweet and beautiful soul.

Abraham Lincoln spent his boyhood days in an atmosphere that prepared him for the struggles of his later life. Trained in the hard battles of pioneer life, of effort and defeat, his powers were developed year by year until he was toughened and fit to take care of the vital interests of this country in the awful emergencies of life or death, union or disunion, that called for the mastery of a strong and ready hand.

In the greatest emergency of the most remarkable republic that earth has ever known, when it stood upon the threshold of being destroyed forever, and in that destruction carrying down the last hope of humanity all over the earth, of the government for and of and by the people, Abraham Lincoln was equal to the situation.

But I am to talk about another man, I am to talk about Stephen A. Douglas. I am to talk for Stephen A. Douglas who has been dead for fifty years, and I am standing here as a militant Douglas-Democrat, who has been running a Democratic paper for fifty-five years, fighting the battles at the foot of the democracy, of the Douglas democracy, and thanking God that I have had the privilege to do it, and that Providence has spared me until today to stand up before this imperial audience in the Capitol of Illinois, the scene of his last struggle, his last effort.

The gentleman who referred to his speech before the Illinois Legislature as being the second to the last of his public utterances was mistaken. The fact is that it was the very last speech he made, in that old capitol which you have preserved, and which is now in use as your court house.

My, God! That place should stand forever as a monument. (Applause.) That place should stand forever for its holy memories. (Applause.)

It seems to me that I can hear that organ voice of the dead Douglas there. It seems to me if I would listen that I might hear the sweet and gentle voice of Abraham Lincoln. If you could hear that, as it was my privilege to hear it in that earlier day, you would preserve that sacred building as a place where posterity might worship and when you are gone your children's children will render you a debt of gratitude.

But, I am to talk of Douglas! (Laughter and applause.)

I have a little kid at home, I have a boy, or rather he was a little boy six or eight years ago. I invited him to go with me out into the country one day where I was on the program to make a picnic speech out in a grove.

After a time I became a little worried about the boy, because when I was speaking I looked around and could not see anything of him. He had disappeared, and I was afraid, that after the fashion of boys, he had become lost, and might get into a neighboring creek there and be drowned. I was quite worried about him. After awhile the boy returned, safe and sound, and I asked him, "where were you when I was making my speech?" "Why I was behind a tree!"

"What in thunder were you doing behind a tree?"

"Because you talked so loud." (Laughter.)

On my bended knee I render thanks to God that he has given me a voice with which I shall defend Stephen A. Douglas and the Douglas democracy to the death.

Let me tell you something right here. If you want to get mad about it you can get mad and be hanged to you. (Laughter.)

I want to tell you that Stephen A. Douglas has been traduced and vilified and lied about for fifty long years and longer, and the Douglas democracy have shared in all that abuse for all that length of time.

Now mark you, I am straight up and down. We will tell it all, it all comes naturally enough. Think of it for a moment, to understand how it is. We are all human beings. Douglas died at the opening of the war. Abraham Lincoln went to that eminence he was talking about, and went quick. There came on that wonderful struggle. There came on vast armies of men, when the earth trembled beneath the tread of armed men from the Potomac on the north to the Rio Grande on the south. All over the land were marching our boys. How natural it was to forget Douglas. We buried him there beneath that monument where linger the sweet waters of Lake Michigan singing forever a requiem over his grave, and then forgot him!

But some of you fellows know how it was. Still for the most part all you fellows know—God forgive me—all you know about Stephen A. Douglas is what has been muck-raked out of the old villianous campaigns of 1858 and 1860—villianous beyond words! I was in it. (Laughter and applause.)

I want to tell you that I raked the whole dictionary over to get words. I got disgusted with Webster's dictionary because it did not have enough bad words to say about Lincoln and all the fellows who were republicans.

We democrats did our share of the fighting, and don't you forget it. (Applause.) We answered a million of lies about Douglas, we did. But long since on bended knees we have to Abraham Lincoln's ghost and to our God taken it all back; and you fellows piled up a million lies on Douglas, and by the Eternal, you never have taken it back! (Laughter.)

Now, I am going to talk plain and square to you. The fellows that did it are mostly dead. I am a brother-in-law of the Presbyterian church. I believe in the progression of saints, and whatever it is. I don't think they are unholy, I don't know as the creed of anybody else is unholy. I hope and pray that the old fellows back yonder who made mistakes like we did, or worse, that someway or other are forgiven at last, that we are going to meet them with the woman in Sardis who walked the golden streets in white. We hope to meet the old friends of the past, our neighbors and our friends, whether we agree with them or not.

There are one or two things that make me pretty hot here today, hot under the collar. Why, my God, for sixty long years, you have heard of nothing else in this wide world only—"we Republicans, we fought the war, we saved the Union!"

All we have heard is that sort of thing. The fact is, by the love of God, we did all the fighting on one side and half of it on the other! (Prolonged laughter and applause.)

That is one of the points. Now in our county, old Fulton County, we had been licking the republicans about five hundred in every campaign just before the war. When the war came on thirty-three hundred soldiers left for the front. They kept saying there, "Wait until the boys come back and we will show you." They forgot that the one speech that ever thrilled this old earth by mortal man, so far as its influence was concerned, and its wonderful results, had been made in that old State House, by the dying Douglas. That moved the democracy from ocean to ocean—the party that loved and trusted that man. However, they had forgotten at home that practically the entire democracy had left Fulton county and gone to the war.

To make a long story short, we nominated after the war in 1866, an old hayseed over in the Spoon River district for county treasurer. We just seemed to dare them, as you might say. Be hanged! if they didn't go to work and pick out one of the most gallant men we ever sent to the front, the old Colonel of the 55th Illinois Regiment.

I address some of the soldiers here while I pay a momentary compliment and tribute to that faithful and gallant old colonel. We nominated him. That looked bad for us, to run against such a candidate. When the election was over, I will be Divilly-Dinged (laughter) if we didn't have him beat over five hundred and seventeen. (Laughter.)

That is all right enough. Well, now, my friends, then another thing. You know they howled, all parties, to Almighty God, to put down Mormonism. It was in the republican platform, I forget just what the phrase was, twin deviltries of something (laughter) twin relics of—what?

Governor Yates—Barbarism.

Mr. Davidson—(continuing)—Yes, that is it. "Twin relics of barbarism, the black man and slavery." Now, don't you forget it. The last thing I heard of the republican party, I will be gol-darned if they wasn't just—(obscured in laughter).

Now just think of it, "love the negro." You ought to, he cost the country enough, in blood and money. My God! I sympathize with such a sentiment as that, and all the sympathy expressed is sincere and all right and good.

But they were going to free the negroes and they were going to lift the negroes up and they were going to bless this whole country and do something great along the line of the humanities. It was something to go down the ages to bless our children of the future generations.

Now, of course, I am not kicking about their wanting to free the negroes. If they did it, I am not kicking about it, but I have shown you a little ways back here that we democrats had something to do with that war. They freed the negroes!

But I remember distinctly, we were in office at that time, I remember when we democrats were running this government, the negroes were fat and sassy and were well taken care of. I remember distinctly that the negroes down south were on the average worth one thousand dollars a piece. When we have the finest kind of a horse over in Fulton county, the kind of a horse that is worth a thousand dollars, hang me, (laughter) if they don't curry him with a silk handkerchief! (Laughter.) They don't put a curry comb on him. You can bet your life they would take pretty good care of all those thousand dollar niggers. Well, you republicans got possession of this government and freed them, and now the niggers are not worth two dollars a dozen! (Laughter.)

It is improper to stop a man in the middle of a sentence! I was saying they were not worth two dollars a dozen, and they have niggers to burn right here in Springfield, in the shadow of Lincoln's tomb. Now, that is enough of that.

I have only mentioned these facts, as briefly introductory (laughter and applause) of the wonderful achievements of this man whom we meet to honor today.

You know regarding the early history of Douglas. It is printed in the programs and your papers have printed it and commented upon it extensively. There is no time to go into that. He came to Illinois as a poor boy and became famous down here in Jacksonville as an orator. From that time he was lifted up from one place to another until it makes one dizzy to tell the story about his success, and the realization of his ambitions, until at last he reached that high place of United States Senator.

Now, we haven't much time. I understand there is another speaker who is going to follow me, or two speakers to come afterward. I don't know what they can talk about. (Laughter.) I got it in my head that this was Douglas day, and I be hanged! (Laughter) if I don't seem to be mistaken about that.

I am going to take time to tell you, finally, this one thing that has not been told here today, and I must get it out of my system. (Laughter.)

For another thing, I want to put him before you in the shape where it will mean something to you in the generations hereafter. I have no time to talk about that great debate between Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Douglas. At this late hour there is not time to talk about that further. I have only time to say that at last, because the democratic party was divided, Lincoln succeeded in his ambitions. The party of Douglas was defeated because the same thing occurred that has happened to the republican party at this time. The party was split in the middle. His boyhood friend and manhood opponent was elected to the presidency. Immediately the movement of secession all over this country was under way and immediately the south was on fire and the great spectre of the civil war was upon this country.

Lincoln was carefully guarded from this city to the capitol at Washington. When he got there, on that fateful day, when, on the wide steps of the capital, he was administered the oath of office and delivered his inaugural address and threats had been made everywhere that Lincoln would be assassinated, in that pregnant hour when you would think the great leaders of that party would be nearest to him to protect him, I will be hanged if the eminent leaders were not behind the marble pillars or somewhere else, and Stephen A. Douglas was beside Lincoln, holding the first shiny hat that old Abe ever had in his life, during all of the time while Lincoln delivered the inaugural address and took the oath of office. (Applause.)

Don't you forget it! He was called that afternoon to the White House. The lawn of the White House was covered with politicians seeking office, and an army of New England preachers who had come to tell old Abe how to run the Government, when a magic thing occurred, similar to that which happened to the children of Israel, when Moses—maybe it was Moses, perhaps it was Dunne—I have forgotten (laughter) that is, who made the waters of the Red Sea part, side by side, until the children of Israel should have passed through unharmed.

Once again, the vast mass of people there in the White House grounds, by some authority were divided in two, while Stephen A. Douglas, the Senior Senator of Illinois, was admitted to the presence of the new President of the United States.

It is known that he was there in consultation with the President for over three hours, but nobody knows all that occurred. The only thing we did know, even at the time, was that Douglas, weak, infirm and dying, was implored to come back to Chicago, to come back to Springfield, to rally the democracy to the support of the Union and the Flag. You know what happened.

He did come back. He came back to this city and he found here a strange condition of affairs. I don't propose to bother this program, in its harmonious spirit or to spoil it in any way, and so I cannot tell you that tragic story in defense of Stephen A. Douglas, that he came back to his old friends, the Logans and the Marshals, and those famous old democratic chieftains of the south.

The Governor of Illinois, "War-Governor" Yates, called a special session of the Legislature and Douglas, frail and weak as he was, still had left that marvelous cathedral organ voice of his, that forever thrilled the hearts and souls of men, as did no other human voice in American history.

Then and there he told them the story of the south plotting to destroy this Union. There again he rallied, as he had from early youth, the democracy of Illinois to his support and that day in his last great speech he cried out to them, "no longer in this crisis can there be democrats and republicans. It is up to each man to decide and he has got to be a patriot or a traitor."

On that pregnant day I want to tell you that the men who had been unconsciously fighting the Union, were induced to take their places, right-about-face, in the support of Abraham Lincoln, constitutionally elected to the presidency. They took up their loyalty to the flag and to the Union, don't you forget it! (Applause.) Once again the miracle of the King of Galilee was performed upon the earth and at that voice the unconscious waters of treason were changed, Governor Dunne, into the rich red wine of patriotism, to the flag of the Union, and it was the voice of Douglas that did it. (Applause.)

O, how we loved him! How all the people loved him! Just a few days after he died, strong men cried in every street and hamlet of this country. In our own little city, I remember there was a Union burial service for Judge Douglas. The distinguished men of both parties tried in vain to acknowledge his patriotism, his magnanimity, his loyalty. In vain they tried to tell it, but broke down and could not tell the story.

There was our choir of the boys and girls, sweet girls trying to sing for the dead Douglas the requiems only sung for the mighty men of earth and they too, with tear splashed faces and quivering voices, failed and gave it up. They could not sing of the death of that man.

Now I am asking you and I am here just this brief time, to appeal to this great audience in the city of Springfield, the people of the city so familiar with him, to join me in the general effort to bring back the glowing Douglas to life once more, to rectify the mistake that has been made, to fill your schools and homes with loyalty to that other son of Illinois, so that when the second centennial of his death will come again, a grateful people will have erected, high up in the Nation's hall of fame, close by the name of the adored and immortal Lincoln, erected high up there also the name of that other darling son of Illinois, the name of Stephen Arnold Douglas. (Applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

It has become apparent that with the hour getting late, we will not be able to hear our two distinguished Senators at this session, and after a consultation with the committee on arrangements, after the next speaker, Mr. Everett Jennings, we will take an adjournment until eight o'clock this evening, when we will hear from Senators Sherman and Lewis.

At this time I take great pleasure in introducing the next speaker this afternoon, Assistant State's Attorney of Cook County, Everett Jennings. (Applause.)

HON. EVERETT JENNINGS.

Governor Dunne, Members of the Legislature, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I do not intend to inflict a speech upon you at this time of the day. I am commissioned to come here by the young men of Illinois and in a few brief words undertake to tell you how we young men, democrats and republicans, young men of every religion and every nationality love the name and the fame of Stephen A. Douglas.

I listened to a splendid speech this afternoon and I wondered what it was that I could say that would entertain this audience after you had listened to the magnetic words of Senator Reed; and I wondered what I could say after you had heard the grandson of the immortal man, whose name you now honor. I wondered what I could say when I am to be followed by your gifted and learned Senator Sherman and by your eloquent and distinguished Senator Lewis, but I knew you would grant to the young men the opportunity of representing the young men and of appearing before you, following an old man, ripe in years and ripe in experience, and saying to you as he loved Stephen A. Douglas who knew him, that we love Stephen A. Douglas who did not know him but who know his fame and love his record. (Applause.)

Viewed from any standpoint, Stephen A. Douglas was a marvelous man. His grandfather was with Washington and passed that terrible winter at Valley Forge. He fought to the end of the war and was present at the surrender of Cornwallis. Douglas' ancestry was historical and heroic.

The young government which the patriotism of Douglas' ancestors and ours gave to us startled, the world with its growth, territorial and material. Here we have liberty and law, domestic peace and prosperity, homes and happiness. In the race of nations we have outstripped all others.

Stephen A. Douglas, proud, young and poor, came to Illinois and made Winchester his home. A stranger in a strange land he displayed in the early struggles of life the ability, courage and determination which his grandfather had shown in the War of the Revolution. His rise was instantaneous and rapid. Becoming a lawyer, he filled the offices of Attorney General, member of the Legislature, Registrar of the Land Office, Judge of the Supreme Court, and Member of Congress, and all this was done in ten years after he came to Illinois, and by the time he reached thirty years of age.

Unaided and alone, with his own strong arm, brave heart and fertile brain, these successes came to him. For him there was no troop of influential connections or family partisans ready to puff him into prompt notice or force him upon fame. These honors did not come to him by chance, but were won in many hard fought battles on the stump and in the courthouse. Like steel from flint, the collision with other minds struck instant fire from his own. In the battles of life he had developed into a great soldier and was ready and prepared for the warfare of a great national career.

Napoleon, it is said, played in infancy with a miniature cannon. From that the image of war may have been stamped on the mind of the Conqueror of Europe. The inspiration of Douglas might be attributed to the brilliant career of his grandfather.

This early eminence of fame and influence might, to a soul less ardent, have seemed the very topmost pinnacle, but to Stephen A. Douglas, it was but a momentary resting place from which he would climb to dizzy heights and greater fame.

The slavery question in its territorial phase was constantly uppermost in Congress and in the Senate. The lines for the great parliamentary battle just preceding the Civil War were beginning to be drawn. To win in the Senate a leadership, such as he had readily won among his fellows at school, in the democratic organization of Illinois, at the bar, such as he was then winning in the House of Representatives, and then to find and establish the right policy with reference to slavery, and particularly slavery in the territories—there lay his path. This was his duty. This was his ambition.

That he could be a leader in the Senate, he did not question; the Senate in which were Clay, Webster, Benton and Crittenden, and many other giants; that he could solve the slavery question and save the Union, he did not doubt, though all others had failed.

Stephen A. Douglas belonged to that class of minds who in every situation and under every form of government, are found the unflinching advocates of rational and regulative liberty founded on principles fixed and eternal.

He followed Jefferson and Jackson and believed their principles sufficient for the settlement of every public question. He regarded Government as something framed for the defense of the weak against the strong, of the few against the many, and considered human rights as only safe where fixed laws, and not fluctuating caprices of men and parties, were supreme.

Douglas was an expansionist. He dreamed of an ocean bound republic. He objected to the promise in the Treaty of Peace with Mexico, that we would never acquire other territory as we had acquired Texas. He was vindicated and our Government afterwards paid ten millions of money to have the treaty changed in that regard.

He opposed the Bulwer-Clayton Treaty, because he did not desire to hinder our future generations in acquiring territory in Central America, and upon this subject he said in the Senate:

"You may make as many treaties as you please to fetter the limbs of this giant Republic, and she will burst them all from her, and her course will be onward to a limit which I will not venture to describe."

His was a life full of brave battles, full of courageous conduct, and full of patriotic purpose. His victory over the immortal Lincoln for Senator against the democratic administration in power, combined with the republicans and the growing sentiment against slavery, is the most stupendous political victory in all the tide of time.

He became and remained to his death the leader of the Senate, as he had been the leader in every other field of contest. To do full justice to Stephen A. Douglas, we should remember, as we compare him with Lincoln in Illinois, and other statesmen and rivals in the Senate, that Douglas' bark was on an ebbing tide while they were lifted on a flowing tide.

His greatest and crowning work was done in the United States Senate during the last ten years of his life. He fought in that arena the greatest forensic battles ever waged since the flight of years began. He dedicated his life with all this power, as a debator and all his force as a statesman, to the settlement of the questions dividing the North and South, and which threatened to dissolve the Union.

With all the force of his rare genius, his commanding character, and his imperious will, he sought to bring the North and South together. He saw, as no other statesman of his day saw, the dire disaster of a divided country, and the horrors of a war between brothers. Even after South Carolina had seceded from the Union, he hoped to avert war. In a speech urging arbitration and pleading for compromise, he said:

"Secession is wrong, unlawful, unconstitutional and criminal. South Carolina had no right to secede. The rights of the Federal Government remain, but possession is lost. How can possession be regained—by arms or by a peaceable adjustment of the matters in controversy? Are we prepared for war? I do not mean the kind of preparation which consists of armies and navies and supplies and munitions of war, but are we prepared in our hearts for war, with our own brethren and kindred? I confess I am not?"

When the die was cast, when the Rubicon was crossed, when the war came, Douglas was heart and soul with the Union. He could not stem the tide. He could not prevent war. God passed the rod over the land and smote his people. The war with all its horrors came, but Douglas did not live to witness it. This supreme struggle of the life of this great man was waged in the Senate of the United States to save his country, to avoid shedding blood and to avert the destruction of human life. God never made a nobler man than Stephen A. Douglas, or gave to man a nobler purpose than this. In this struggle, Douglas lost. His health was gone, his heart was broken. He died little past middle life, the monarch of the Senate was conquered. As was said of Ben Hill: "His sun went down at noon, but it sank amid the prophetic splendors of an eternal dawn."

The Constitution of our country had been his pillar of cloud by day and his pillar of fire by night. Lifting his eyes in death, with the last feeble pulsation of his breaking heart and the last faint exhalation of his breath, he left this message to his baby boys: "Tell them to obey the laws and support the Constitution of the United States."

I thank you. (Applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

We will now adjourn and continue the exercises this evening at eight o'clock. All are welcome and there will be no tickets of admission necessary for tonight.

Whereupon, a recess was taken until eight o'clock of the evening of the same day.

DOUGLAS CENTENARY RECONVENED EIGHT O'CLOCK P. M., IN THE HALL OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, THE CAPITOL, SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS, GOVERNOR
DUNNE, PRESIDING.

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

Ladies and Gentlemen:

It would be work of supererogation for me to introduce to this audience, or in fact to any audience in the State of Illinois, either of the two gentlemen who will address this meeting tonight.

Both of these gentlemen have been prominently before the people of the State of Illinois, during the last two years, as candidates for the position of United States Senator, representing this State in the upper House of the Congress of the United States.

There is not a man or a woman in this hall tonight who has not met personally, I am satisfied, or heard personally, either one or both of these gifted gentlemen.

One of them received the endorsement of the people of his party at the polls, when he appealed to the republican rank and file.

The other received the endorsement of his party when he appealed to the rank and file of the democratic party.

With the usual courtesy that distinguishes both of these gentlemen, each has been asking for the other the position of honor tonight—in other words, the privilege of first addressing this audience. Senator Sherman insists that Senator Lewis should have that right: Senator Lewis insists that Senator Sherman should have that right.

In view of the fact that we are celebrating the memory and the name and fame of a great democrat, I have thought it fit and proper, that if there is any rank of priority, in doing honor to Stephen A. Douglas, that it should be accorded to the republican senator from the State of Illinois, Mr. Sherman. (Applause.)

I take great pleasure in asking, now—not introducing, but asking, Lawrence Y. Sherman, United States Senator from this State, to address this audience. (Applause.)

HONORABLE LAWRENCE Y. SHERMAN.

(United States Senator from Illinois.)

Governor Dunne, to the Members of the General Assembly, who are met in Joint Session, and to all others who are present tonight:

I return to you my thanks for the courtesy of the invitation extended to me personally, and, through me, to all those of my political belief.

It is manifestly fitting that all, without regard to party affiliation, shall meet here on this day.

It is eminently fitting that the anniversary marking the one hundredth mile stone since the birth of a great American should be kept without regard to the political belief of the person whose name we tonight honor.

It is always proper to remember with some fitting tribute those who have stood out from their fellows. It is not because such men are any better than others. It is only because they have developed the qualities, and have inspired the confidence always necessary in the spokesmanship for a great body of people.

Without that confidence, and without that ability, there can be no leadership; and the leaders only represent those who believe in them, and who follow them, in the struggles that sweep over the field of American politics.

There is no place in this republic where it is more proper than the birthday, and the one hundredth anniversary of that birthday be celebrated, than here in Illinois; not because, by the mere accident of birth, either of the men whose names unconsciously arise in our memories, belonged here in Illinois; not because their birthplaces were here, but because in all their mature manhood, and in their finished efforts of the best years of their lives, and theatre of their action was in this State first, and, later, in the entire field of republican and democratic politics. (Applause.)

It was politics in the better and the higher sense. It was politics in the governmental sense, not a mere strife for empty victory, not a struggle over the right to control payrolls. It was a struggle over the vital and elementary things of human government in this republic. It was a high type of politics, and the key-note of that politics was first struck in the State of Illinois in the great Lincoln-Douglas debate of 1858, in this State. (Applause.)

These men began a local fight, if I may be allowed to use that phrase, in Illinois; and before it was ended, the struggle was national.

Their followers still live in this State, some of them who were active in the campaign. It is entirely proper for me to say what they cannot.

I do not remember the days of that struggle. The most of my generation were in their cradles when it began. When it ended, we had not yet arrived at the dignity of understanding.

We have heard the followers of Douglas say that the republicans who fought him in campaigns, here and elsewhere, did not do him justice, and do not now, such of them as are spared in the list of mortality, do him justice. I have heard the same remark of his great antagonist, Lincoln. I believe they are both correct.

Some of them may have done the honorable thing and the just thing, in the acknowledgment of their errors, if there were such errors; but for the men of my generation we can truthfully say that according to their lights, that these two men of Illinois gave to this republic a higher level of politics, and performed a duty second to no citizen in this republic in the hour when great issues crowded to the front for settlement.

I have prepared brief notes, with quotations, in order that I might be correct, and in the few moments that I can look into your faces, I will endeavor to adhere strictly to the line that I have marked out to abide by, in this address.

It is useless for me to say that this is hallowed ground. Springfield is. Men have made pilgrimages from many remote parts of the earth, that they might linger in Springfield.

There are few who come here, who know the history of this country, who do not, at the same time they pay a tribute to Lincoln, remember his great colleague in that struggle, because in its finish he was a colleague.

From this capital at one time there originated a forensic struggle that was titanic in its elements and in its actors.

It is difficult, after more than half a century has elapsed, to study the controversy and the men who conducted it, without a quickening pulse, and a brightened eye.

Both of them developed their peculiar powers in the pioneer life of Illinois. Both sprang from the people.

Both had the same inheritances of head, and heart and hand. One was a woodman and a flat-boatman. The other was a cabinet-maker. One was a surveyor. The other was an auctioneer's clerk. Both were law-students. Both were afterwards lawyers, both were members of the Legislature. Both were stump speech debaters in the manner of that time, that has endured unto the present hour. Both became the chief of great political parties. Both became candidates for United States Senator. Both were candidates for the presidency, but always, wherever they were, whether in the midst of the primeval forest, or crossing the channels of the inland rivers, whether they were in court, or in a campaign, they were always an inspiration and type for the youth of the country to emulate, and the men of this republic to admire.

We owe, tonight, to Stephen A. Douglas, this tribute to his memory, and our respects for the 100th anniversary of his birth.

It is altogether fit and proper that here and now we record our devotion to his life and to his public services.

Let me sketch a moment. This republic was the child of successful revolution. No one of the 13 original states could have fought its battles alone. Independence for all was the necessary result of the union of all.

The problems of peace followed hard by on the problems of war. What British armies could not do, the jealousies of the states seemed about to accomplish.

All saw that the union must be made more powerful, more capable and more secure, so both headlands were sheltered and safeguarded. Both public peace and individual liberty were gathered in one great charter, and the United States came upon the theatre of action in the western hemisphere.

It was adopted by states. The states were the units of creation. It was neither created nor adopted by the people, en masse. In the beginning all government was in the states. They yielded, by their voluntary action, certain of the sovereign powers of government, to the union formed.

Within the scope of those powers, there are no state boundaries, no superior authority, no state's rights. There are solidarity, a single people, and sovereignty, to the remotest border of the United States territory.

The construction—this is for the lawyers I am talking now, to my professional brethren, and excuse myself if the others do not find it interesting, or do not care to understand.

The construction of a granted power ought to be broad enough to apply to changed conditions, inseparably connected with, and a vital part of subjects that lie within the direct expression of the text of the granted power; such conditions, so changed, being within the spirit, though not within the letter of the text.

It is this liberal construction that gives a written constitution the elasticity to respond to the progressive needs of the age, without committing either a destruction or violation of its granted powers. Construction cannot write new powers in that charter, neither in the letter nor spirit of those already there.

If we leave the realm of enumerated federal powers, their liberal construction, and such incidental powers and means as are reasonably necessary and proper to the execution of granted powers, all beyond this is the exclusive province of the states of the union, now 48 in number.

If this domain beyond be entered by the federal authority, it must be by constitutional amendment. Amendment cannot be had by judicial decision, by executive action, nor by legislative enactment. (Applause.)

Every such method of amendment is not amendment. It is usurpation. (Applause.)

The mere power to usurp never disguises its character. Calling anything 16 inches in length when it is only 12, never increases the length of anything.

Many persons are the victims of definition, and of a misunderstanding of language; but it never changes the basic conditions.

There is but one way to amend. It is to follow the established channel, ordained by the instrument that created the union. No emergency, however great, justifies any other course.

Civil war did not relax this requirement. The statesman's pen followed swiftly the warrior's sword. No economic change in time of peace can ever justify a usurpation now. It must continue, as in the past, to be a government of law, and not a government of men. (Applause.)

If it be important enough to make some ponder over the propriety of using lawless ways, it is certainly important enough to cause such persons to utilize their energy to secure amendments in law and order, and thus they may make friends of those who will surely oppose lawless methods; and the former will support civil liberty rather than seek to destroy it. The State—I am talking now of our State, of your State, if you are in a neighboring jurisdiction—the state is protected from the dismemberment of its territory by the charter.

No new state can be created within the boundaries of any other state, nor can a new state be created from the parts of any other state, unless by the consent—of whom? Of the legislators of the state, always on the idea that the legislature of the state will always some time be in session to give its approval or disapproval to the question.

Every state is given two United States Senators. Somebody has said you can amend and take that away, so that we will have, after a while as it was in the days of Oliver Cromwell, a government of the commonwealth, by a single house, and that the House of Commons.

One of the paragraphs in a section of this charter says that no amendment shall be had to it that will destroy the right of the state to equal suffrage in the United States Senate.

An amendment that did so, while it might be justified as an act of governmental or military power, would of itself be an act of aggression, and would be further a voluntary act of dissolution by the sovereign power upon one of its members.

Neither, therefore, can be taken from the state without its consent. Forty-seven other states might seek in vain to despoil the 48th state of either of those rights.

It was so in the beginning. It was so when the government was formed. I do not think it indicates any degree of progress whatever to attempt to turn a representative republic of this kind into a "tumultuous town meeting"—in the language of Stephen A. Douglas. (Applause.)

The people of that state and its territory are a unit. Its rights cannot be killed by an epithet. This double sovereignty puzzles the ambassadors and representatives of other countries, some times. It is puzzling Japan now. (Applause.)

The only reason that Illinois is not puzzling this country is because we are two thousand miles from the heaving tides of the Pacific. If Illinois laid along the Pacific Coast, the representatives of that ancient land would be criticising the land laws of Illinois for the last eighteen years, much worse than they are in California today.

In fact, the more you study the experiences of this State, the more you find that in embryo, and within a smaller theater of operations, that Illinois in her State government has struck almost every phase and note of governmental power, and in many ways and cases she has blazed the way and held aloft the light for other states to act.

The boundary between the federal authority and the State authority is not always plainly visible, but it exists, and an examination always reveals the line of division.

This general outline, if you will pardon me, is essential on this anniversary, to measure the height and depth of slavery and disunion.

Property in slaves was as ancient as human history. From the remotest time, since man has kept a tablet of recorded events, it was an institution among the most ancient and the most civilized of all early nations.

It was recognized in the Union. Its existence, as a lawyer in his written pleading would say, was confessed and avoided. All hoped and tacitly believed it would be confined to certain states, whose climate, soil and production made it profitable.

Fugitives escaped from bondage and fled to free soil. Their recapture was difficult. It led to much reprisal and great controversy.

New states knocked for admission. A struggle began to make them slave or free. When this cloud first darkened the firmament, Stephen A. Douglas appeared in the field of American politics, with those conditions, and with the legal status of state and union as I have briefly sketched the outlines.

Barriers had been built up between free soil and slavery. Compromise after compromise had stayed the gathering storm. The ordinance of 1787 had dedicated the great north-west to freedom. The Dred Scott decision in necessary effect, said a slave was property and could be taken any place within the United States and there held in involuntary service.

Against this Douglas invoked the doctrine of popular sovereignty, in the Kansas-Nebraska bill. He proclaimed the rights of the people in a territory to decide for themselves whether, when admitted as a state, it should be slave or free. It was stigmatized in ensuing campaigns as squatter sovereignty.

Douglas really hoped—and let us tonight, after the great lapse of time, when the passions have nearly all died away, give him credit for the sincerity of his own thoughts and convictions—Douglas really hoped to avert the irrepressible conflict, and to restrain slavery by the police regulations of the several states of the Union.

On those issues he met Lincoln in joint debate in 1858. For many months Illinois was the forum, before a mighty jury of free men. The verdict showed the beginning of the end.

No greater debate ever commanded the attention of the English speaking people. It was local in its area, but it was national in its issues, in its conclusions and in the arguments employed.

It was the fate of Douglas to fail in his great ambition. His Kansas-Nebraska bill sank in the gulf of civil war.

It is singular at this time to read that those who administered federal power, by construction and otherwise, sent slavery into the states opposed to that institution. Such states considered free soil as their sovereign right, and so the vital dispute was a usurpation then, as sometimes is sought to be a usurpation now, of an undoubted right of a local sovereignty, known as a state.

States' rights is an unpopular phrase. It is supposed to have perished in the blaze of a hundred hard fought fields. In fact, the rights, the legitimate rights, of the states, were preserved on those fields, and the change was made by written constitutional amendment.

They may have first been written in the light of the camp fire, circled with the embattled hosts of the Union; but they were afterwards gathered by the hand of the statesman, and put upon constitutional parchment, not that they were thereby sanctified, but that the evidence was thereby preserved of those volcanic passions which gave birth to this mighty settlement of civil war. (Applause.)

The vital principle, the same thing, was in Shea's Insurrection, out in Western Pennsylvania, in Washington's administration. Let us be fair tonight. Let us tell the truth, not part of it, but, as in a court of justice, the whole truth, tonight.

South Carolina and Mississippi were not the first states that talked secession. Alabama was not the first state to talk about a negro having no rights. Prudence Clements, a school teacher in New England, was fined and jailed for teaching negro children to read and write. (Laughter.)

Now, that is not told in 1860. We can tell it in 1913. (Applause.) In New Hampshire, ropes were put about a school house. Oxen were attached, and they pulled it away, because it was a negro school house. They quit that after a while. They grew more civilized, just as they quit burning witches in New Salem.

They wanted everybody, at one time, to pray as they did; but that was intolerance in matters of conscience. We got away from that years ago. Every church in this republic of ours has left that long, long ago, and universal toleration is one of the corner stones of this republic (applause), and we are nearer God tonight than we ever were before, because of it. (Applause.)

You have read of the Hartford convention—you men of my age have. What was it? The seaports along in the codfish country (laughter) did much foreign commerce, and the Embargo Act, that prohibited foreign trade, interfered with the profits thereof; and the convention was held.

The impartial historian, Mr. Dwight, who palliates the offense as much as possible, yet files what I meant a while ago, as a plea of confession and avoidance. He confesses there was a great deal of what we called, in 1861, "treason," talked in that convention.

They talked in resounding terms of the Kentucky and Virginia resolution.

You have forgotten that in my native state of Ohio, that the Legislature of Ohio once passed secession resolutions. (Laughter and applause.) They did not really secede from the Union, but they were very mad about it. They attached a branch of the United States bank, and they sent in a state officer with a writ, who levied on a quantity of money in the vaults of the bank—when the federal courts decided that the bank was not subject to state taxation, being a branch of the federal government, and its instrumentalities being exempt from taxation. When the state officers persevered, the federal authorities immediately began contempt proceedings and finally the state officers abandoned the undertaking.

It was then, as usual, in cases we know of that kind—they carried their grievance to the Legislature. It is a general receptacle for all the governmental kicks of everybody. (Laughter and applause.)

They proceeded in due form to pass resolutions which are almost, in substance, the same as the Kentucky and Virginia resolution. For the Kentucky and Virginia resolutions there is no excuse at this time. They plainly declared the superiority of the state, in matters of controversy, over the powers of the federal government.

Slavery used those powers to justify disunion, but that doctrine is the one that perished in the civil war, not the legitimate powers of the states, that have never been granted away.

Stripped bare of all obscuring incidents, it was lawlessness. Disunion was disintegration, and the dissolution of the bonds of civil government.

With this brief sketch that I regard as essential to understand the character of Douglas, let us stop. Here let us pause before Douglas the American. Under the pitiless discipline of defeat, he rose to the sublime height where only patriots walk. (Applause.)

When the flag was lowered at Sumpter, Douglas became the first and the greatest of war Democrats. (Applause.)

He pledged his help to Lincoln, to maintain the Union, and he nobly redeemed his promise. (Applause.)

He saw armed rebellion lift its hand against a people's government. The gathering squadrons of disunion hurried to the fields of the civil war; but amid the confusion his voice always rang true. "There are no neutrals in this country. There are none but patriots and traitors." The words printed on your program are the words that, if any great dome should be erected to the memory, in marble and bronze, ought to be cut on its base—these words that are the words of one who believed in this Union and believed it was worth saving, as it then was. (Applause.)

On June 3, 1861, he died, young in years, but fruitful in results. His battle cry sounded from the grave. The spirit of Douglas rose, above the storm of civil war, from Sumpter to Appamattox.

The men who followed him in campaign, met treason on a hundred fields. They gave proof of their devotion, as men who loved the Union, by the sacrifice of their lives.

There was no party in the service that Douglas gave, in the last remnants of his broken life. (Applause.) In the last supreme test his heroic figure, in Illinois, must rise alongside of the memory of Lincoln. (Applause.) He was rightfully called the "Little Giant."

Born in obscurity, and bred in poverty, with head and hand and heart imbued with valor and devotion, he lived to see the time when he was the leader of hundreds of thousands of men who trusted implicitly his judgment, his honor, his wisdom, his courage.

To his great rival, in the day of defeat, he gave the full measure of his devotion. He was great in life, but he was unspeakably greater in his death. (Applause.)

Let me read what he said, and with this I conclude. "The right and province of expounding the constitution, and construing the law, is vested in the judiciary established by the constitution." We all believe that. We all believe it ought to be.

"As a lawyer" (continuing) I feel at liberty to appear before the court and controvert any principle of law, while the question is pending before the tribunal; but when the decision is made, my private opinion, and your private opinion, and all other opinions, must yield to the majesty of the authoritative decisions of the courts. (Applause.)

I wish you to bear in mind that this involves a great principle, upon which our rights, and our liberty and our property all depend.

What security have you, for your property, for your reputation, for your personal rights, if the courts are not upheld, and their decisions respected, when once formally rendered by the highest tribunal.

"I do not choose, therefore, to go into any argument on this question. I have no idea of appealing from a decision of the Supreme Court, upon a constitutional question, to the decision of a tumultuous town meeting." (Applause.)

That was Douglas! That was not Douglas alone. It was, though falling from his lips, the embodied genius and power and philosophy of this American republic.

He was only the poor instrument, as he said, falling from his lips in the fleeing moment the things that were necessary for the endurance of civilized government.

I came here readily and willingly. I came on the request of those who had charge of this anniversary. I would willingly have traveled three times one thousand miles to have recorded, publicly, my admiration, and to do justice to the memory, not of this great Democrat, but of this great American citizen. (Prolonged applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

Before introducing the next speaker, I would like to read excerpts from two or three letters.

BLOOMINGTON, ILLINOIS, April 21, 1913.

"The death of my brother prevents the possibility of my being present at the Douglas Centennial celebration on the 23d of April.

"I beg to thank you for your courteous invitation and to assure you that under other circumstances I would gladly have taken part in the exercises in honor of the man that I honored and love."

ADLAI E. STEVENSON,

(Former Vice President of the United States).

(Applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

Unable to be present with us today, another distinguished gentleman has written a long letter, one of the excerpts of which is so beautiful that I know you will be glad to hear it. (Reading.)

"Lincoln's bark rode on a flowing tide;
Douglas' bark rode on an ebbing tide.
Amid the gloom of the conflict,
He had vainly striven to avert,
And the thunder of the cannon,
Whose reverberations broke his heart;
He was called to the bosom of his God!
But when the mists roll away, and
The dawn of the Truth of History cometh,
His name and fame, like the name and fame of Lincoln,
Will endure forever, and for AYE!"

(Signed.) HENRY WATTERSON.

(Applause.)

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

And I now take pleasure, my friends, in introducing the last speaker, the great tribune of democracy, the man upon whose shoulders has fallen the oratorical gift of Douglas in his day, and Altgeld, in his—James Hamilton Lewis, United States Senator. (Prolonged applause.)

SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS.

Governor Dunne, Ladies and Gentlemen of this Assemblage:

It is always a source of gratification for a man to receive praise from any one. When his known bosom and confidential friend finds it agreeable to pay him a tribute, it may be expected that that tribute will oft-times be as exaggerated as the confidence and affection. It is to that you must ascribe the very glowing encomium I have just received at the hands of your presiding officer.

I join with my distinguished colleague in the expression of great satisfaction that this occasion gives an opportunity to address the Legislature and its guests.

Conditions which shall eventually, and probably shortly, encompass the official life of both of us, will hardly render probable our frequent return, to be honored with your patient and flattering attentions.

I would have come to this gathering, if there had been no other object than to have done myself the service of a renewed association with a body of men to whom I still feel a sense of defined obligation, and who, when they have separated, from these official duties, to return to their several callings, in their respective homes, I will have too little opportunity to personally greet and personally know, as I would love to, as friend and friend.

I pray that I may be pardoned for speaking for my distinguished colleague and myself, without any regard to those invisible appellations which distinguish the names of the parties to which we are allied, if I beg to say that every member of this honorable body would do us both a great compliment, from time to time, as they may be inspired from the necessities of themselves, or the demands of their constituents, that they may let such wants be known to us, as their public representatives, that in that way, if no other, we may not altogether be divided, as our official duties may call us, geographically, some distance apart.

Gentlemen of this committee, who have organized this occasion, I extend to you, as an American citizen, my sincere appreciation, and express to you the just praise that is due you.

The people of Illinois, in continuing the memory of her great sons, and perpetuating them before the country, by reviving, now and then, the splendid virtues which we love to recall, do more than to pay a tribute to the illustrious dead.

You may be unconscious, gentlemen of this Legislature, of the extent to which this service will go, in its influence upon the people of our day; but there is no man who sits here tonight, if he have but the reflection of the citizen, who will under-estimate the splendid inspiration to the youth of this day that these celebrations, on the 12th of February and on the 23d of April, to two distinguished gentlemen of Illinois, will be and have to the youth of the nation!

Young men who are in the colleges in Illinois, animated with noble aspirations, boys in the common schools who have been inspired by a father's hope and a mother's prayer, seeking elevation in themselves, will often times be confronted with the knowledge of these celebrations, by which you have paid tribute to greatness, but more to virtue; and to these it will be an encouragement, and to those young lives a great reward in their undertaking; and because of that, if there be no other form of compensations you are, believe me, much rewarded for the time that you give from your public undertakings, to celebrations of this order!

How true it is, as Douglas said, in his opening great speech in the lower House of Congress, in the defense of Andrew Jackson, that the reputation of a country's great men is its property and one in which it should take pride, and cherish with praise, and defend against defamation!

All lovers of beautiful expression are gladdened, when entering the classic city of Athens, to find inscribed on what is known as the 7th pillar of that splendid outer gate, the great truth of Pericles, proclaiming that "A land without heroes, is a country without history!"

You meet tonight, and these gentlemen who have honored us by their presence from abroad, mingle with you, to pay that just tribute to the personality of American citizenship.

It is not my purpose, gentlemen, to enter into the historical life and career of the distinguished disciple of this occasion. To do so would not only be superfluous, but I fear it would mar that which had gone before me.

We recall the incident related in Constant's Memoirs of Napoleon, that took place just at the time when the conquering Napoleon was about to ascend the Alps. Berthier, his friend, and the commanding general of one of his corps, turned and said, "Sire, we are about to cross the Alps; what will history say?" Napoleon responded, "It will say that Hannibal crossed it before us." So, anything I may add to this occasion must be responded to in the just tribute, that Hannibal has crossed it before me. (Bowing to Senator Sherman.) (Prolonged applause.)

I am content if this occasion will allow me, with some degree of audacity, to intrude some interpretation upon the splendid speech of my distinguished colleague.

I prefer, upon this occasion, when I note and recall the addresses which have been delivered by the distinguished son of his more distinguished sire, and the distinguished Senator from Missouri, and others who are our guests, if I may be permitted, to mark in some cogent form, without more pretense than mere expression, what was the real meaning of the things for which Mr. Douglas stood.

Rather than to trace his life, I prefer as one who scans some circle of mountains, to behold the promontories, and, noting them, jutting high into the sky, stand as one who views their eminence, and point to their splendid elevation, and by these to have you judge the array, content that there will be no injustice.

What were the personal things for which this man lived?

When Emerson was asked if his famous expression—that great events gave life to great men—were intended to mean that great men only became great as the birth of a great event, he responded: "No; I meant that which all men understand, that it is the things for which men live, and the great events to which their lives aspire, which make them great."

Then let me say to my friend, Judge Sherman, taking his splendid speech as my text: There was, in Mr. Douglas' attitude, much misunderstanding in the day of the deliverance, as there has been, since then, much confusion in the object which he sought.

True, as Judge Sherman says, the very expression, "States' rights" were upheld, at that time, by very eminent and capable men, as expressions of ignominy and odium—understood by many as carrying with it the intimation that the State assumed to have a right superior to that of the nation, and, under this right, to exercise a sovereignty that enabled it to depart from its mother country, and to sever the obligation that held it in Union; the expression, "States' rights" was too often construed to arrogate a principle of sovereignty over the federal union in matters of conflict between the state and the nation, in affairs purely national.

But I may add, that it has ever been the curse of all political philosophy, and all of religious science, that the mere designation of terms has been permitted to confuse ideas and to destroy ideals.

I may remind my distinguished friend, who just preceded me, that Mr. Draper, in his Intellectual Development, has expressed a thought well calculated to cause men to ponder, when he asserts that single expressions, some times of opprobrium, or of praise, have been known to destroy the germ of ideas and ideals, upon which worlds have been constructed.

How well do we recall, this night, that the mere designation of a term was used to prevent the great Christian religion from imparting its blessings to mankind, and hallowing its sanctity over the civilization of the earth, for twenty-eight years. How we remember that the Great Man came, seeking to disseminate the message of his life, the strength and sweetness of his love, and was asked "whence came he from," with the answer "Nazareth;" and the other responded, "Can any good come out of Nazareth?" It was enough that he was called a Nazarene.

In those days, to which these speeches have alluded, it would seem to be sufficient that a man should be merely called by the name "Democrat" or be known as one designated an adherent of that theory denominated "States' rights."

What really was the meaning, gentlemen, of this modern day, and of that?

Well indeed might I enjoy, with these gentlemen who have preceded me, the hope that in an hour such as this, when there are no lashings of invective, no fierce partisan ties, when there are no bitter hatreds arrayed on one side against the other, when mankind, beholding the splendid achievements of their fellow Americans, may write with an indelible hand the tribute that is due them, and with justice proclaim, when need be, the wrong committed by them.

What, therefore, in this calm hour, was really meant by the attitude of Douglas? To use the words of Emerson, "What was the height to which he sought to attain, and the thing eminent for which he lived to secure?"

Let us pause for a moment, and indulge this thought; that there never was a time in civilization, which has found a record in history, when there was not a jealous care on the part of the citizenship for something of the sovereign inherent in humanity, that ever suggested to the self that it was king within itself, within its own sphere.

The sovereignty of man was ever the eternal demand of the citizen, and to this day a man will resent, however much believing he may feel towards a neighbor, the assumption on his part to direct him in the purely private affairs of his own life, and, feeling the sovereignty of self, he will demand that he be permitted, as a man, to express his own views, and execute them, by virtue of the inherent sovereignty implanted of God, and feeling within himself all his inheritance from his fathers.

This, in its multiplications, finds its way to the very smallest political geography. The very ward in a city will resent the interference or invasion of the neighboring ward; and the district will likewise resent and avenge the intrusion of the neighboring district, however much in common their rights or their desires may be; and well do you know that a city will fight to the death for the very achievement of an undertaking, rather than to have a rival community assume to speak to it in the language of domination or direction. Why?

Because these are but the combination and the collection of the unit individual, expressing, in the combination and the collection, the sentiment or the man.

Thus we find the political division of the State, and after all, see nothing more than that political unit expressing the ideal of the man, demanding that in itself, and for itself, in all matters which touch itself, it should be sovereign.

And in the word "sovereign" there was no intent, on the part of students of the Constitution, to assume a sovereignty above and superior to the national government, in matters in which the national government had been ordained by the fathers in its foundation to be sovereign; but to be sovereign in all of those matters in which the individual purely local must necessarily be, in order that he might control his own affairs, and be the master of his own private destinies of home and household.

How natural, therefore, for Mr. Douglas, that these views should have been felt in the day in which he lived, and expressed in the hour in which he moved.

It was born, gentlemen, of inheritance. The tribes of Israel, the earliest record we have of a form of government, were so completely for individual sovereignty within themselves, that marriages intermingling between the tribes were regarded as a violation of the sovereignty, and met with punishment, even the fear of death, as the inevitable result of this violation.

When the Grecian states came together, and formed the alliance known as the Achaean League, it was a serious question as to how far the league could go. When some of our forefathers sought to model a form for the early foundation of this government, based largely upon the Amphictyonic League, it was debated among them as to how far the right of the individual should extend, to contend for his rights according to its ancient sovereignty, as it had enjoyed them.

The very first effort that had been made on the part of one of the states to control the city of Sparta, and to dominate Athens and Corinth, resulted in the Achaean League becoming severed apart, as you know from history.

It was not at all unnatural, therefore, that when this government was formed, with these lessons before our forefathers, there should have been formed what Judge Sherman aptly termed the mysterious combination of government, suggested in order to guard against these very occasions when governments, encountering such obstructions, had often gone to fragments and to pieces.

Douglas came from New England, in the very home of that which is designated as the "town meeting."

When the fathers of the constitution, so far as New England was concerned, framed a form of government, there in that land of the Puritan, one of the very first considerations was the designation of the town government, separate and distinct from any other governmental entity, preserving as far as such could be maintained, the doctrine of sovereignty in the control and management of all of their local concerns, and resenting to the uttermost the interference, or intrusion, by any authority upon this privilege sacred to them.

That Judge Douglas could have found his way in Illinois without bringing, as a result of these inheritances, those same convictions would have been as strange as you observe would have been impossible.

The ancient foundations of the government were transmitted by the fathers who laid ours, and all these sons of New England, who came west, have brought this principle as clearly unconscious within their own lives as were the convictions of personal liberty, man to man.

Then let us understand—what was the thing he fought for? Let no man, at this date, confuse the real principle at stake.

His idea, gentlemen of the Illinois Legislature, was merely to execute those doctrines of government which in the past have alone proven to be permanent in the enjoyment of man, and without those which by test have invariably demonstrated their weakness, and under any trial or test have severed in parts and gone to destruction.

There has ever been, as there ever will be, the school, among intelligent men, of great division and contest as to whether concentrated government, centralized under one great head, taking their dictation from any voice that may rule at that place, was the better; or that other form of government where each local order is sovereign in itself, touching its own affairs, and enjoying its relations and existence directly from the mouths of the citizens, each with the ballot in his hand.

We pause to reflect a moment, what has transpired in the world around us?

England assumed that she could imperialize her government, and keep something of the aristocratic form of Russia, on the theory this would be best if she could do it on the order of the ancient Roman Empire system.

This passed for some years unheeded, because England, not having space enough, or rather, having space so large as to be able to accommodate all her citizenship, there did not arise, or it was not necessary to awaken, a conflict between the citizenship, because within his sphere the citizen felt content.

But as the days came and went the space became filled, and the citizen began to realize that upon the dictates of a crown far removed from his he received the orders of his existence, he began to rebel, feeling himself less than a man, when ordered like a servant, when existing like a subject.

Scotland was brought under the yoke of England, and then Ireland was forced under domination. Wales surrendered to the same powerful force, and then was created before the eyes of the world, the British Empire.

Then, for the first time, was presented to England that problem which before then her sons had warned her would arise, that inability to control the citizen in the manner by which his citizenship would remain loyal, when controlled at a distance, through the existence of sub-agencies, when he had no voice in the forming, directly, of the government under which he lived.

Mr. Bulkley, in his splendid work on English civilization, calls attention to the peculiar condition in which England is now.

Said he, "She has awakened to the realization that could she have maintained herself in the condition of the ancient Grecian states, by which each of her own governments, in their divisions, could have been local, and in their locality allow citizenship government sovereign to himself, he would have a pride in his community, he would have felt a delight in his creation, he would have realized it was the product of his own hand; he would not be, as he is now, feeling himself the mere creature and the mere victim of royal rule at a distance, wondering if he is to be kept in this condition of subserviency, and questioning whether his future is to be one of citizenship or one of subject.

Archibald Allison, writing in 1844, from Glasgow, (strongly as he had advocated the system of centralized government), of the time when England had succeeded in bringing together the centralization, to which I have alluded, this distinguished essayist and historian, as time went on, is found admitting, afterward, the wrong of his theory, the injustice of the doctrine, and the persecution of its effect, saying:

"It were better, now, that we view the Italian governments first.

"There was Florence, there was Venice, and there, above all, was her splendid individuality, that made her great before the world, and magnificent before creation.

"Copying after the model of England, she proceeded to centralize her government, and by the process of centralization lost the individuality of the Italian states.

"Behold her now! Every division warring against the other, each feeling it has been imposed upon, and denied its local rights, no particular continuity, no general system of adoration of the institutions of the past, and no respect for the authority of the present.

"The Italian states now confront us, as England produces to the eye of the world, the situation of a country in a state of discordance, only abiding the time when the citizen at home will feel it is not his government, because the ruling powers are as foreign to him as if he were in another land; and on the very first occasion he will rise either in revolt against civil authority, or insurrection against the military."

In Mr. Douglas' mind, unquestionably shown, was the very theory, which he sought to avoid, in behalf of his country.

Let us understand very clearly, and let me rejoin to my dear friend, Judge Sherman, that when Mr. Douglas opposed the idea that slavery should enter either into Kansas or Nebraska, without the consent of those local sovereignties, it was not because it was slavery, it was because his ideal, as a citizen, of his American institutions, was that nothing should be permitted to enter into a sovereign state, touching its purely local concerns, without the consent of its people. (Applause.)

So marked was this, that when California was presented to the Union, and there was an effort by Senator Cass, of Michigan, demanding that California, before coming into the Union, should first surrender and yield her public lands to the Union, Mr. Douglas there opposed it, upon the ground that that which was within the sovereign limits of California was the property of the state, that her people have the right to its enjoyment, and it should not be within the power of the Union to invade these sacred precincts and dominate those people at a distance; and take that from them which was their right by their own sovereign creation. (Applause.)

It was the rule of the land. It was not slavery. It was the adherence to the principles of self-government which have ever animated civilization to its very highest apex, wherever civilization has attained the altitude of perfection.

True, as my friend, Judge Sherman says, Judge Douglas, himself, was misunderstood. He was charged, as the gentleman well said here today, as a traitor—Mr. Lincoln likewise—but then they were the sad yesterdays, glorious in their achievement, but to be regretted in some of their incidents.

But we pause to realize, tonight, that we neither repeat the injustice of the yesterdays, nor do justice for today. We pause to note the principle involved, and we now, tonight, see its justification.

My friend, Judge Sherman, says, and rightfully—I felicitate him in his splendid expression—that the right of the states, in so far as the constitution has provided, shall remain and be as an integral form of this government; and that the question of the rights of the states should not be doubted, in so far as those rights are distinctly the rights of the sovereignty.

But, my fellow citizens of Illinois, what availed this distinction on the part of my friend? What availed the splendid admission at this time, of this scholar of government, if there be agencies around this republic who hide their time, upon every occasion to avoid them on the one hand, and destroy them on the other; if there shall be creations of this government, called federal agencies, of one form or another, that from time to time may be invoked for the destruction of all forms of local government, at the behest of those who may profit by the invasion.

Note what is transpiring around us here today, as I am honored by this audience.

There is the sovereign state of Minnesota. I summon the shade of Stephen A. Douglas, that he may note the fruits of the thing against which he fought. Minnesota was a Union state. A splendid soldiery had done credit to the Union, and glory to the cause. She was Republican, in politics, as the designation is known, and when, first, with the war on the democracy as it was termed, then the war on the opprobrious "States' rights," as it was termed and designated, the theory grew and fattened, truly as the poet has defined, until we beheld, that when Minnesota, in her sovereign capacity, passed through her legislature the laws for the proper control of great public service institutions, her railroads, and prescribed their rights, touching these questions, it was for an attorney general of the United States of America, in the performance of his office, through the supreme federal court, in obedience to the local federal courts of the nation, to enjoin the attorney general of the state of Minnesota, elected by the people, from executing the sovereign laws passed by the legislature of the sovereign state, Republican in politics, of Minnesota. (Applause.)

Can you wonder that there would have arisen some revolt in great Minnesota, against this invasion of local home rule?

Immediately following, Nebraska, which similarly passed laws respecting the control of its local institutions, in the matter of freight rates, and the control of the destinies of her local commerce, was similarly treated by the same form of invasion.

Oklahoma, Democratic; Alabama, Democratic; Kansas, mixed and divided in her respective political allegiances, met similar treatment.

Kansas was enjoined by the Federal Government from executing her law of bank guaranty.

Alabama was enjoined, in the federal courts, from executing her law touching the mere rate of passenger fare upon railroads.

Your neighboring states of Kansas and Oklahoma both were enjoined by federal tribunals from executing their local legislation touching mere matters of local control; these being passed by the sovereign legislature, in all branches of the several states.

Do you marvel, gentlemen of Illinois, that this morning, and yesterday, you read in your daily newspapers how twelve states, five of the states being Democratic and seven being Republican states, have moved the Supreme Court of the United States—that great, eminent tribunal—that they be given an opportunity to be heard, against the further invasion on the part of the United States over the local authority, and the just limitation of the states in the control of their purely local matters, and their sovereign rights! (Applause.)

Do you fancy that Mr. Stephen A. Douglas did not, in his splendid prophetic vision, behold the ultimate growth of this feeling, and the wrong upon home rule and local self-government, if the aberration of gentlemen who misunderstood him, should longer obtain, without some protest from some great and strong source.

Senator Wade, standing from Ohio, turned to Mr. Douglas, as he did to others, and said:

"It is not our purpose to invade the local affairs of any state. We recognize that in its own affairs it should be sovereign and uncontrolled by any force without."

The great Abraham Lincoln, in closing the debate, when he reached Jonesboro, responding to Mr. Douglas, and the sentiment of Illinois, said:

"I, too, concur, that in matters of the State, wherein her own affairs are concerned, these should not be invaded by any source. I agree with Judge Douglas."

Yet, with this creed, as the creed of government for the American citizenship, behold, Gentlemen of the Illinois Legislature, of the sovereign Illinois, how it has been invaded, and at times completely destroyed.

My friend, Judge Sherman, will not live, even though Heaven grant him, (as I hope it does), the full statute of the Divine limitation, he will not live long enough, to fail to observe that there will be an end of the dual form of government, to which he so splendidly alluded, if this form of intrusion shall continue and multiply, and the rights of the states, within their province of home rule, shall be so thoroughly dishonored on one hand, and discredited on the other.

I speak to Illinois. You, too, were the victims of this invasion when your Legislature passed laws in this State, prescribing methods of taxation, applying to the large institutions and the small alike.

Your body of men, constituted by law, and known as the State Board of Equalization, executed the law in the pursuit of their honest judgment, and thereupon it was assailed by certain institutions, eleven in number, most of whom held their possessions within the State, their ownership being out of it.

The controversy was carried to the federal court, and one federal judge enjoined the execution of the law of Illinois, after the court of Illinois had affirmed it.

And although the Supreme Court of Illinois, and the local courts of Illinois, the Legislature of Illinois, and your branches of government, the administrative, executive, and ministerial departments of Illinois, had all affirmed your decision, and executed it according to your will, it was left to this invading authority to set it aside, and nullify it, depriving you of taxes by which more than six hundred and eighty thousands of dollars were taken from the treasury of Illinois, that otherwise belonged to it by the system of home rule and righteous self-government, within the sovereign limits of Illinois.

It was because of things such as these, that Stephen A. Douglas raised his voice on principle, that there might be no such invasion in this government as would destroy the pride of the citizen, the honor of the community, the glory of the State and the manhood of the man.

Behold you then! I see upon your splendid walls, as I do upon the adornments of this splendid house, the shield of the great State of Illinois.

Mark how she reads! "State sovereignty; national union."

It was intended by the fathers that constructed you, and laid your foundations, that these two should be together, not invaded one by the other, but after the order of the Heavens, where the constellations glitter before our eye, each planet in its place, like a glowing star, each state likewise within its orbit, differing one from another only as the stars differ, one from another, in their glory.

It was because of home rule, and its necessity, in order to give the citizen liberty and justice, that Mr. Douglas laid down his doctrine of states' rights, in order that man might have his rights. (Applause.)

We at once advert to the second phase, more interesting tonight, perchance, than at any other time when I will have the honor to discuss before this Legislature any proposition of governmental policy. I refer to Mr. Douglas' doctrine of the American foreign policy.

What a clear vision that man seemed to possess! How goodly good was the Almighty to him! How splendid seemed he in his far-reaching vision of the future!

Mr. Douglas found himself surrounded by a condition unparalleled in this government, and was compelled to take his monitor only from his own sense of right and Americanism.

England was claiming a boundary of the northwest, which would have comprised all of the states of Oregon and Washington, and all of the waters of Puget Sound.

Down at the neighboring line to the south were Mexico and Central America. Southward lay Cuba, with England's eye anxiously addressed to it, and other nations, particularly Spain, anxious to see that it was only possessed by a friend of hers.

Mr. Douglas beheld the situation, and understood the future of America. He denied to England the right to come across the waters of our seas, and lay hand upon the integral continent of America.

He denied the right that the island of Cuba should ever be placed in a position, by which the enemies of American sovereignty should ever be enabled to place their weapons of offense and defense so near the door of America.

He declared his doctrine of the American foreign policy, which, was the full execution of that principle known as the Monroe Doctrine.

You will recall, gentlemen of the Legislature, that in 1823, when there was a threat on the part of Austria, Prussia, Russia, and one other country, to take possession of the southern border of the United States, under the guise of preserving peace, that Mr. Canning, who was then the premier of England, addressed a communication to Mr. Monroe, calling his attention, (he being at that time, as you recall, secretary of state), to this peculiar condition, and to this situation that bode some strange conditions on the morrow.

Promptly Mr. Monroe conferred with Thomas Jefferson, and Mr. Jefferson sent back a message, saying, in response to Mr. Monroe's suggestion, that the doctrine should go forth from America, announcing that no foreign nation should be permitted to plant its colonies on this soil.

Said Mr. Jefferson, "This is the most important declaration that has been made by America, since the Declaration of Independence." The doctrine thus going by the name of the Monroe doctrine, proclaimed to the world that on this continent, between sea and sea, there should be only American land for Americans.

Mr. Douglas, in his position, saw the design on the part of the government, that for so long had an eye, first of envy, then of hatred, then of covetousness, on this republic, anxious to divide it if possible; and to create such destruction within it as could be brought about by pitting citizens against each other.

He demanded that the doctrine known as the Munroe doctrine should be amply held out, freely disclosed, securely executed.

There he laid down the doctrine of the American policy, which was: "America's hands off all foreign lands; the hands of foreign lands off all America."

Let us behold, at this minute, what would have been the result, if Mr. Douglas' attitude had been adopted and fully executed? What would have been our situation today?

Judge Sherman, you are right!

Yonder stands the spectre of Japan. There, upon the Pacific Coast of our country, arises the strange shadow marked by Oriental faces, the like of which we will not read accurately in this present time. But what means it? Let us be just to the history of today.

Mr. Douglas' attitude was the American foreign policy, that this country should keep its hands off that which did not concern it, in foreign lands.

In the meantime, what has happened to America? We have found it agreeable, my fellow Americans, to go into Asia, and into the Asiatic Continent, laid hands upon the sphere of Asia, put our citizens there, and demanded that they be protected, under treaty with Japan and China, equal to the exact status of those in China and Japan.

We have thrust out our hands to take the Phillippine Islands, upon some theory of American government, eight thousand miles from the shores of our lands.

As a result of these far-reaching activities, we can see all too close at hand the prospect of war with Japan.

Note the disturbance with England, over the Panama Canal treaty. Mark the enmity with Russia and with France, from time to time, arising and finding expression in the objection to the construction of the Panama Canal. Behold the hatred of us as expressed by all of Central and South America, all of these difficulties caused by our late course of unnecessarily meddling at the direction of stock speculators into the private and financial affairs of foreign lands.

We went into Asia and joined England in the seizing of railroad territory in Manchuria. We had no object other than the aiding of financial jobbers in Asia who claimed to be American, but were English and European in interest.

We entered at England's invitation to meddle in the matter of China and her obtaining money from the world to start her new republic.

We went into Japan with our stock manipulators, then we put behind them the Federal Government, and this gave Japan the right to demand reciprocity, that the Federal Government stand behind the Japanese in America, as against any state regulation protecting that state from the effect of foreign influence in domestic matters.

Now, we are threatened with the reprisals that can at any time mean the seizure of the Phillippines and Hawaii, precipitating a war of worlds on America.

For private objects, and to serve certain well-known syndicate interests, we "dabbled" unnecessarily into South America without form of constitutional ceremony, and now find Mexico, Central and South America our enemies, and making combinations and alliances against the United States as a revenge. All of these are biding their time to aid Japan, or any Oriental or European enemy in an assault upon us and in the destruction of the Panama Canal.

The unfortunate truth is, that we find ourselves tonight, after violating the ancient doctrine of the fathers, forced to confront a situation so solemn, and perchance so serious that it will require all the splendid ingenuity and engineering on the part of the patriotic administration of our country, to avoid a very serious result.

How has it all come about? It has been brought about somewhat imperceptibly, by fatally easy gradations; because, as Mr. Roosevelt, the former President of the United States wisely set forth, the first violation of principle led to the second, and the third and the tenth easily followed.

That these countries, abroad, eight thousand miles away from our furthest coast, cannot understand us, is natural. When we went into their countries, to possess ourselves of privileges, and to partake of opportunities, in behalf of certain favored individuals, the people of that remote region turned and demanded a reciprocity we cannot render, because there is a wall of national feeling. To give citizenship to the Japanese, and allow admission and limited naturalization to the Chinese seems to those nations a reasonable and consistent reciprocity for the privileges and protection we seek within their realms. But the protection of America, of the livelihood of our toiling citizens, the institutions of the domestic life, and the holy home, all rise to remind us forcibly of the impossibility of yielding to these demands.

In the absence or denial of such reciprocity, retaliation is natural indeed!

But had Mr. Douglas, with his far foresight, been able to warn Mr. Cass, at the time he did, and to have warned him successfully, there would have been no such condition upon America today. We would have avoided the very condition that surrounds us today, by the exercise of wisdom in following the advice of this democratic sage, this great American statesman.

There was the other phase. He likewise saw the situation in the south, when he opposed the doctrine of allowing Central America to be colonized by England, and allowing England to place an English government in Honduras.

He reminded the United States Senate that there might come a time when we would wish to cut a waterway through that isthmus, and for its protection need those shores, and that they should not be in the hands of foreign and inimical nations; and there he laid down that other doctrine, for that treaty known as the Bulwer-Clayton treaty, which was executed in 1850.

He laid down the theory that would rise to haunt us, and would plague its inventor, and he warned this country that the clause of that treaty which forbade us, without the consent of England, to fortify our own country, practically, on the one hand, or to colonize, as Americans on the other, would rise to persecute us.

He, with his American foreign policy, raised his voice against the domination of America by any other influence on earth but by Americans. (Applause.)

It was only yesterday, my fellow Americans, that you saw the finest diplomacy of that splendid gentleman, Judge Taft, the former President of the United States, able as a lawyer, and eminent as a citizen, brought to bear to its very fullest extent, in order to avoid a conflict with England over this very treaty, by which they forbade us fortifying our own border on the one hand, and colonizing it by American citizenship on the other; but Douglas, nearly fifty years before had warned the United States they would bring upon themselves just such a calamity; and only yesterday, we read in the daily press how Chamberlin, the Senator from Oregon, joined with other Senators, and (doubtless speaking the wisdom of the administration) introduced a resolution in the Senate, in order to avoid the very outrages and wrongs to America, which Mr. Douglas pointed out would inevitably befall us, as the resolution calls, first, for the complete abrogation of the remnants of the Bulwer-Clayton treaty on the one hand, and its successor, the Hay-Pauncefote treaty on the other, in order that Americans might have the benefit of the shores of the splendid waterway that is on the eve of completion, that Douglas' splendid vision foresaw, in his hour.

This statesman beheld the world in his contemplation. He saw America in her advance. He recognized the marvels of civilization, and conceived of the future like a man gifted with inspiration; but an American at heart and soul, striving for the salvation of his country.

We speak of these things, that we might use the splendid language of Judge Sherman, and his predecessor, to vindicate the intelligence of this splendid Illinoisan, and give justice and credit to the noble history of his achievements, as tested by time, and fulfilling the philosophy of Emerson, as proven by trial, well may Illinois greet him tonight!

Let us dream that his shade may hallow this sacred precinct; and recognize that from the sons of those who did him injustice, there comes from their present representatives a splendid encomium to his fame.

Statesman he was; scholar and statesman still he is; potent in his influence upon America; grand in his design for Illinois; and splendid in contemplation; the object and example to children; and a monument of glory to Illinois. (Applause.)

I therefore speak of him as one whose deeds I revere, and as one whose wisdom, let us realize, had it been followed, would have exempted us from these difficulties which are about us now, and to which distinguished speakers have alluded.

We will come back, gentlemen of America, to the doctrines of the fathers, who wrought in patience and wisdom.

It is all well enough, my fellow Illinoisans, to take great pride in these little temporary outbursts of enthusiasm that we experience from time to time when someone attains to some feat that is known in its hour as an achievement, when it is beheld in haste, but—

“The tumult and the shouting dies,
The captains and the kings depart;
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
A humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet—
Lest we forget! Lest we forget!”

We go, in this hour, for the restoration of America, back to the wisdom of other days.

If America is to be preserved to her children as the inheritance of freedom and justice, as transmitted from the fathers who founded the republic of Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton, we need to be restored to the doctrines of Douglas and Lincoln, which followed the sacred path of Washington, as he proclaimed, in his farewell message:

“Peace with all nations;
Entangling alliances with none.
Here, upon this rock, we build our church!”

(Applause.)

The last thought which shall engage my attention in this casual survey of this distinguished gentleman shall be that of “Patriot,” and that splendid loyalty which he bore to his country—as his country!

It may have been, gentlemen of Illinois, that he must forego the hope of political elevation; it may be that he bade good-bye to those flattering huzzas that come from an admiring multitude; it may be that he kissed farewell to many ambitions and opportunities that his heart cherished and his soul desired, for the good of his country, and his sincerity as a patriot.

Here was a man big enough to realize that while there could be personal defeat for him, through such defeat there could be victory for that which was beyond and superior to him—his country!

His was the creed of the dictator of Tripoli: “My country! May she be right! But, right or wrong, my country!”

Oh, how well he upheld the constitution! He saw the prospect of war, and he realized what it meant to this Union. He did all he could to avert it. Indoors and out, he spoke of its possibilities. In public places and in private chambers, he inveighed against those who sought to bring on disaster. With every expression of his life, he cried for peace and justice, but when the hour came that was inevitable, in his vision he saw two great things, the fleets mowed down, desolation in the cities, the tramp of soldiery breaking upon the ear, mothers hugging their babes to their bosoms, baptizing their faces to the falling tears, as the first born had fallen upon the hills.

He realized it was war! There was but one place for him, and that was the Temple of the Republic. There he hastened, in great anxiety for his country

He was a citizen of Illinois! He was the compatriot of Lincoln! He was the devoted son of the constitution, and it was in that hour that the splendor of his character rose above every form of hostile accusation.

Still we behold him, tonight, in the retrospect, sweet and gentle with it all!

Gentlemen, I can possibly appreciate more fully the situation than many of you who honor me with your audience.

I recognize that with these distinguished speakers who preceded me, we accord to all men tonight that, that which they did, and that which they said, came from the heart that beat within them, came from the soul of duty, as it was defined by every impulse of patriotism!

I come from that borderland, where on a thousand hills a mother kissed her two sons goodbye, and sent them off with her tears upon their cheeks, one to die for his country, the other to fall for his home!

Blessed be he that speaketh from his heart! Tonight we pray for all, in common, and pray they rest in heaven together. I therefore speak of them as one who speaks of the common country preserved. I delight tonight to feel that the sons of those who battled together are once again re-united.

There is no division within us, either upon the theory of government, or upon the doctrines of the constitution.

We stand again with Lincoln and Douglas, and as my friend, Judge Sherman correctly said, if there be conditions in this republic that now shadow us with some dire tomorrow, discretion bids us be careful lest we exercise too much liberty in the definition, that there shall be the days to come which are feared by some, that the great advancing America may be on the eve of an unnecessary conflict involving her people.

If the tomorrows are fraught with mystery, and the days to come uncertain, we have a remedy to avoid the results, if these portend danger.

Let us feel that tomorrow is secure within the patriotism of American citizenship.

Let us feel within the revival of the Love of the Father in Heaven, the home on earth, and mankind around us, we have our own solution; and as the sentry of the passing years, paces his rounds upon the watch tower of civilization, again shall ring out the challenge:

"Watchman, what of the night?"

Heaven grant that out of the reunited hearts of these Americans, there will come again the response:

"All restored, again, to the faith of Lincoln and Douglas. Thank God! All is well!" (Applause.)

I thank you!

GOVERNOR DUNNE.

Before dispersing, ladies and gentlemen, we will conclude the services by hearing from the Apollo Quartette.

Music.

THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1913, 10:00 O'CLOCK A. M.

Senate met pursuant to adjournment.

Hon. Barratt O'Hara, Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate, presiding.

Prayer by the Chaplain.

The President of the Senate announced that he had examined the Journal of yesterday and found no corrections or changes to be made, and if the Senate had no changes or corrections to offer, the Journal would be ordered to stand approved. No corrections being offered, the Journal was ordered to stand approved.

Hon. Robert D. Douglas, of North Carolina, grandson of Stephen A. Douglas, who was sitting with the President of the Senate was called upon by the Senate for a few remarks, to which response he gracefully responded.

PRESENTATION OF RESOLUTIONS BY UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

By unanimous consent, Mr. Denvir offered the following resolution:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION NO. 39.

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring therein, That the thanks of the Forty-eighth General Assembly be and are hereby extended to the committee of the General Assembly for the able and efficient manner of conducting the exercises in commemoration of the Centennial Anniversary of the birth of Stephen A. Douglas on the 23d day of April, 1913.

Further resolved, That we extend to the Hon. Robert D. Douglas, the Hon. James A. Reid, the Hon. James Hamilton Lewis, the Hon. Lawrence Y. Sherman, the Hon. William L. Davidson and the Hon. Everett Jennings, our sincere gratitude for the sacrifice made by each and every one of them in assisting the said celebration to be successful in every respect by their attendance and participation in such ceremonies.

Further resolved, That a copy of this resolution, attested by the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives be forwarded to each and every one of the participants in such celebration conveying our appreciation to them.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Denvir, the rules were suspended and the resolution was taken up for immediate consideration and, on his motion, was adopted.

A message from the House by Mr. Eden, Assistant Clerk:

Mr. President—I am directed to inform the Senate that the House of Representatives has concurred with the Senate in the adoption of the following joint resolution, to wit:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 28.

Resolved, by the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring herein, That a commission of nine members be and is hereby established to be known as the Commission on Unemployment of the State of Illinois. The members of said commission shall be appointed by the Governor as soon as practicable after the taking effect of this resolution and shall consist of three representatives of labor, three representatives of employers of labor, and three representatives of the public who are not identified with either the employing or employed classes. Each member of said commission shall have equal authority, power and voting strength in considering and acting upon all matters considered by the commission.

The said commission shall have power and authority to investigate the subject of unemployment of Illinois, together with the causes leading thereto, and the effect of such idleness upon the commonwealth and its citizenship.

Said commission shall meet at the State Capitol building in Springfield, on the third Tuesday after notice of their appointment, and shall immediately elect a chairman and secretary from among their number, one of whom shall be an employer and the other a representative of the employees.

Six members of the commission shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but a fewer number than a quorum may adjourn the meeting of the commission from time to time.

The meeting of said commission shall be held at such times and places within the State of Illinois as may be fixed by the said commission.

Said commission shall report to the Governor and to the General Assembly at its regular session, submitting, so far as they have agreed, a bill or bills or other means destined to meet the purpose announced in this resolution.

The commission may employ such necessary assistants as it deems wise and expedient in pursuit of its investigation and shall fix their salaries.

The commission shall be allowed its necessary and actual expenses incurred in pursuit of its investigations out of any moneys appropriated for the purpose upon presentation of proper vouchers certified to by the chairman and secretary of said commission and approved by the Governor.

Concurred in by the House, April 23, 1913.

B. H. McCANN,
Clerk of the House.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

A message from the House by Mr. Eden, Assistant Clerk:

Which was read at large April 23, 1913, and was taken up for consideration. The pending question being, "Shall the following amendments offered by Mr. Hurburgh, April 23, 1913, be adopted?" it was decided in the affirmative:

Strike the title of bill and insert:

A BILL.

For an Act to amend section 1 of Article 1 of an Act entitled, "An Act regulating the holding of elections and declaring the result thereof in cities, villages and incorporated towns in this State," approved June 19, 1885, in force July 1, 1885, as amended by an Act approved June 18, 1891, in force July 1, 1891, approved April 24, 1899, in force July 1, 1899, as amended by Act approved April 24, 1903, in force July 1, 1903.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the People of the State of Illinois represented in the General Assembly: That section 1 of Article 1 of "An Act regulating the holding of elections and declaring the result thereof in cities, villages and incorporated towns in this State," approved June 19, 1885, in force July 1, 1885, as amended by Act approved April 24, 1899, in force July 1, 1899, as amended by Act approved June 18, 1891, in force July 1, 1891, as amended by Act approved May 16, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, be and the same is hereby amended so as to read as follows, to wit:

Section 1. That the electors of any city having a population of not over fifty thousand inhabitants now existing in this State, may adopt and become entitled to the benefits of this Act, in the manner following:

Whenever one thousand of the legal voters of such city voting at the last preceding election shall petition the judge of the county court of the county in which such city is located, to submit to a vote of the electors of such city the proposition as to whether such city and the electors thereof shall adopt and become entitled to the benefits of this Act, it shall be the duty of such county court to submit such proposition accordingly at the next succeeding general State, county or municipal election; and if such proposition is not adopted at such election, the same shall in like manner be submitted to a vote of the electors of such city by said county court upon a like application at any general State, county or municipal election thereafter, and an order shall be entered of record in such court submitting such proposition as aforesaid. If one thousand shall exceed one-eighth of the legal voters of any such city voting at the last preceding election, then such petition or application need not be signed or made by more than one-eighth of the legal voters of such city voting at the last preceding election.

At any time after this Act has been adopted if one thousand of the legal voters of such city voting at the last preceding election shall petition the judge of the county court of the county in which such city is located to submit to a vote of the electors of such city the proposition as to whether such city and the electors thereof shall reject and no longer become entitled to the benefits of this Act, it shall be the duty of such county court to submit such proposition accordingly at the next succeeding general State, county or municipal election, but such proposition shall not be submitted oftener than once in two years.

If one thousand shall exceed one-eighth of the legal voters of any such city voting at the last preceding election then said petition or application need not be signed or made by more than one-eighth of the legal voters voting at the last preceding election. The form of ballot shall be as provided in section 3 of this Act.

If a majority of the votes cast at such election upon the proposition shall be "Against city election law," then this Act shall no longer be applicable to such city, but all elections shall thereafter be held as provided by law for cities, villages or towns wherein elections are not carried on under this Act.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

A BILL.

For an Act to amend Chapter 32 of the Revised Statutes of Illinois, being "An Act concerning corporations," approved April 18, 1872, in force July 1, 1872, by adding thereto three sections to be known as 28½a, 28½b, 28½c, regulating the time for the payment of wages by corporations, and providing penalties for violations thereof.

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

That an Act to amend Chapter 32 of the Revised Statutes of Illinois, being "An Act concerning corporations," approved April 18, 1872, in force July 1, 1872, be amended by adding thereto three sections to be known as 28½a, 28½b, 28½c, regulating the time for the payment of wages by corporations, and providing penalties for violations thereof.

Sec. 28½a. That every corporation for pecuniary profit doing business or which hereafter shall do business in the State of Illinois, shall, on or before the first day of each month, pay the employees thereof the wages earned by them during the first half of the preceding calendar month ending with the fifteenth day thereof, and on or before the fifteenth day of each month pay the employees thereof the wages earned by them during the last half of the preceding calendar month: Provided, however, that if at any time of payment any employee for any reason shall not receive his or her wages in person or through a duly authorized representative, or any employee shall be discharged or shall voluntarily leave his or her employment, he or she shall be entitled to said payment at any time thereafter upon three days' demand upon the proper employer at the place where such wages are usually paid, but if no such demand is made said payment shall be made at the time when, and place where the next pay is due; and any such corporation coming within the meaning of this Act which shall intentionally violate any of the provisions of this Act shall forfeit and pay not to exceed the sum of twenty-five dollars for each violation of this Act which shall be proved, to be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction: Provided, further, that suit for such violation shall be commenced within sixty days from the date such wages become payable according to the provisions of this Act.

Sec. 28½b. It shall not be lawful for any such corporation coming within the meaning of this Act to enter into or make any agreement with any employee for the payment of wages of such employee otherwise than as provided for in section one of this Act except that it be to pay such wages at shorter intervals than herein provided. Any part of any agreement made in violation of this Act shall be deemed null and void, and it shall not be a defense to the suit for the penalty provided for in section one of this Act; and each and every employee of any corporation coming within the meaning of this Act shall have his or her action and right of action against any such corporation for the full amount of his or her wages due on each regular pay day as herein provided in any court of competent jurisdiction of this State.

Sec. 28½c. Each and every failure or refusal to pay each employee the amount of wages due him or her at the time or under the conditions required in section one of this Act shall constitute a separate violation of this Act.

The question being, "Shall the report of, and the amendments reported from said committee be adopted?" it was decided in the affirmative.

PRESENTATION OF RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Jones offered the following resolution:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 40.

WHEREAS, The expenditures of the State of Illinois are increasing annually at a rapid rate;

WHEREAS, The experiences of the United States of several states and of numerous cities has shown the practical possibility of reducing such burdens on the tax-payer by putting into effect business organization and methods; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring therein, That there be appointed a joint committee of eight (8), composed of four (4) Senators and four (4) Representatives, which shall have full power and authority to make a comprehensive inquiry into the expenditures, organization and operation of all departments of the State government.

Resolved, That the committee shall have full power and authority to subpoena witnesses and to examine into and compel the production of books, papers and documents.

Resolved, That the committee shall have full power to employ investigators, accountants, efficiency experts, attorneys, stenographers and such other assistants as they may deem necessary and proper for the purpose of this inquiry.

Resolved, That the expenses of said committee and employees shall be paid out of an appropriation made therefor by the General Assembly upon vouchers properly drawn upon the Auditor of Public Accounts, properly itemized and signed and approved by the chairman and secretary of the joint committee. The committee shall report its findings and recommendations as to methods whereby the financial system of the State may be strengthened and the taxpayers' burdens diminished, and appropriate bills or measures for securing the same, to the Forty-ninth General Assembly of the State of Illinois.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Jones, the rules were suspended and the foregoing resolution was taken up for immediate consideration, and on his motion, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 41.

WHEREAS, In American history there is no nobler or greater name than that of Abraham Lincoln; and,

WHEREAS, The Illinois State Good Roads Association, the National Good Roads Association, the International Good Roads and Automobile Association, and many other organizations of Illinois have unanimously urged the construction of a national Lincoln Memorial highway connecting Washington City with the capital of each state in the Union; therefore,

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring, That it is the sense of these bodies that such a memorial road would be, to millions of people, a daily reminder of him whose greatest ambition was to serve his fellow men, as well as providing a comprehensive system of national roads which would be an almost inconceivable source of wealth to our country.

Resolved, That we hereby request our United States Senators and members of its national House of Representatives to do all they can consistently to secure such action by Congress as will make such memorial road a reality.

Resolved, further, That the Secretary of State is hereby directed to transmit copies of this memorial to Congress, to the presiding officers of each of the legislatures of the several states requesting a similar action.

At 12:27 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Clark, the Senate resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the matter of John Hill, Jr., as provided for Senate Resolution No. 57.

At 12:38 o'clock p. m., Mr. Dailey, from the Committee of the Whole, made the following report, which report, on his motion, was adopted by the Senate:

Your committee appointed pursuant to Senate Resolution No. 57 to investigate certain charges made by one John Hill, Jr., of Chicago, respecting Senate Bill 126, known as the Board of Trade Bill, report as follows:

Your committee examined under oath in committee of the whole of the Senate the following witnesses, to wit: John Hill, Jr., Robert McDougall, Charles D. Pierce, A. J. White, John H. Jones, Arthur G. Delaney, John E. Bellot.

Your committee finds that said Hill wrote and circulated a letter under date of April 5, 1913, cleverly devised to create the impression by innuendo that a corruption fund had been raised by certain members of the Chicago Board of Trade and that certain members of the General Assembly had been corruptly influenced to vote for said bill; that said letter was so phrased and given to the press for the purpose of creating a sensation to thereby defeat the passage of said bill not upon its merits, but by directing prejudice and suspicion upon said bill. That said Hill admitted under oath that he had no knowledge of corrupt influence upon any member of the General Assembly with respect to said bill; that he knew that a fund had been raised in behalf of said bill and named certain members of the Board of Trade who had knowledge of said fund, but knew of no improper or illegal use of said fund. That certain witnesses testified to the collection of a fund of $4,250.00, in amounts ranging from $100.00 to $250.00 from members of the Board of Trade for the purpose of aiding the passage of said bill, the names of which members were divulged to your committee. That said fund was contributed upon the express written stipulation that no part thereof should be used for improper or illegal purposes; that $1,736.38 of said fund had already been expended as appears from the facts in evidence for purposes which your committee finds to be proper and lawful; that no part of said fund was expended for the purpose of improperly influencing the vote of any member of the General Assembly in behalf of said bill. That the conduct of said Hill in circulating said false reports suggesting by innuendo the corrupt use of said fund, is reprehensible and should be condemned; that it was an attempt to cast discredit upon certain members of the Board of Trade, who as the evidence shows were honorable and upright members of that body, proceeding in a lawful and open manner to further the passage of the legislation in which they were interested, and moreover, to cast discredit upon the members of the Senate who had voted for said bill without any facts whatever tending to show that any member of the Senate had been improperly influenced to vote for said bill.

Your committee further reports in view of the opinion of the Attorney General herein, that there is some doubt whether said Hill can be punished for the circulation of said letter prior to the appearance of said Hill at the bar of the Senate, but that any repetition of such practices by said Hill can be punished as contempt of the Senate, and your committee would recommend that said Hill in case he shall persist in such improper practices, be forthwith brought before the bar of this Senate, and summarily punished for contempt.

JOHN DAILEY,
WALTER CLYDE JONES,
JOHN M. O'CONNOR.

Mr. Clark entered a motion (a notice of which he gave on yesterday) to reconsider the vote whereby Senate Bill No. 207, a bill for "An Act to regulate the hours of labor of city employees in cities whose population exceeds one hundred thousand," failed to pass on yesterday.

PRESENTATION OF RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Cleary offered the following resolution, which, under Rule 39, was laid on the table for one day:

SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 62.

WHEREAS, Senate Bill No. 194, known as the County Option Bill, was introduced on February 27, and on that day referred to the Committee on License and Miscellany, in whose possession it now is; and,

WHEREAS, Said bill is one of very general interest throughout the State, and considerations of its provisions by this body is earnestly desired by very many of our citizens; and,

WHEREAS, Its provisions, if enacted into law, will in no way affect any county or community in this State, unless they are made applicable to such county by a majority of all the votes cast at an election in such county, at which the adoption of said law has been submitted, in accordance with a petition signed by not less than 20 per cent of the registered voters of such county; and,

WHEREAS, The enactment of said bill into law would be but arranging for a practical application of the legislative provision, endorsed by all political organizations in the State, known as the "Initiative and Referendum;" and,

WHEREAS, Action by said committee tending to advance said bill at the session of said committee on April 9th, last, was deferred and opposed only by votes of Senators from Peoria and Cook Counties and by none others—Peoria being the well known center of the distillery interests of the United States, and Chicago being the home of the National Liquor League and the United Societies—and in opposition to the request of all members of the said committee from other sections of the State, by a vote of seven to six, two down-state Senators being absent—six of the seven votes constituting a majority—being from Cook County and one from Peoria County; and,

WHEREAS, It is not conducive to due consideration of proposed legislation that two counties of the State, whose domestic regulations, in all probability, will never or at all, be disturbed by the passage of such legislation, should be permitted to deny or delay consideration to a proposed measure, in which the remaining one hundred counties of the State are deeply interested; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Senate Bill Number 194, be and is hereby recalled from said committee, and the Chairman of said Committee on License and Miscellany be and is hereby directed to return, forthwith, said Senate Bill number 194 to be and is hereby directed to return, forthwith, said Senate Bill Number 194 to the possession of the Secretary of the Senate; and, be it further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate is hereby directed to place said Senate Bill Number 194 on the Senate Calendar on the order of first reading.

Mr. Jones, from the Committee on Rules, offered the following resolution:

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 63.

Resolved, That Rule '61 be, and is hereby amended so that the first three items of the general order of business shall be as follows:

1. Messages from the House of Representatives.
2. Reading bills of the Senate the second time.
3. Reading bills of the Senate the third time.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Jones, the resolution was taken up for immediate consideration and, on his motion, was adopted.

READING BILLS OF THE SENATE THE SECOND TIME.

On motion of Mr. Magill, Senate Bill No. 154, a bill for "An Act to empower the board of supervisors in counties under township organization, and county commissioners in counties not under township organization, to appropriate county funds to employ, or to assist in employing a county consulting agriculturist, and to defray or assist in defraying, the expenses connected therewith, for the purpose of the conservation of soil fertility and the improvement of agricultural conditions generally,"

Which was recalled on April 16, 1913, from the order of third reading to the order of second reading for amendment, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Magill offered the following amendment to the bill, which was adopted:

AMENDMENTS TO SENATE BILL No. 154.

Amend Senate Bill No. 154 by striking out all after line 3 of printed bill and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "commissioners in counties not under township organization, to employ, or to assist in employing, a county consulting agriculturist, and to appropriate funds from the county treasury to defray, or to assist in defraying, the expenses connected therewith, for the purpose of the conservation of soil fertility and the improvement of agricultural conditions generally: Provided, That there shall be in such county a legally incorporated organization, or association, the purpose of which shall be the conservation of soil fertility and the improvement of agricultural conditions generally: And, provided, further, That no person shall be so employed who does not have a certificate of qualifications, approved by the Dean of the College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois, certifying that he is qualified for the position of consulting agriculturist in said county."

Section 2. It shall be the duty of the county consulting agriculturist of each county before entering upon his duties to prepare a plan of work and procedure, and to submit such plan to the College of Agriculture of the University of Illinois for its approval. He shall also forward to the College of Agriculture as soon as published copies of all bulletins and other articles or reports prepared by him for publication, and shall make such additional reports to the said College of Agriculture, as shall be from time to time required by it.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Magill, Senate Bill No. 355, a bill for "An Act to provide for the certification of teachers,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time.

Mr. Magill offered the following amendment to the bill, which was adopted:

Amend Senate Bill No. 355, by striking out all after section two and insert the following:

"Section 3. A life certificate—At the time of its expiration upon evidence of successful teaching or supervision satisfactory to the Superintendent of Public Instruction any four year State certificate enumerated in this Act," shall become valid and be endorsed for life. The validity of State certificates now in force and those issued in accordance with this Act, shall be conditioned upon the good behavior of the holder.

Sec. 4. Examinations for State certificates shall be held at such times and places and under such rules as may be prescribed by the Superintendent of Public Instruction. To each person who is successful in the examination for a State certificate the Superintendent of Public Instruction shall issue a certificate of the kind applied for, if in his judgment the personality of such applicant and his general qualifications other than scholarship fit him for the work which the certificate would authorize him to perform.

Sec. 5. A life certificate shall be forfeited three years after the person to whom it is issued ceases to engage in educational work unless its life shall have been extended within that time by the Superintendent of Public Instruction. The holder of any State certificate, while he continues to teach, shall annually before entering upon his duties, present his certificate to the county superintendent for registration and pay a fee of one dollar for the same, which fee shall be covered into the institute fund.

State certificates in force at the time of the passage of this Act shall not have the term of their validity impaired. State elementary certificates shall be valid for teaching in the elementary schools, State high school certificates for teaching in the high schools and State supervisory and general certificates for supervision and teaching in the schools supervised.

Sec. 6. County certificates granted by the county superintendent and the requirements for the same shall be as follows:

First—A third grade elementary school certificate, valid for one year in the first eight grades of the common schools of the county in which it is issued and in no other county. This certificate shall be renewable once only and on evidence satisfactory to the county superintendent of three months' successful teaching or six weeks' professional training. Applicants for this certificate shall be examined in orthography, civics, Illinois history, physiology, penmanship, reading, grammar, geography, United States history, arithmetic, and the principles and methods of the State course of study. This certificate shall not be issued the second time to the same person.

At the option of the county superintendent this certificate may be issued without examination to persons who have successfully completed two years of work in a recognized normal school, or one year of such work if the applicant is a graduate of the tenth grade.

Second—A second grade elementary school certificate valid for two years in the first eight grades of the common schools of the county and in the ninth and tenth grades when endorsed for the same by the county superintendent. This certificate shall be renewable on evidence satisfactory to the county superintendent of six months' successful teaching or twelve weeks' professional training, and a second time if in the period following the date of issue the holder shall have acquired eighteen weeks' professional training in any recognized school providing such training. The applicant for this certificate shall be examined in orthography, civics, Illinois history, physiology, penmanship, reading, grammar, geography, United States history, arithmetic, elementary science, pedagogy, and the principles and methods of the State course of study.

At the option of the county superintendent this certificate may be issued without examination to persons who have completed the junior years' work in a recognized normal school, or its equivalent.

Third—A first grade elementary school certificate, valid for three years in the first ten grades of the common schools of the county, and in the high school when endorsed for the same by the county superintendent. This certificate shall be renewable indefinitely for periods of three years, upon evidence of successful teaching and professional growth satisfactory to the county superintendent.

The requirements for this form of certificate shall be: (1) Graduation from a recognized high school, or an equivalent preparation; (2) six months of successful teaching, and (3) an examination in orthography, including spelling, civics, Illinois history, physiology, penmanship, reading, grammar, geography, United States history, arithmetic, pedagogy, English, algebra, general history, and any three of the following natural sciences: Botany, zoology, physics, chemistry, and physiography. This certificate shall be issued to graduates of a recognized normal school, or from an institution offering an equivalent preparation, provided the applicant has had one year of successful practice teaching, and applies for the certificate within three years after graduation.

Fourth—A high school certificate, valid for three years in the high schools of the county. This certificate shall be renewable indefinitely for periods of three years on evidence satisfactory to the county superintendent of successful teaching or supervision and professional growth.

The requirements for this form of certificate shall be: (1) Graduation from a recognized high school, or an equivalent preparation; (2) a certificate showing the completion of at least two years' successful work in any recognized higher institution of learning, and (3) an examination in English, pedagogy, and six high school subjects, three majors and three minors, chosen from a list prescribed by the certificating board hereinafter provided for: Provided, however, that graduates of a recognized normal school, college or university may offer within three years after graduation, certified credits in lieu of examination in the above subjects accompanied by faculty recommendations of ability to teach in the high school.

Fifth—A supervisory certificate, valid for three years for supervisory work in any district in the county and for teaching in the schools supervised by the holder. This certificate shall be renewable for three year periods on satisfactory evidence of successful teaching or supervision, and of professional growth. The requirements for this certificate shall be: (1) Graduation from a recognized high school and at least two years' work in a recognized higher institution, one of which shall have been in a normal school, or an equivalent preparation; (2) two years' successful teaching or supervision, and (3) a successful examination in English, educational psychology, the history of education, and school administration.

Sixth—A kindergarten primary certificate, valid for two years in any kindergarten and in the first two grades of the common schools of the county, providing the kindergarten training school of which the applicant is a graduate gives adequate preparation for the first two grades of work. This certificate shall be renewable for two year periods on evidence of successful teaching satisfactory to the county superintendent.

The requirements for this form of certificate shall be graduation from a recognized high school and from a recognized kindergarten training school, or the completion of an equivalent course; or in lieu of graduation from such training school, such examination in English, and the theory and practice of kindergarten and primary work as may be prescribed by the certificating board.

Seventh—A special certificate, valid for two years in the common schools of the county, renewable for two year periods. Such certificate shall be issued in music, drawing, agriculture, manual training, domestic science, domestic art, physical training, penmanship, bookkeeping, German, and such other subjects as may be added by the certificating board and shall authorize the holder to teach only the subject or subjects named in the certificate.

The requirements or this form of certificate shall be graduation from a recognized high school, or an equivalent preparation, and a certificate showing the completion in a recognized higher institution of learning of at least two years' special training, and an examination in English and the principles and methods of teaching, and satisfactory evidence that the applicant has taught or can teach such subjects successfully.

Sec. 7. The county superintendent is hereby authorized to issue a third grade elementary certificate to persons of his or other counties who fall below the required average, but the number of such certificates issued in any one year shall not exceed ten per cent of the number of teachers employed in his county. Such certificates shall be designated on their face, "Provisional," and the same shall not be renewable or issued the second time to the same person.

The county superintendent is also authorized to issue at any time, upon evidence satisfactory to himself, that the applicant possesses the prerequisites and qualifications for such certificate, a county certificate of any grade, such certificate to be designated on its face, "Emergency." This certificate shall be valid only until the next regular examination, and in the county of issue.

Third grade and second grade certificates are valid for teaching only. A first grade certificate is valid for supervision in all positions where the principal or superintendent teaches one-half or more of the time.

County certificates issued without examination as herein provided shall have that fact stated on the certificate and a certified copy of credits shall be filed with the application.

Sec. 8. For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act with regard to county certificates there is hereby created an examining board to consist of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, who shall be ex officio chairman, one person who is engaged in educational work, to be appointed by him for a term of four years, and three county superintendents, each to serve for three years one to be appointed annually by the Superintendent of Public Instruction upon the recommendation of the county superintendents' section of the State Teachers' Association at its annual meeting. The first year of the terms of the members of the board shall end on January 1, following the going into effect of this Act. The necessary traveling expenses of the board and such other expenses as are necessary in carrying out the provisions of this Act shall be provided through the State Department of Education. The Superintendent of Public Instruction shall have the power to fill vacancies until the next annual meeting of the State Teachers' Association. If a member of this board ceases to be a county superintendent he ceases to be a member of the board.

Examinations for county certificates shall be held at the various county seats on the same day at least three times each year and under such rules as may be prescribed by the examining board. Questions for each examination shall be uniform throughout the State and shall be prepared by said board and forwarded to the county superintendents under seal, to be broken only at the time of opening the examination and in the presence of the applicants. The county superintendent shall conduct the examination in his county, and at the close of the same shall forward all papers to the examining board.

The grades shall be returned to the county superintendent, who shall issue the certificate of the kind designated to each applicant in his county who has passed the examination, if in his judgment the personality of such applicant and his general qualifications other than scholarship, fit him for the work which the certificate would authorize him to perform. The papers shall be kept on file for six months for reference by the applicant or the county superintendent.

Sec. 9. A first and second grade elementary school certificate, a high school certificate, a supervisory certificate, a kindergarten-primary certificate, or a special certificate, shall be valid in the county of issue, and in any county of the State when endorsed by the county superintendent of such county upon evidence of successful teaching, certified by the county superintendents in whose county the teaching has been done. A certificate shall not be renewable until its expiration or within sixty days thereafter, and no certificate shall be renewed except at the option of the superintendent issuing or endorsing it and on evidence satisfactory to such superintendent of successful teaching and professional growth.

Sec. 10. An applicant for a certificate who has not completed a high school course, when such is required, shall be admitted to a preliminary examination, set by the examining board, on subjects announced in advance, for the purpose of determining whether such applicant possesses an equivalent preparation.

Sec. 11. Any person who holds, at the time this Act goes into effect, a valid county certificate, may, with the approval of the county superintendent exchange the same for a certificate of equal grade—a second grade for a second grade elementary; a first grade for a first grade elementary; a high school, or supervisory county certificate; a special certificate for a special certificate.

Sec. 12. In the examination of teachers for certificates higher than those which they shall have received in exchange for certificates in force when this Act goes into effect, and in the renewal of their certificates successful experience in teaching or supervision shall be accepted as an equivalent for high school and professional training.

Sec. 13. Every applicant for a county certificate shall pay a fee of one dollar for each examination. All county certificates shall be annually registered and endorsed, and a fee of one dollar shall be charged for the same.

Sec. 14. Any person who shall sell, barter, trade, or give away, or offer to sell, barter, trade, or give away, to applicants for teachers' certificates or to any other person, or any person who shall buy, purchase bargain or trade for or accept, any of the questions prepared for the examination of teachers, or in any way dispose of or accept any of such questions, in violation of the rules prescribed by the certifying board, or any person who shall reveal or give information which shall reveal the identity of any writer of an examination paper, shall, on conviction, be fined not less than $25 nor more than $100.

Sec. 15. By the word "recognized," as used in this Act in connection with the word "school," "college," or "university" is meant such school, college or university as maintains an equipment, course of study and standard of scholarship approved by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, or the examining board according to the certificate to which it pertains. The term "equivalent preparation," as used in this Act, shall be interpreted and determined by the Superintendent of Public Instruction or the examining board, according to the certificate to which it pertains.

Sec. 16. The first year of all certificates shall expire on June 30 following the date of issue. Certificates earned in May or June shall be dated July 1, following.

Sec. 17. Any certificate issued under this Act may be suspended by either the county superintendent or Superintendent of Public Instruction upon evidence of immorality, incompetency, unprofessional conduct, or other just cause, and revoked for the same reasons by the superintendent issuing it. When a certificate is suspended by the superintendent not issuing the same the right of appeal shall lie to the issuing superintendent. When an appeal is taken within ten days after notice of suspension it shall act as a stay of proceedings for a period not to exceed sixty days. Refusal to attend, participate in, or an indifferent or antagonistic attitude toward institutes, teachers' meetings, professional reading, or other reasonable requirements of the county or State superintendent, including the making of statistical and other reports, may be considered as unprofessional conduct.

Sec. 18. Under the rules of the certifying board provision may be made for granting certificates of a lower grade than the one applied for, when so requested by the applicant, and also for giving credit toward higher certificates for grades recorded upon lower certificates.

An applicant for a county certificate may write in any county and apply for a certificate in another county.

Sec. 19. When a person applies for his first county or State certificate he shall file as reference to character, the names of three competent persons.

Sec. 20. The Superintendent of Public Instruction may recognize and honor any State certificate of another state obtained under conditions similar to those in Illinois.

The county superintendent of schools may recognize and honor any certificate of another state obtained under conditions similar to those in Illinois, under such rules as may be prescribed by the examining board; except that certificates the equivalent of the third grade elementary and second grade elementary certificates described in this Act shall not be subject to recognition.

Sec. 21. Sections 176, 177, 178 and 180 of an Act entitled, "An Act to establish and maintain a system of free schools," approved and in force June 12, 1909, and any other section, Act or parts of Acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

Sec. 22. This Act shall take effect and be in force on and after July 1, 1914.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

(Filed May 28, 1907, in force July 1, 1907)."

Was recalled from the order of third reading to the order of second reading for amendment.

Mr. Juul offered the following amendments to the bill, which were adopted:

AMENDMENT No. 1.

Strike out all after the words: "A Bill," in the title, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

For an Act to amend section 10 of an Act entitled, "An Act defining motor vehicles and providing for the registration of the same and of motor bicycles, and uniform rules regulating the use and speed thereof; prohibiting the use of motor vehicles without the consent of the owner and the offer or acceptance of any bonus or discount or other consideration for the purchase of supplies or parts for any such motor vehicle or for work or repairs done thereon by others, and defining chauffeurs and providing for the examination and licensing thereof and to repeal certain Acts therein named" approved June 10, 1911, in force July 1, 1911.

Strike out all after the enacting clause in section 1 and insert in lieu thereof the following: That section 10 of an Act entitled:

"An Act defining motor vehicles and providing for the registration of the same and of motor bicycles, and uniform rules regulating the use and speed thereof; prohibiting the use of motor vehicles without the consent of the owner and the offer or acceptance of any bonus or discount or other consideration for the purchase of supplies or parts of any such motor vehicle or for work or repairs done thereon by others, and defining chauffeurs and providing for the examination and licensing thereof, and to repeal certain Acts therein named," approved June 10, 1911, in force July 1, 1911. Be and the same is hereby amended to read as follows:

Section 10. No person shall drive a motor vehicle or motor bicycle upon any public highway in this State at a speed greater than is reasonable and proper having regard to the traffic and the use of the way or so as to endanger the life or limb or injure the property of any person. If the rate of speed of any motor vehicle or motor bicycle operated upon any public highway in this State where the same passes through the closely built up business portions of any incorporated city, town or village exceeds ten (10) miles an hour or if the rate of speed of any motor vehicle or motor bicycle operated on any public highway in this State where the same passes through the residence portions of any incorporated city, town or village, exceeds fifteen (15) miles an hour or if the rate of speed of any motor vehicle or motor bicycle operated on [a] public highway in this State outside of the closely built up business portions and the residence portions within any incorporated city, town or village exceeds twenty (20) miles miles an hour or upon any public highway outside of the limits of an incorporated city, town or village if the rate of speed exceeds twenty-five miles per hour, such rates of speed shall be prima facie evidence that the person operating such motor vehicle or motor bicycle is running at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable and proper having regard to the traffic and use of the way or so as to endanger the life or limb or injure the property of any person. If the rate of speed of a motor vehicle or motor bicycle operated on any public highway in this State in going around a corner or curve in a highway where the operator's view of the road traffic is obstructed exceeds six (6) miles an hour, such rate of speed shall be prima facie evidence that the person operating such motor vehicle or motor bicycle is running at a rate of speed greater than is reasonable having regard to the traffic and the use of the way or so as to endanger the life or limb or injure the property of any person.

Provided, further, that members of the medical profession while driving or being driven in any motor vehicle in the performance of their duty and while responding to any emergency call, shall not be subject to arrest for violation of this section unless such violation shall have resulted in an accident or collision.

CONSIDERATION OF RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Ettelson called up the following resolution offered by him on April 30, 1913:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 41.

WHEREAS, In American history there is no nobler or greater name than that of Abraham Lincoln; and

WHEREAS, The Illinois State Good Roads Association, the National Good Roads Association, the International Good Roads and Automobile Association, and many other organizations of Illinois have unanimously urged the construction of a national Lincoln memorial highway connecting Washington City with the capital of each state in the Union; therefore.

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of Illinois, the House of Representatives concurring, That it is the sense of these bodies that such a memorial road would be, to millions of people, a daily reminder of him whose greatest ambition was to serve his fellow men, as well as providing a comprehensive system of national roads which would be an almost inconceivable source of wealth to our country.

Resolved, That we hereby request our United States Senators and members of its national House of Representatives to do all they can consistently to secure such action by Congress as will make such memorial road a reality.

Resolved, further, That the Secretary of State is hereby directed to transmit copies of this memorial to Congress, to the presiding officers of each of the legislatures of the several states requesting a similar action.

On motion of Mr. Ettelson, the foregoing resolution was adopted.

At 12:10 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Hurburgh, the Senate adjourned.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

The President of the Senate made the following statement:

Will the Senate indulge the Chair on a personal matter?

Leave was granted. Governor O'Hara then said:

"A man enters public service with but one thing to preserve—his character and his reputation.

"In the Springfield Register of Thursday, May 1 appears the following article:

"I have an affidavit declared Sullivan last night. 'I want them to summon me so I will have the opportunity of laying this affidavit before the Senate. Tuesday afternoon Investigator Coan came to my office and said I was wanted at the session of the Senate at five o'clock that afternoon. I told him I was not only willing but anxious to appear, but for some reason the session adjourned without calling upon me.'

"Since the publication of this article the Chair has heard that a slanderous rumor has circulated reflecting upon the members of the Illinois Senate Welfare Commission, a body created by this Senate and acting for this Senate. We would most respectfully ask that the Senate summons forthwith Mr. Sullivan and that he be requested to bring any and all affidavits reflecting upon any members of this Commission and that he be brought before this Senate immediately.

"If Mr. Sullivan has any affidavit reflecting upon the Chair, the Chair would most respectfully request that he bring that affidavit first."

Senator Madigan—Who is Sullivan?

Governor O'Hara—Deputy Sheriff of Sangamon County.

Senator Ettelson—I make the motion that the Senate summons Mr. Sullivan.

Senator Hurburgh—I second the motion.

Governor O'Hara—The question is that Mr. Under-sheriff Sullivan be immediately summoned to appear together with any affidavits that he may possess. (Question put and carried.)

The Sergeant-at-arms will kindly summon Mr. Sullivan.

COMMUNICATIONS.

The Secretary read the following communication:

C. A. PURDUNN,
President Board of Prison Industries.

MARSHALL, ILL., April 30, 1913.

To the Honorable, the Senate of the State of Illinois:

GENTLEMEN—Senate Resolution No. 26, calling on me as President of the Board of Prison Industries, for certain information in reference to the employment of sales agents, has reached me too late to make answer. My membership on the board having terminated, by the appointment of my successor, April 30, 1913.

All information, however, required by the Senate, can be obtained at the office of sales manager, at his office in the State House.

For further information of the Senate, I wish to state that as President of the said board for the past ten years, I never appointed any sales agents.

Respectfully submitted,

C. A. PURDUNN.

PRESENTATION OF RESOLUTIONS BY UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

Mr. Hearn offered the following resolution:

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 66.

WHEREAS, On April 22, 1913, the following resolution was passed by the Senate:

Resolved, That the Chairman of the Board of Prison Industries be requested to send to the Senate, within ten days the names of all persons employed as sales agents by the board, during the last three years, together with the amount paid them and the amount of the sales made by each person, and the prison from which the articles sold were furnished; and,

WHEREAS, There has been no report in accordance with said resolution, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Clerk of the Board of Prison Industries be and is hereby directed to send to the Senate on or before Tuesday, May 13th, the information required in said resolution adopted on April 22, 1913.

WHEREAS, Under and by virtue of House Joint Resolution No. 26, of the Forty-seventh General Assembly, adopted by the House of Representatives on the 10th day of May, 1911, and concurred in by the Senate, with amendments, on the 18th day of May, 1911, a commission of ten members was appointed for the purpose of making a careful and exhaustive investigation of the questions of classification of physical conditions of property as a basis of fire insurance rates in the State of Illinois and to consider and arrange a codification of the insurance laws of the State of Illinois; and,

WHEREAS, Said Joint Resolution directed that said commission prepare its findings and present the same with its recommendations to the Governor of the State of Illinois and the Forty-eighth General Assembly of this State; and,

WHEREAS, Said insurance commission, because of the magnitude of the tasks before it which tasks involve a comparative study of the insurance laws of the principal states of the Union and also of the experiences of insurers and insured thereunder, is unable to present a complete report during this session of the Legislature and said commission should be given further time to finish its investigation, and complete a codification of the insurance laws of the State of Illinois; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring therein, That said insurance commission, be and it is hereby perpetuated, and the time given said commission for its investigation and for the codification of the insurance laws of the State of Illinois is hereby extended until the next regular session of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, at which time it is directed to make its report.

Adopted by the House, May 1, 1913.

B. H. McCANN,

Woodard,

Yeas—31.

On motion of Mr. Juul, the bill was recalled from the order of third reading to the order of second reading for the purpose of amendment.

Mr. Juul offered the following amendment to the bill, which was adopted:

Amend Senate Bill No. 327, by inserting in line 39, between the words "to" and "arrest" the word "immediate."

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

At 1:00 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Hurburgh, the Senate adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 7, 1913, 10:00 O'CLOCK A. M.

Senate met pursuant to adjournment.

Hon. Barratt O'Hara, Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate, presiding.

Prayer by the Chaplain.

The President of the Senate announced that he had examined the Journal of yesterday and found no corrections or changes to be made, and if the Senate had no changes or corrections to offer, the Journal would be ordered to stand approved. No corrections being offered, the Journal was ordered to stand approved.

The following message was received from the Governor, read, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

A message from the Governor by William L. Sullivan, Secretary to the Governor:

Mr. President—I am directed by the Governor to lay before the Senate the following communication:

STATE OF ILLINOIS,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
SPRINGFIELD.

Gentlemen of the Forty-eighth General Assembly:

I beg to transmit herewith reports of Frank S. Dickson, The Adjutant General, and Amos Sawyer, Acting Secretary of the State Board of Health, covering the protective, rescue, relief and sanitary work of the State in the flooded territory on the Ohio River.

These reports evidence at once the absolute necessity and the thoroughness and extent of the relief work. I invite your attention to the fact that in carrying on this work there were on active duty, twenty-four companies of the Illinois National Guard and three divisions of the Illinois Naval Reserve, rendering courageous and effective service in protecting levees, building bulk heads, filling and placing sand bags, and carrying relief to distressed persons.

Help was given to thousands of our citizens in thirty-one flooded sections through the establishment of twenty relief stations, from which food, clothing and tents were issued by methods which conserved the interests both of the State and of those organizations, societies and individuals that so generously forwarded aid, and which also fully met the equitable requirements of the flood sufferers.

The relief and sanitary work were so coördinated as to be doubly effective. I feel no stronger evidence may be presented of the dispatch and thoroughness with which their duty was performed by those having this work in charge than the statement that in the wide extent of devastation all possible disease epidemics were anticipated; no man, woman or child was permitted to suffer from hunger, or left without clothes or shelter; and not a single life was lost in the rising waters.

I am satisfied that the prompt and effective action of the State authorities in this matter prevented the loss of millions of dollars worth of property belonging to the citizens of Illinois.

The cost to the State is presented in the itemization prepared by The Adjutant General and transmitted in connection herewith, which may be summarized as follows:

Expenditures for protective, rescue, relief and sanitation in connection with the refugees, $65,118.99. Of this amount, itemized bills in the sum of $45,118.99 are in the hands of The Adjutant General, the remaining $20,000.00 being a carefully prepared estimate of the outstanding indebtedness, based upon computations of the different matters for which bills have not been received. I have received from various sources, voluntary donations, approximately $15,500.00 in flood relief subscriptions. The residue of this fund is approximately $13,600.00, leaving a balance of approximately $52,000.00 at present unprovided for.

Expenditures connected with the active service of the Illinois National Guard and Illinois Naval Reserve on flood duty were $81,647.68. The balance in the emergency fund at the inception of the flood was $23,356.56. This balance has been exhausted and there is an unpaid liability of $58,291.12.

I recommend that a bill be passed appropriating $52,000.00 or so much thereof as may be necessary for the purpose of defraying the indebtedness incurred on the part of the State in furnishing relief to flood sufferers.

I recommend the passage of a bill appropriating to the emergency fund of the Illinois National Guard and Illinois Naval Reserve, $58,291.12 to defray liabilities contracted by reason of the necessary use of the Military and Naval force in the protection of life and property in the flooded territory. In view of the fact that the liability above indicated has been contracted and is now unpaid, it is respectfully urged that the bills be passed with emergency clauses attached.

Respectfully submitted,

E. F. DUNNE,
Governor.

May 3, 1913.

SIR—With reference to recent flood rescue and relief work along the Illinois, Wabash, Mississippi and Ohio Rivers, and their tributaries, I have the honor to report that pursuant to your verbal orders on March 29th, I assumed control, under your direction, of this work in the flooded sections, cooperating, as directed by you, with Majors Normoyle and Logan, in charge of relief work, acting for and in behalf of the National Government.

Prior to leaving for Cairo, distribution of supplies, tentage and sacks for levee work has been made under your personal direction from this department. It appearing in your judgment advisable, because of repeated requests for assistance from the submerged towns along the Ohio and Wabash Rivers, which towns were impossible of being reached from this point because of the paralysis of railroad connection, that a base of distribution be established in the flooded section, I proceeded to Cairo on April 4th, boarding the Steamer "Illinois" at St. Louis, which had, in the interim, been loaded with provisions and supplies for relief. I arrived at Cairo 4:00 p. m., April 5th, and found the relief station operating at Cairo and proceeded immediately up the Ohio River to Mound City and Shawneetown where supplies and tentage for the destitute were discharged.

I beg to report that in the flooded districts of the State there were established twenty relief stations, which stations distributed tentage, clothing, underwear, shoes, stockings and rations to thirty-one different towns and districts. The list follows:

Illinois River Valley—Naples.

Mississippi—Sandusky, Unity.

Ohio—Ullin, Pulaski, Mounds, Cairo, Mound City, Golconda—Rose Bud, Tansill, New Brownfield—Rosiclare, Elizabethtown, Shawneetown—Five refugee camps—Junction, Equality.

Wabash Rivers—New Haven, Levi Slough, Little Chain Hills, East and West Dogtown, Maunie, Pond Hill, Epworth, Fox River District.

In addition to the above general supply stations, tentage, sacks for levees, and in some instances, supplies, were also distributed to Beardstown, Meredosia and Harrisburg.

At this point, may I suggest that in all flood work there is a natural division about as follows:

1. Defensive operation. This is where the people of a community, and in this instance bravely assisted by the National Guard and Naval Reserve of the State, engage in a desperate fight to hold the levees to prevent inundation of city or village.

2. The water getting beyond control; the establishment of tent camps on high land out of reach of water; the transfer of aged and sick men and women and children to this established place of safety and the general rescue work on the part of Naval Reserve throughout great stretches of bottoms, where entire families were marooned by sea of surrounding waters and in many instances, both the rescue and relief afforded them proved most timely.

3. The feeding of the people in these refugee camps and shortly after the establishment of same, the necessity of clothing, particularly the women and children.

4. Strict and proper sanitation in these camps to prevent the inception and spread of disastrous epidemics.

5. As the water begins to recede, the absolute necessity of scientific and persistent sanitation in submerged cities and villages as a preventative measure is obvious.

6. Rehabilitation: This includes assistance to the stricken people in resuming their normal avocations; assistance in repairing houses, seeding land, providing means whereby both in cities, villages and farming communities, an independent self respecting population, resentful of pauperizing methods, yet in dire need, may be assisted in such manner as will permit their earning a livelihood to support their families. This rehabilitation work, I understand, in conference with the representatives of the American Red Cross, is being actively taken up by them and that they propose to very thoroughly afford this rehabilitation relief.

In view of the tremendous task which the first casual trip up river impressed me, I suggested to your Excellency, the coöperation of representative of State Board of Health with me in the relief work. This suggestion was promptly acted upon by you, and Dr. Crawford, Chief Inspector of the State Board of Health, together with Mr. Hansen with his corps of water survey experts from University of Illinois, joined me at Cairo. Upon arriving at any given town, we would call a meeting of the mayor and city officials, including the health officers; a careful census of those needing relief would be made either by myself or an officer representing me; the judgment of the local authorities secured thereon, and a local relief committee named by the local authorities to act in an advisory capacity to the officer to whom I would issue the rations for distribution. This officer coöperating with the local authorities would open a commissary supply station, the local committee sitting with him in said advisory capacity, passing upon the legitimacy of relief requests. That fact having been determined, your representative would issue the requisite rations according to the issue table used by the Illinois National Guard and Naval Reserve. While this supply of rations was being unloaded, the water survey experts were testing the wells and cisterns of the town, if not wholly submerged, and the representative of the State Board of Health was making careful examination touching contagion, epidemic either in existence or prospective, and full and proper sanitary instructions given by said representative to the local authorities. After leaving any given point, a conference would be held by Mr. Hansen, Dr. Crawford and myself, touching this situation from the different viewpoint and the necessities of the locality, and prompt and active steps would then be taken to carry out the co-ordinated conclusions touching the situation. (I apprehended that detailed report on sanitary conditions will be contained in report of State Board of Health.)

In following this method, I feel that better and more thorough results to the local communities were given than could have otherwise been secured and a very necessary co-ordination and saving of time and energy obtained.

In general, I would say that to the best of our abilities those in the relief work acting constantly under your immediate direction, endeavoring to afford immediate and ample relief in the way of food supplies, clothing, tentage, vaccine, medicines, lime and other disinfectants for sanitary purposes throughout the entire flooded district, systematizing the whole, to the end that the interests that both the State and those contributing either money or supplies might be conserved, and the actual requirement of equitable distribution be had to the distressed people.

I desire also in this connection, to invite the attention of your Excellency to the magnificent response of civic organization throughout the State, particularly the Chicago Association of Commerce and Peoria Association of Commerce, each of which bodies sent several carloads of provisions, clothing and disinfectants for distribution and the many other associations and church and fraternal societies and individuals in sending supplies to Cairo for distribution to a distressed people.

During this situation there was on duty, doing manual labor in the building and protection of levees, the rescue of endangered lives, and the relief of hungry men, women and children, twenty-four companies of the National Guard and three divisions of the Naval Reserve of the State. In addition thereto, Captain Henderson of the Life Saving Station of Chicago, with corps of men and complement of boats, reported for duty and did magnificent service to our people. I feel that I would be recreant in my duty if I did not in this connection commend to your favorable attention the wonderful service rendered by all the officers and men connected with our Military and Naval establishment on duty throughout this distressed territory. At great personal sacrifice, but with characteristic alacrity, they answered the call of the Commander-in-Chief and earnestly and persistently, with the proper regard for discipline and duty, performed under the most trying circumstances, every act that was deemed necessary by those in authority, to protect life and property and succor the distressed. And may I further add that much of the inspiration of this willingness to perform the most arduous duty, was caused by the knowledge of the example set by the Governor, as the Commander-in-Chief, in his constant attendance on the situation and his prompt and ready assisting hand at all distressed points.

I am attaching hereto, exhibits which show with the closest approximate estimation, the expenditures made and liabilities incurred by reason of the necessities of this emergency situation.

Respectfully submitted,

F. S. DICKSON,

The Adjutant General, Chief of Staff.

GOVERNOR EDWARD F. DUNNE,
Springfield, Illinois.

RELIEF WORK EXPENDITURES.

Stores purchased for assisting refugees at Cairo, Illinois and the immediate surrounding country, foraging stock, etc., March 30th to April 21st, inclusive $10,956 79

Note: (Itemization attached) Ex. "A."

Such bills for refugee supplies, including sand bags furnished, expressage, groceries, etc., we have been able to gather in since the conclusion of the relief work 34,162 20

Note: (Itemization attached) Ex. "B."

Every creditor has been requested to supply statement, but in addition to the above there are a number of outstanding express, freight, telephone and telegraph bills that we have as yet been unable to secure statements on. It is possible, therefore, only to estimate the additional relief indebtedness, and estimating this from the freight, express, telephone and telegraph rates between the different points involved and the amount of supplies secured and not yet billed, I estimate that it will require $20,000.00 in addition to the above specific figures, to fully liquidate. This would render this total $65,118 99

In the matter of relief work it is therefore, recommended that an emergency appropriation in the amount indicated be requested of the General Assembly. A bill drawn for the purpose could carry provision appropriating $65,118.99, or so much thereof as may be necessary, in order that if the outstanding bills which I have attempted to carefully estimate, might not quite reach $20,000.00, the balance could revert to the treasury.

May 1, 1913.

To His Excellency, Hon. Edward F. Dunne, Governor of Illinois, Springfield:

SIR—I have the honor to submit the following report of the sanitary and contagious disease work of the State Board of Health in the flooded district in Illinois along the Ohio River:

Section 2 of "An Act to create and establish a Board of Health in the State of Illinois," in force July 1, 1877, provides that "the State Board of Health shall have the general supervision of the interests of the health and lives of the people of the State. * * * The board shall have authority to make such rules and regulations and such sanitary investigations as they may, from time to time deem necessary for the preservation and improvement of the public health. * * * It shall be the duty of all local boards of health, health authorities and officers and employees of the State or any county, village, city or township thereof, to enforce the rules and regulations that may be adopted by the State Board of Health. * * * It shall be the duty of the State Board of Health to investigate into the cause of dangerously contagious or infectious diseases, especially when existing in epidemic form, and to take means to restrict and suppress the same."

In accordance with your instructions, based upon the above provisions of the statutes, I detailed representatives of this board for work in such district as follows:

On April 5th, Dr. J. C. Westervelt, Assistant Secretary, then investigating an outbreak of smallpox at Boaz, Massac County, was directed to visit Shawneetown for the purpose of investigating sanitary conditions and the contagious disease situation, and of assisting and instructing the local authorities in the improvement of sanitary conditions and the prevention of contagious diseases.

On April 7th, Dr. C. J. Boswell, a member of the State Board of Health, residing at Mounds in the flooded district, was requested to get in touch with Adjutant General Frank S. Dickson at Cairo, and to cooperate with him in his work at Mounds and vicinity.

On the same day Dr. C. E. Crawford, Chief Inspector of this board, was directed to go to Cairo for an indefinite stay, and to take charge of the work of the board at that place and at other points along the Ohio River where the board might be of service to the residents.

On April 9th Dr. Westervelt reported from Eldorado that he had just arrived from Shawneetown and points south, finding nothing but waste and desolation; that there [were] 1,000 refugees near Shawneetown but that they were well provisioned and well cared for and that no cases of contagious disease existed. On April 10th Dr. Westervelt made a more extended report of conditions at Shawneetown, stating that the entire town was under some 15 feet of water, and would remain so for at least ten days under most favorable conditions.

With Mayor George H. Earnshaw and Dr. Paul Sherman, health officer, he visited the various refugee camps near Shawneetown and made examination into conditions at each camp. He reports that the camps were all well located on side hills with good drainage, and that the water used by the refugees was obtained from wells above the high-water line. The toilet conveniences, however, were not sufficient. This, the local authorities promised should be remedied.

No cases of contagious disease were found at either Shawneetown or any of the camps. Dr. Sherman, health officer, had sufficient vaccine points and diphtheria antitoxin to meet all reasonable needs.

Dr. Westervelt further stated that, in his opinion, the water supply at Shawneetown would probably remain free from contamination, the same being obtained from driven wells. In his opinion much work would be necessary to restore the city to sanitary conditions but because of the water nothing could be done for some two weeks.

Dr. Crawford remained in the flooded district some two weeks, visiting the communities affected, on three different occasions, making the trip up the Ohio River on the boat furnished by the Illinois Fish Commission. He reports he found conditions as follows:

Mound City—We stopped at Mound City April 9th, and called on Mayor Browner and Alderman Biglioni, Currian, Hadley and Barllin. They reported no medical supplies needed and no contagion, the last case of smallpox disappeared three weeks ago. The town is flooded and the out-houses filled with seep water, will need about 100 barrels of lime when water recedes. Mayor says citizens will use lime and clean up under our direction when the time arrives.

Mounds—On April 9th, while at Mound City, I called up Dr. Boswell, but his office girl said he would not be in for some time. I left a message for him to look after any emergency that may develop at Mounds or Mound City until we returned. Mr. Hanson of the Water Supply Station is looking after the water supply at Cairo, Mounds and Mound City.

Metropolis—April 9th, part of the town under water. No supplies needed. Left Mr. Town of Water Supply Station to look after water supply at Metropolis and Brookport.

Golconda—April 10th. We stopped at Golconda yesterday and found sixty-five houses submerged and left 400 rations. No contagious diseases. Called on Mayor Williamson, health officer, Dr. McCoy—two cases of smallpox in railroad camp $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Golconda. Employees live at Golconda. Dr. Field has been employed by County Commissioner Whitesides to look after the situation and has both cases quarantined with guards at each house. Left 200 vaccine points with Dr. McCoy and Fields. Dr. McCoy will look after any emergency until we return. Mr. Ferguson of the State Water Survey at Urbana will look after water supply.

Rosiclare—April 11th. Saw Dr. W. P. Evers, health officer and chairman of relief committee—portion of the town under water. No food supplies needed. They have had 84 (in 22 families) cases of smallpox there since the second week in January and at the present time there are 22 cases in six families, all under quarantine by Dr. Evers. Dr. Westervelt was there in January. The fumigation of houses has been imperfect. Dr. Evers thinks he can handle the situation. Will leave him supply of vaccine points and supply of fumigating materials on our return trip. Dr. Evers will look after conditions until we return.

Elizabethtown—April 11th. Saw Dr. F. M. Fowler, health officer. No supplies needed. Part of the town under water. There have been 150 cases of smallpox since the first of January. Last case disappeared 25 days ago and no contagion in the town, but there are 15 cases of smallpox in five families and 14 cases of scarlet fever in four families about four miles from Elizabethtown. All are quarantined and Dr. R. H. Willingham has been employed by County Commissioner Lauri to look after conditions and he says he thinks he can and will attend to the matters. Dr. Fowler will look after any emergency until we return when we will leave supply of fumigating material and some vaccine points. This town, like all others, will need a liberal supply of lime in a short time.

Shawneetown—April 11th. Town completely submerged—1,200 people in camp in tents on hill. The sanitary condition is very bad. Left rations for 1,200 people. There is no contagion and not a great deal of sickness, but an epidemic is inevitable and after going over the conditions thoroughly with General Dickson we decided to establish an emergency hospital available to all members of camp and selected a school house for the hospital and plan to have it in operation by next Monday. The Red Cross will supply the nurses. This is by far the most serious condition we have found.

MT. VERNON, IND., April 11.

Amos Sawyer, Board of Health, Springfield, Ill.:

No contagion at Shawneetown, but sanitary conditions are bad. We are establishing an emergency hospital there. Other points between Cairo here have been given temporary relief. We go up Wabash from here. Can reach me Cairo care of General Dickson about Sunday.

C. E. CRAWFORD."

Shawneetown—April 13th. I wrote you regarding an inspector for Shawneetown and expected to hear from you when I reached Cairo today. While we can use an inspector there very nicely, we can get along without one if we have to. We are doing the best we can under the circumstances, and I am very well satisfied as far as smallpox, diphtheria, and scarlet fever are concerned. We can control that without any trouble. Our big problem will be when the water begins to recede and typhoid fever and malaria troubles will, undoubtedly, develop.

Cairo—April 14th and 15th. I beg to report that I took up the sanitary conditions at Cairo the 14th and 15th with Dr. Walsh, health officer and the executive committee and found that there were three cases of smallpox, all well quarantined and all necessary precautions being taken. Eighteen teams were engaged cleaning up the city at noon the 14th, and 600 loads of garbage and refuse of all kinds was handled that day and the next. The local officials are working hard there and carried out every instruction I made regarding the sanitary matters.

Mound City, Mounds and Metropolis—April 15th. We left Cairo at 1:00 o'clock the 15th with a boat-load of supplies of all kinds and first went to Wickliffe, Ky., and first called on Dr. Rogers, health officer, and the relief committee and found no contagion and no need of medical supplies—General

Dickson left supplies. There are several hundred Illinois people there and their families are being taken care of by the State of Illinois. 200 barrels of lime were left at Mounds and Mound City. We did not stop at Metropolis as they reported over phone that they needed no medical or other supplies. There is no change in the condition at Mounds or Mound City, only that the water is receding and there is an effort to clean up.

Golconda—April 16th. We next went to Golconda, called on Mayor Williamson and Health Officer Dr. McCoy, no new developments there, water rapidly receding, left a large supply of disinfecting material, anti-typhoid and smallpox vaccine and ordered 50 barrels of lime, no new cases of smallpox in camps near there. People who were drawing rations and refused to help clean up the city were ordered taken off the list and not given any more assistance unless they helped clean the city.

Rosiclare—April 16th. On arrival at Rosiclare we called on Mayor Miles and Dr. Evers, health officer, and found that there were still 24 cases of smallpox in seven families. On my first visit we found much opposition to vaccination. Orders were given to the sergeant in charge of supplies not to issue supplies to anyone who had not been vaccinated or who refused to be vaccinated, resulting in a general vaccination at the present time. Left fumigating materials for 20 houses, 200 vaccine points, 150 anti-typhoid vaccine, ordered 50 barrels of lime.

Elizabethtown—April 16th. We found no new developments at Elizabethtown, conditions seemed to be improving, left disinfecting material, anti-typhoid vaccine, ordered 25 barrels of lime.

Shawneetown—April 17th. The night of the 16th we reached Shawneetown, remained there that night. The sanitary conditions there are very unsatisfactory. All the resident portion of the town is still submerged and there is quite a foul odor, very little sickness, but a run of sickness seems inevitable. We left a complete emergency hospital outfit, including beds, mattresses, sheets, pillow-cases, hardware, medical supplies of all kinds, a very large quantity of disinfecting material, anti-typhoid and smallpox vaccine, ordered two car-loads of lime. The hospital is established in a school house and is left in charge of Dr. Walker of the Medical Corps of the Illinois National Guards. Dr. Sherman, local health officer, is in charge of the sanitary work and he and Dr. Walker are working together and are rendering splendid services. They were my guests at a dinner on the steamer Illinois that night, when we discussed the situation thoroughly. The State is still feeding 1,284 people and General Dickson gave instructions at my request that all men who refused to work and help clean up the city be not given rations. Dr. Sherman is still the only local official who is taking an interest in the affairs. Messrs. Carson and Tanner of the State Water Supply Station were left at Shawneetown to look after the water.

Regarding Shawneetown, I beg to report that the mayor left the day the levee was cut and other officers with the exception of Dr. Sherman, health officer, absolutely refused to do a single thing.

All relief work that has been done there has been done by the State and federal government. On my first visit I informed the authorities that if they failed to act and protect the citizens, that on my return the State Board of Health would assume charge at the expense of the village, and I suggested the appointment of Dr. Sherman that I might be in a position to make good if they failed to carry out my instructions.

New Haven, Chain Hills, East and West Dog Town—April 18th. We left Shawneetown on the morning of the 17th and went up the Wabash to New Haven, Chain Hills, East and West Dog Town, where supplies were left for ten days. There was no contagion at either of these places and no doctor at Chain Hills or East and West Dog Town. Saw the doctor at New Haven and left vaccine and fumigating materials, ordered lime for each place. We then returned to Mt. Vernon, remaining there the night of the 17th and General Dickson purchased a supply of shoes, stockings and children's clothing.

At the time of the first inspection, Dr. Crawford instructed the local authorities in each of the communities affected by the flood, to have printed and to distribute a proclamation of which the following is a copy:

We, the undersigned Board of Health and city council, hereby declare that an emergency situation now exists, which threatens the health and lives of the people, and urge the execution of the following regulations which are necessary to prevent sickness and restore the city to normal conditions:

1. Boil all drinking water and that used to wash vegetables eaten raw.
2. Pump out all cisterns and wells that have been flooded, washing them thoroughly and disinfecting them by burning sulphur or sulphur candles, or washing them with permanganate solution 1 to 5,000 parts water.
3. Wash all floors and walls thoroughly and disinfect by rinsing with a solution of permanganate of potash 1 to 5,000 parts of water, or scrubbing with a strong solution of lye.
4. Dry thoroughly any flooded room by keeping fires going day and night. Sleep with rooms well ventilated.
5. Clean out cellars thoroughly and whitewash all flooded premises not painted.
6. Place lime freely about all premises.
7. Disinfect all discharges from the bowels and kidneys by the use of lime about vaults and outhouses.

Persons may avoid typhoid fever by having themselves inoculated with anti-typhoid serum free to those unable to pay, administered by a physician or health officer.

Smallpox exists in our community and each additional case is a reflection upon the intelligence of the community for a successful vaccination absolutely prevents one from having smallpox. Fresh vaccine points have been supplied our physicians who will vaccinate free of charge those who are unable to pay.

10. Every citizen should comply with these regulations at once and then urge his neighbor to do so, thus upholding the efforts of the health board and council to prevent sickness and death of our people.

Also upon the receipt of Dr. Crawford's first report a letter was sent from this office to every health official in the flooded district, advising him of the dangers which confronted his community because of conditions occasioned by the flood, and informing him of the presence of a representative of this board in the flooded district and tendering him every aid which this board might possibly give him in the betterment of sanitary conditions and the prevention and suppression of contagious disease. He was also requested to keep in touch with this office, promptly informing me of the outbreak of any contagious or infectious disease.

I am pleased to be able to report that this order in this matter was complied with in all cases, and that the instructions contained in the proclamation were generally followed.

I have not as yet received his report on his inspection of conditions last week during the trip on which Your Excellency was a member of the party. I also take pleasure in reporting that the work of this board in the flooded district has met with the approval and has received cordial commendation from the representatives of the Red Cross Society and the U. S. Army officers, detailed for work in the flooded district. In his report to Major F. C. Fauntleroy, Medical Corps, U. S. Army, Major P. C. Hutton of the Medical Corps says, "The presence of representatives of the Kentucky, Illinois and Indiana boards of health lent weight to all recommendations and it is believed that the plan of having state physicians on this trip was fraught with good. All were energetic, and much interested in the work. I am quite sure they are entitled to a full share of credit for whatever beneficial results that may follow * * * I wish to also mention the hearty cooperation of Dr. Foxworthy of the Indiana Board of Health and Dr. Crawford of the Illinois Board of Health. Dr. Foxworthy left the boat at Evansville and Dr. Crawford joined it at Mt. Vernon. All of these gentlemen performed praiseworthy services."

Very respectfully,

AMOS SAWYER,
Acting Secretary.

Lieutenant Governor O'Hara retired from the chair and President pro tempore, Walter I. Manny, assumed the same.

Sergeant-at-Arms, George W. Zinn, appeared at the bar of the Senate and reported that he had served the following summons and that the party therein mentioned, Richard M. Sullivan, was present and ready to answer thereto:

STATE OF ILLINOIS, COUNTY OF SANGAMON.

IN THE SENATE OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS

OF THE

FORTY-EIGHTH GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Greetings, to Richard M. Sullivan, Springfield, Ill.:

You are hereby summoned to forthwith appear before the Senate of the Forty-eighth General Assembly of the State of Illinois, in the State House, city of Springfield, Ill., and give such testimony as may be material in an investigation now pending by and before such Senate.

You are further required to bring with you and produce before said Senate any and all affidavit or affidavits pertaining to the members of said committee and otherwise pertaining to said investigation of a certain committee into the conditions of vice and white slavery, together with all other books, papers and documents pertaining to said committee and such investigation.

And upon your failure to answer and appear in person and to produce such papers, books and documents you will be held for such action as may be had or taken by the Senate as provided by the Constitution and statutes of the State of Illinois.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the President of the Senate affixes his hand by order of the Senate of the State of Illinois, for the Forty-eighth General Assembly.

Dated at Springfield, Ill., May 6, 1913.

BARRATT O'HARA,

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 58.

WHEREAS, Section 15, of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of Illinois, adopted in 1870, expressly provides that "no member of the General Assembly shall be interested, either directly or indirectly in any contract with the State, or any county thereof, authorized by any law passed during the term for which he shall have been elected, or within one year after the expiration thereof;" and,

WHEREAS, The purpose and meaning of the said provision is to prohibit the representatives and servants of the people, delegated especially to guard the public treasury, from becoming personal beneficiaries in appropriations made by the General Assembly, of which they, themselves, are members; and,

WHEREAS, The statement of amounts appropriated by the Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh General Assemblies to the single State office of Attorney General (as shown by a transcript of the books of the Auditor of Public Accounts hereto attached and made a part of this resolution) exhibits numerous instances of payments made directly to certain members of the present and other General Assemblies, who, at the time such appropriations were made and at the time of entering into such contract with the State by which they participated in such appropriations, were members of the General Assembly, and as such expressly forbidden from being "interested, either directly or indirectly, in any contract with the State," and some of the members at the time of this betrayal of trust were acting in positions of highest influence and power on the Committee on Appropriations, through whose special diligence the public funds are supposed to be safeguarded; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a committee of three (3) members of the Senate be appointed, pursuant to the rules of the Senate, to investigate the matter of public expenditures made during the past ten years in the form of payment of money for services to "the State or any county thereof," rendered or purporting to have been rendered by persons who, at the time of such service, were members of the General Assembly of Illinois, with power to take testimony and send for books and papers and to report their conclusions with recommendations for appropriate legislation for the suppression of such practices.

PRESENTATION OF RESOLUTIONS BY UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

Mr. Meeker offered the following resolution:

SENATE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 43.

WHEREAS, Citizens of Illinois and of other states have been great sufferers again this year from floods and overflows, and have thus had new burdens imposed upon them before they had recovered from previous misfortunes of like character; and,

WHEREAS, There is no reasonable ground to hope that the means thus far employed will ever accomplish the work of protection from periodic floods and the reclamation of great areas of land that are hereby now rendered practically valueless, and,

WHEREAS, All the existing political parties have committed themselves in their platforms to the policy of the National Government's assuming control of the entire business of flood prevention and land reclamation in the overflow regions; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring herein, That we hereby make appeal to the President and the Congress of the United States, to take speedy action in the premises, to the end that the people may have early assurance that their lives and property will ultimately be made secure in the overflow regions, and that they may be encouraged to improve their lands and bring the millions of waste acres in the river valley regions into service for the production of food for the vast population they are capable of sustaining. Failure of the National Government to proceed promptly and earnestly to this great work would challenge the good faith of our statesmen and bring discredit upon us as a nation in the eyes of all intelligent and patriotic citizens.

Resolved, That the Secretary of State be, and he is hereby instructed to send copies of this resolution to the President of the United States and to the members of the House and Senate from this State, who are hereby requested to use their utmost diligence in bringing the subject matter of these resolutions to the earliest possible consideration by the Congress and the Executive.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Meeker, the rules were suspended and the foregoing resolution was taken up for immediate consideration, and on his motion, was adopted.

READING BILLS FROM THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES THE THIRD TIME BY UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

On motion of Mr. Womack, House Bill No. 445, a bill for "An Act to create an additional term of the circuit court in the county of Gallatin and to fix the time of holding the same,"

Was taken up and read at large a second time,
And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered to a third reading?"
it was decided in the affirmative.

At 1:55 o'clock p. m., on motion of Mr. Hurburgh, the Senate adjourned.

THURSDAY, MAY 8, 1913, 10:00 O'CLOCK A. M.

Senate met pursuant to adjournment.

Hon. Barratt O'Hara, Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate, presiding.

Prayer by the Chaplain.

The President of the Senate announced that he had examined the Journal of yesterday and found no corrections or changes to be made, and if the Senate had no changes or corrections to offer, the Journal would be ordered to stand approved. No corrections being offered, the Journal was ordered to stand approved.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES.

PRESENTATION OF RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Beall offered the following resolution:

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 67.

WHEREAS, The Grand Army of the Republic of the State of Illinois, will meet in encampment in the city of Alton, on May 20, 21 and 22, 1913; and,

WHEREAS, The members affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic are those who are the survivors of the brave, who sacrificed their lives for this country; and,

WHEREAS, Since the historic war of Sixty-five, there has been a union of the men who fought for this country, and the line of demarcation between the North and the South and the East and the West has been obliterated, and all stand on one plane of humanity and fraternal brotherhood, and as years roll by the lines of the survivors are constantly decreasing; therefore, in honor to the worthy and the brave of the past generation, be it

Resolved, That the Senate of the State of Illinois, having been invited by the city of Alton to attend the ceremonies on either of said days of May 20th, 21st and 22nd, hereby accept the said invitation.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Beall, the rules were suspended and the foregoing resolution was taken up for immediate consideration and, on his motion, was adopted.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Hearn, the use of the Senate Chamber, for Thursday night, May 15th, and Friday, May 16th, 1913, was granted to the Illinois State Historical Society.

READING BILLS OF THE SENATE THE SECOND TIME.

On motion of Mr. Manny, Senate Bill No. 216, a bill for "An Act to amend section 21 of an Act to revise the law in relation to mechanics' liens. To whom, what for, and when lieu is given; who is a contractor; area covered by and extent of lien; when the lien attaches. (Approved May 18, 1903, in force July 1, 1903),"

Was taken up and read at large a second time, together with the following amendments thereto (which have been printed), reported from the Committee on Judiciary, April 30, 1913:

Amend Senate Bill No. 216, by inserting after the word "contractor" and preceding the word "shall" in line 14 of the printed bill the following: "or shall furnish any material to be employed in the process of construction as a means for assisting in the erection of the building or improvement in what is commonly termed form or form work where concrete, cement or like material is used in whole or in part."

On motion of Mr. Manny, the foregoing amendment was laid on the table.

Mr. Manny offered the following amendments to the bill, which were adopted:

AMENDMENT No. 1.

Strike out the title of Senate Bill No. 216 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

A bill for an Act to amend section 1, section 7 and section 21 of an Act to revise the law in relation to mechanics' liens, to whom, what for, and when lien is given; who is a contractor; area covered by and extent of lien; when the lien attaches. (Approved May 18, 1903, in force July 1, 1903, L. 1903.)

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Strike out all after the enacting clause of Senate Bill No. 216 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

That section 1, section 7 and section 21 of an Act entitled, "An Act to revise the law in relation to mechanics' lien, to whom, what for, and when lien is given; who is a contractor; area covered by and extent of lien; when the lien attaches (approved May 18, 1903, in force July 1, 1903)," be and the same is hereby revised and amended so as to read as follows:

Sec 1. WHEN LIEN GIVEN.] That any person who shall by any contract or contracts, express or implied, or partly expressed or implied, with the owner of a lot or tract of land, or with one whom such owner has authorized or knowingly permitted to contract for the improvement of, or to improve the same, furnish material, fixtures, apparatus or machinery, forms or form work used in the process of construction where cement, concrete or like material is used for the purpose of or in the building, altering, repairing or ornamenting any house or other building, walk or sidewalk, whether such walk or sidewalk be on the land or bordering thereon, driveway, fence or improvement or appurtenances thereto on such lot or tract of land or connected therewith, and upon, over or under a sidewalk, street or alley adjoining; or fill, sod or excavate such lot or tract of land, or do landscape work thereon or therefor; or raise or lower any house thereon or remove any house thereto; or perform services as an architect for any such purpose; or furnish or perform labor or services as superintendent, timekeeper, mechanic, laborer or otherwise, in the building, altering, repairing or ornamenting of the same; or furnish material, fixtures, apparatus, machinery, labor or services, forms or form work used in the process of the construction where concrete, cement or like material is used, on the order of his agent, architect or superintendent having charge of the improvements, building, altering, repairing or ornamenting the same, shall be known under this Act as a contractor, and shall have a lien upon the whole of such lot or tract of land and upon the adjoining or adjacent lots or tracts of land of such owner constituting the same premises and occupied or used in connection with such lot or tract of land as a place of residence or business; and in case the contract relates to two or more buildings, on two or more lots or tracts of land, upon all such lots and tracts of land and improvements thereon for the amount due to him for such material, fixtures, apparatus, machinery, services or labor, and interest from the date the same is due. This lien shall extend to an estate in fee, for life, for years, or any other estate or any right of redemption, or other interest which such owner may have in the lot or tract of land at the time of making such contract or may subsequently acquire therein, and shall be superior to any right of dower of husband or wife in said premises, provided the owner of such dower interest had knowledge of such improvement and did not give written notice of his or her objection to such improvement before the making thereof; nor shall the taking of additional security by the contractor or sub-contractor be a waiver of any right of lien which he may have by virtue of this Act, unless made a waiver by express agreement of the parties; and this lien shall attach as of the date of the contract.

SEC. 7. LIMITATIONS AS AGAINST THIRD PARTIES—CLAIM FOR LIEN—WHAT SHALL CONSIST OF—WHEN CLAIM MAY BE FILED AND WHEN AMENDED—AS TO ERRORS IN—PROOF OF DELIVERY OF MATERIAL, NOT USE, SUFFICIENT—DELIVERY OF MATERIAL AT ONE BUILDING GOOD FOR ALL BUILDINGS.] No contractor shall be allowed to enforce such lien against or to the prejudice of any other creditor or incumbrancer or purchaser, unless within four months after completion, or if extra or additional work is done or material is delivered therefor within four months after the completion of such extra or additional work or the final delivery of such extra or additional material, he shall either bring suit to enforce his lien therefor or shall file with the clerk of the circuit court in the county in which the building, erection or other improvement to be charged with lien is situated, a claim for lien, verified by the affidavit of himself, or his agent or employee, which shall consist of a brief statement of the contract, the balance due after allowing all credits, and a sufficiently correct description of the lot, lots or tracts of land to identify the same. Such claim for lien may be filed at any time after the contract is made, and as to the owner may be filed at any time after the contract is made and within two years after the completion of said contract, or the completion of any extra work or the furnishing of any extra material thereunder, and as to such owner may be amended at any time before the final decree. No such lien shall be defeated to the proper amount thereof because of an error or overcharging on the part of any person claiming a lien therefor under this Act, unless it shall be shown that such error or overcharge is made with intent to defraud; nor shall any such lien for material be defeated because of lack of proof that the material after the delivery thereof, actually entered into the construction of such building or improvement, although it be shown that such material was not actually used in the construction of such building or improvement: Provided, it is shown that such material was delivered either to said owner or his agent for such building or improvement, to be used in said building or improvement, or at the place where said building or improvement was being constructed, for the purpose of being used in construction or for the purpose of being employed in the process of construction as a means for assisting in the erection of the building or improvement in what is commonly termed forms or form work where concrete, cement or like material is used, in whole or in part.

And, provided, further, that in case of the construction of a number of buildings under contract between the same parties, it shall be sufficient in order to establish such lien for material, if it be shown that such material was in good faith delivered at one of the said buildings for the purpose of being used in the construction of any one or all of such buildings, or delivered to the owner or his agent for such buildings, to be used therein; and such lien for such material shall attach to all of said buildings together with the land upon which the same are being constructed, the same as in a single building or improvement. And, provided, further, that in the event the contract relates to two or more buildings on two or more lots or tracts of land, then all of said buildings and lots or tracts of land may be included in one statement of claim for a lien.

Sec. 21. SUB-CONTRACTORS—LIENS OF SUB-CONTRACTORS—WHO ARE—EXTENT OF THEIR LIENS SUPERIOR TO CREDITORS OR CONTRACTORS ON MONEY DUE CONTRACTORS—DUTY OF OWNER AND CONTRACTOR TO FILE NOTICE OF WAIVER OF LIEN—LIMIT OF OWNER'S LIABILITY—OWNER LIABLE FOR SUB-CONTRACTS PERFORMED AFTER NOTICE THEREOF—RIGHTS OF IN CASE CONTRACTOR DEFAULT MAY COMPLETE, IF CONTRACTOR ABANDONS.] Every mechanic, workman or other person who shall furnish any materials, apparatus, machinery or fixtures, or furnish or perform services or labor for the contractor, or shall furnish any material to be employed in the process of construction as a means for assisting in the erection of the building or improvement in what is commonly termed form or form work where concrete, cement or like material is used in whole or in part, shall be known under this Act as a sub-contractor, and shall have a lien for the value thereof, with interest on such amount from date the same is due, from the same time, on the same property as provided for the contractor, and, also, as against the creditors and assignees, and personal and legal representatives of the contractor, on the material, fixtures, apparatus or machinery furnished, and on the moneys or other consideration due or to become due from the owner under the original contract. If the legal effect of any contract between the owner and contractor is that no lien or claim may be filed or maintained by any one, such provision shall be binding; but the only admissible evidence thereof as against a sub-contractor or material man, shall be proof of actual notice thereof to him before any labor or material is furnished by him; or proof that a duly written and signed stipulation or agreement to that effect has been filed in the office of the recorder of deeds of the county or counties where the house, building or other improvement is situated, prior to the commencement of the work upon such house, building or other improvement, or within ten days after the execution of the principal contract or not less than ten days prior to the contract of the sub-contractor or material man. And the recorder of deeds shall record the same at length in the order of time of its reception in books provided by him for that purpose, and the recorder of deeds shall index the same, in the name of the contractor and in the name of the owner, in books kept for that purpose, and also in tract or abstract book of the tract, lot, or parcel of land, upon which said house, building or other improvement is located, and said recorder of deeds shall receive therefor a fee, such as is provided for the recording of instruments in his office.

In no case, except as hereinafter provided, shall the owner be compelled to pay a greater sum for or on account of the completion of such house, building or other improvement than the price or sum stipulated in said original contract or agreement, unless payment be made to the contractor or to his order, in violation of the rights and interests of the persons intended to be benefited by this Act: Provided, if it shall appear to the court that the owner and contractor fraudulently, and for the purpose of defrauding sub-contractors fixed an unreasonably low price in their original contract for the erection or repairing of such house, building or other improvement, then the court shall ascertain how much of a difference exists between a fair price for labor and material used in said house, building or other improvement, and the sum named in said original contract, and said difference shall be considered a part of the contract and be subject to a lien. But where the contractor's statement, made as provided in section five (5), shows the amount to be paid to the sub-contractor, or party furnishing material, or the sub-contractor's statement, made pursuant to section twenty-two (22), shows the amount to become due for material; or notice is given to the owner, as provided in sections twenty-four (24) and twenty-five (25), and thereafter such sub-contract shall be performed, or material to the value of the amount named in such statements or notice, shall be prepared for use and delivery, or delivered without written protest on the part of the owner previous to such performance or delivery, or preparation for delivery, then, and in any of such cases, such sub-contractor or party furnishing or preparing material, regardless of the price named in the original contract, shall have a lien therefor to the extent of the amount named in such statements or notice. Also, in case of default or abandonment by the contractor, the sub-contractor, or party furnishing material, shall have and may enforce his lien to the same extent and in the same manner that the contractor may under conditions that arise as provided for in section four (4) of this Act, and shall have and may exercise the same rights as are therein provided for the contractor.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Manny, Senate Bill No. 345, a bill for "An Act to amend section 7 of an Act entitled, 'An Act to revise the law in relation to the Department of Agriculture, agricultural societies and agricultural fairs, and to provide for reports of the same,' approved June 23, 1883, in force July 1, 1883, as amended by Act approved May 29, 1911, in force July 1, 1911,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Glackin, Senate Bill No. 365, a bill for "An Act to provide for the contribution from public moneys to the public school employees' pension fund in cities having a population exceeding one hundred thousand inhabitants,"

Having been printed, was taken up and read at large a second time,

And the question being, "Shall the bill be ordered engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Cornwell, Senate Bill No. 313, a bill for "An Act concerning vital statistics, providing for the registration of all births, still-births and deaths, by means of certificates thereof, and burial or removal permits; and providing for the preservation of such records in the offices of city registrars, county clerks, and the State Board of Health; and prescribing the means of securing the enforcement of this Act; and dividing the State into primary registration districts, designating the local registrars therefor and classifying the cities of the State for the uses and purposes of this Act; and providing for certified copies of records of births, still-births and deaths and the facts therein to be prima facie evidence; and defining the duties of physicians, midwives, coroners, undertakers, parents, guardians, superintendents of institutions, principals of schools, employers of minors, transportation companies, sextons, registrars, prosecuting attorneys, state's attorneys and Attorney General, with reference thereto; and requiring that necessary appropriations be made for the purpose of carrying out the provisions thereof by supervisors, county commissioners and city councils or board of aldermen and others; and defining offenses thereunder and affixing penalties for violations thereof; and repealing all Acts and parts of Acts in conflict herewith,"

Which was read at large a second time, May 6, 1913, and amended and postponed, was taken up for consideration.

Mr. Cornwell offered the following amendments to the bill, which were adopted:

AMENDMENT No. 1.

After the word "homicidal" in line 62 of section 7 the following: (Certificates of death and records thereof required by this Act shall not in the case of an illegitimate child or person contain the name or residence of, or other identifying fact relating to, the father or mother thereof without the consent of said father or mother respectively).

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Amend by adding after the word "omission" in line 45, of section 14 the following: (Certificates of birth and records thereof required by this Act shall not in the case of an illegitimate child contain the name, or residence of, or other identifying fact relating to, the father or mother without the consent of said father or mother respectively.)

AMENDMENT No. 3.

Amend by striking out in line 58, section 7, the word "Governor" and substituting the word "Coroner."

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Dailey, Senate Bill No. 89, a bill for "An Act to enable any board of school inspectors, or any body or board of officials, which governs, or has charge of the affairs of any school district having a population of not fewer than 30,000, and not more than 100,000, inhabitants, and governed by special Acts of the General Assembly of this State and in such other districts as may hereafter be ascertained by any special or general census to have such population and which school districts are also governed by like special Acts, to establish and maintain a teacher's pension and retirement fund."

Was taken up and read at large a second time, together with the following amendments thereto (which have been printed), reported from the Committee on Education, April 17, 1913:

Amend Senate Bill No. 12 by striking out all of said bill after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following: That every corporation, every co-partnership or company, and every association (other than State and national banks, trust companies, real estate mortgage companies dealing exclusively in real estate mortgage notes, building and loan associations and corporations not organized for profit), organized or which shall be organized in this State, whether incorporated or unincorporated, which shall sell or negotiate for the sale of any stock, bonds, or other securities of any kind or character other than bonds of the United States, and the State of Illinois or of some municipality of the State of Illinois, and notes secured by mortgages on real estate located in the State of Illinois, other than those specifically exempted herein, shall be known for the purpose of this Act as a domestic investment company. Every such investment company organized in any other state, territory or government, or organized under the laws of any other state, territory or government, shall be known for the purpose of this Act as foreign investment company.

Sec. 2. Before offering or attempting to sell any stock, bonds or other securities of any kind or character other than those specifically exempted in section one of this Act to any person or persons or transacting any business whatever in this State excepting that of preparing the documents hereinafter required, every such investment company, domestic or foreign, shall file in the office of the Auditor of Public Accounts, of this State, together with a filing fee of two dollars and fifty cents, the following documents, to wit: A copy of all contracts, bonds or other instruments which it proposes to make with or sell to its contributors. A statement which shall show the name and location of the investment company, and an itemized account of its actual financial condition, and the amount of its property and liabilities, and such other information touching its affairs as said Auditor of Public Accounts may require. If such investment company shall be a co-partnership or an unincorporated association, it shall also file with the Auditor of Public Accounts, a copy of its articles of co-partnership or association, and all other papers pertaining to its organization, and if it be a corporation organized under the laws of Illinois, it shall also file with the Auditor of Public Accounts a copy of its articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws, and all other papers pertaining to its organization. If it shall be an investment company organized under the laws of any other state, territory or government, incorporated or unincorporated, it shall also file with the said Auditor of Public Accounts a copy of the laws of such state, territory or government under which it exists or is incorporated, and also a copy of its charter, articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws and all amendments thereof which have been made and all other papers pertaining to its organization.

Sec. 3. All the above described papers shall be verified by the oath of a member of a co-partnership or company, if it be a co-partnership or company, or by the oath of a duly authorized officer, if it be an incorporated or unincorporated association. All such papers, however, as are recorded or are on file in any public office shall be further certified to by the officer of whose records or archives they form a part, as being correct copies of such records or archives.

Sec. 4. Every foreign investment company shall also file its written consent, irrevocable, that actions may be commenced against it, in the proper court of any county in this State, in which cause of action may arise or in which the plaintiff may reside, by the service of the process on the Auditor of Public Accounts, and stipulating and agreeing that such service of process on the Auditor of Public Accounts shall be taken and held in all courts, to be as valid and binding as if due service has been made upon the company itself, according to the laws of this or any other state, and such instrument shall be authenticated by the seal of said foreign investment company and by the signature of a member of the co-partnership or company, if it be a co-partnership or company, or by the signatures of the president and secretary of the incorporated or unincorporated association, and shall be accompanied by a duly certified copy of the order or resolution of the board of directors, trustees or managers of the corporation authorizing the said secretary and president to execute the same.

Sec. 5. It shall be the duty of the Auditor of Public Accounts to examine the statements and documents so filed, and if said Auditor of Public Accounts shall deem it advisable he shall have made or make a detailed examination of such investment company's affairs, which examination shall be at the expense of such investment company, as hereinafter provided; and if he finds that such investment company is solvent, that its articles of incorporation or association, its constitution and by-laws, its proposed plan of business and proposed contract contain and provide for a fair, just and equitable plan for the transaction of business, and in his judgment promises a fair return on the stocks, bonds and other securities by it offered for sale, the Auditor of Public Accounts shall issue to such investment company a statement reciting that such company has complied with the provisions of this act, that detailed information in regard to the company and its securities is on file in the Auditor of Public Accounts' office for public inspection and information, that such investment company is permitted to do business in this State, and such statement shall also recite in bold type that the Auditor of Public Accounts in no wise recommends the securities to be offered for sale by such security company. But if said Auditor of Public Accounts finds that such articles of incorporation or association, charter, constitution and by-laws, plans of business or proposed contract contain any provision that is unfair, unjust, inequitable or oppressive to any class of contributors, or if he decides from his examination of its affairs that said investment company is not solvent and does not intend to do a fair and honest business, and in his judgment does not promise a fair return on the stocks, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, then he shall notify such investment company, in writing, of his findings, and it shall be unlawful for such company to do any further business in this State until it shall so change its constitution and by-laws, articles of incorporation or association, its proposed plan of business and proposed contract and its general financial condition in such manner as to satisfy the Auditor of Public Accounts that it is solvent, and its articles of incorporation or association, its constitution and by-laws, its proposed plan of business and proposed contract provide for a fair, just and equitable plan for the transaction of business, and does, in his judgment, promise a fair return on the stocks, bonds and other securities by it offered for sale: Provided, that all expenses paid or incurred and all fees or charges received or collected for any examination made under the provisions of this section of this act shall be reported in detail to the Auditor of Public Accounts and a full report and record thereof made in detail.

Sec. 6. It shall not be lawful for any investment company, as herein defined, either as principal or agent, to transact any business, in form or character, similar to that set forth in section 1 of this Act, except as is provided in section 2 of this Act, until it shall have filed the papers and documents above provided for. No amendment of the charter, articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws of any such investment company shall become operative until a copy of the same has been filed with the Auditor of Public Accounts as provided in regard to the original filing of charters, articles of incorporation, constitution and by-laws, nor shall it be lawful for any such investment company to transact business on any other plan than that set forth in the statement required to be filed by section 2 of this Act, or to make any contracts other than that shown in the copy of the proposed contract required to be filed by section 2 of this Act, until a written statement showing in full detail the proposed new plan of transacting business and a copy of the proposed new contract shall have been filed with the Auditor of Public Accounts, in like manner as provided in regard to the original plan of business and proposed contract, and the consent of the Auditor of Public Accounts obtained as to making such proposed new plan of transacting business and proposed new contract.

Sec. 7. Any such investment company may appoint one or more agents, but no such agent shall do any business for said investment company in this State until he shall first register with the Auditor of Public Accounts as agent for such investment company and for each of such registrations there shall be paid to the Auditor of Public Accounts the sum of one dollar. Such registration shall entitle such agent to represent said investment company as its agent until the 1st day of July following, unless said authority is sooner revoked by the Auditor of Public Accounts; and such authority shall be subject to the revocation at any time by the Auditor of Public Accounts, for cause appearing to him sufficient.

Sec. 8. Every such investment company, as herein defined, domestic or foreign, shall file at the close of business on December 31st of each year, and at such other times as required by the Auditor of Public Accounts, a statement verified by the oath of the co-partnership or company, if it be a co-partnership or company, or by the oath of a duly authorized officer, if it be an incorporated or unincorporated association, setting forth in such form as may be prescribed by the said Auditor of Public Accounts, its financial condition and the amount of its assets and liabilities, and furnishing such other information concerning its affairs as said Auditor of Public Accounts may require. Each annual statement of December 31st shall be accompanied by a filing fee of two dollars and fifty cents. Any such investment company failing to file its reports at the close of business December 31st of each year within ten days of that date or failing to file any other special report herein required within thirty days after receipt of request or requisition therefor, shall forfeit its right to do business in this State.

Sec. 9. The general accounts of every such investment company, domestic or foreign, doing business in this State, shall be kept by double entry, and such company, its co-partners or managing officers, shall, at least once in each month, make a trial balance of such accounts which shall be recorded in a book provided for that purpose; such trial balances and all other books and accounts of such company shall at all times during business hours, except on Sundays and legal holidays, be open to the inspection of stockholders and investors in said company or investors of the Auditor of Public Accounts and his deputies.

Sec. 10. The Auditor of Public Accounts shall have general supervision and control, as provided by this Act, over any and all investment companies, as herein defined, domestic or foreign, doing business in this State, and all such investment companies shall be subject to examination by the Auditor of Public Accounts or his duly authorized deputies at any time the Auditor of Public Accounts may deem it advisable; and such investment company shall pay a fee for each such examination of not to exceed five dollars for each day or fraction thereof plus the actual traveling and hotel expenses of said Auditor of Public Accounts or deputy that he is absent from the capitol building for the purpose of making such examination, and the failure or refusal of any investment company to pay such fees upon the demand of the Auditor of Public Accounts or deputy, while making such examination, shall work a forfeiture of its right to do business in this State.

Sec. 11. Whenever it shall appear to the Auditor of Public Accounts that the assets of any such investment company doing business in this State are impaired to the extent that such assets do not equal its liabilities, or that it is conducting its business in an unsafe, inequitable or unauthorized manner, or is jeopardizing the interest of its stockholders or investors in stock, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, or whenever any such investment company shall fail or refuse to file any papers, statements, or documents required by this Act, without giving satisfactory reasons therefor, said Auditor of Public Accounts shall at once communicate such facts to the Attorney General, who shall thereupon apply to the Supreme Court or to the circuit court where such company is located or is doing business, or to a judge of either of said courts for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of and wind up the business of such investment company and if such fact or facts be made to appear it shall be sufficient evidence to authorize the appointment of a receiver and the making of such orders and decrees in such cases as equity may require.

Sec. 12. Any person who shall knowingly or willfully subscribe to or make or cause to be made any false statements or false entry in any book of such investment company, or exhibit any false paper with the intention of deceiving any person authorized to examine into the affairs of such investment company, or shall make or publish any false statement of the financial condition of such investment company, or the stocks, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, shall be deemed guilty of felony and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars, and shall be imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than ten years in the State penitentiary, or by both such fine or imprisonment, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 13. Any such investment company, domestic or foreign, which shall by or through its duly qualified officers or duly authorized agents knowingly and wilfully subscribe to or make or cause to be made any false statement or false entry in any book of such investment company, or exhibit any false paper with the intention of deceiving any person authorized to examine into the affairs of such investment company, or shall make or publish any false statement of the financial condition of such investment company, or the stocks, bonds or other securities by it offered for sale, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than one hundred dollars nor more than ten thousand dollars and shall be suspended from the right to transact the business in question until such fine and costs are paid and until it shall appear to the Secretary of State that the business will thereafter be conducted honestly and in compliance with this Act.

Sec. 14. Any person or persons, agent or agents, who shall sell or attempt to sell the stocks, bonds or other security of any investment company, as herein defined, domestic or foreign, or the stock, bonds, or other securities by it offered for sale, who have not complied with the provisions of this Act, or any such investment company, domestic or foreign, which shall do any business, or offer or attempt to do any business, except as provided in section 2 of this Act, which shall not have complied with the provisions of this Act, or any agent or agents, who shall do or attempt to do any business for any such investment company, domestic or foreign, in this State, which agent is not at the time duly registered and has fully complied with the provisions of this Act, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon the conviction thereof shall be fined for each offense not less than one hundred dollars, nor more than five thousand dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for not more than ninety days, or both such fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court.

Sec. 15. All fees herein provided for shall be collected by the Auditor of Public Accounts and by him shall be turned into the State treasury, and the Auditor of Public Accounts is hereby authorized to appoint such clerks and deputies as are actually and absolutely necessary to carry this Act into full force and effect, none of whom shall be related by blood or marriage to such Auditor of Public Accounts, or any of his deputies.

Sec. 16. Should the court declare any section of this Act unconstitutional or unauthorized by law, or in conflict with any other section or provision of this Act, then such decision shall affect only the section or provision so declared to be unconstitutional, and shall not affect any other section or part of this Act.

Sec. 17. All acts and parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed.

The question being, "Shall the report of, and the amendments reported from, said committee be adopted?" it was decided in the affirmative.

Mr. Dailey offered the following amendments to the bill, which were adopted:

AMENDMENT No. 1.

Amend title of printed Senate Bill No. 89 by striking out the figures "30,000" in the title of said bill and inserting in lieu thereof "10,000."

SPECIAL ORDERS.

The President of the Senate announced the special order for this hour to be the consideration of the following resolution, offered by Mr. Madigan, April 16, 1913:

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 58.

WHEREAS, Section 15, of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of Illinois, adopted in 1870, expressly provides that "no member of the General Assembly shall be interested, either directly or indirectly in any contract with the State, or any county thereof, authorized by any law passed during the term for which he shall have been elected, or within one year after the expiration thereof;" and,

WHEREAS, The purpose and meaning of the said provision is to prohibit the representatives and servants of the people, delegated especially to guard the public treasury, from becoming personal beneficiaries in appropriations made by the General Assembly, of which they, themselves, are members; and,

WHEREAS, The statement of amounts appropriated by the Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh General Assemblies to the single State office of Attorney General (as shown by a transcript of the books of the Auditor of Public Accounts hereto attached and made a part of this resolution) exhibits numerous instances of payments made directly to certain members of the present and other General Assemblies, who, at the time such appropriations were made and at the time of entering into such contract with the State by which they participated in such appropriations, were members of the General Assembly, and as such expressly forbidden from being "interested, either directly or indirectly, in any contract with the State," and some of the members at the time of this betrayal of trust were acting in positions of highest influence and power on the Committee on Appropriations, through whose special diligence the public funds are supposed to be safeguarded; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That a committee of three (3) members of the Senate be appointed, pursuant to the rules of the Senate, to investigate the matter of public expenditures made during the past ten years in the form of payment of money for services to "the State or any county thereof," rendered or purporting to have been rendered by persons who, at the time of such service, were members of the General Assembly of Illinois, with power to take testimony and send for books and papers and to report their conclusions with recommendations for appropriate legislation for the suppression of such practices.

On motion of Mr. Barr, the foregoing resolution was referred to the Attorney General.

The President of the Senate announced the special order for this hour to be the consideration of the motion made by Mr. Clark, April 30, 1913, to reconsider the vote whereby Senate Bill No. 207, a bill for "An Act to regulate the hours of labor of city employees in cities, whose population exceeds one hundred thousand,"

Failed to pass, April 29, 1913.

The question being, "Shall the vote whereby the bill failed to pass be reconsidered?" and the yeas and nays being called, it was decided in the affirmative by the following vote: Yeas, 27; nays, 5.

The following voted in the affirmative: Messrs.

Andrus,	Clark,	Gorman,	Hurburgh,	O'Connor,
Bailey,	Cleary,	Haase,	Johnson,	Shaw,
Barr,	Dailey,	Hamilton,	Keller,	Tossey,
Campbell,	Denvir,	Hearn,	Madigan,	Waage,
Canaday,	Forst,	Helm,	Manny,	Womack,
Carroll,	Franklin,

Yeas—27.

The following voted in the negative: Messrs.

Ettelson,	Glackin,	Hay,	Jones,	Woodard,
-----------	----------	------	--------	----------

Nays—5.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Clark, the bill was then recalled from the order of third reading to the order of second reading for the purpose of amendment.

At the request of the President of the Senate, the use of the Senate Chamber for tonight was granted for a joint meeting of the House and Senate Committees on Fish and Game.

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS.

Mr. Forst introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 594, for "An Act regulating the weight of coal at points of shipment, and the installation, keep and testing of track scales at all mines and providing penalties for the violation of the same,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Judicial Department and Practice.

Mr. Hurburgh introduced a bill, Senate Bill No. 595, for "An Act relating to unprofessional, dishonorable and immoral conduct in the practice of medicines, surgery and midwifery and providing a penalty therefor,"

Which was read by title, ordered printed, and,

Under Rule 42, was referred by the President of the Senate to the Committee on Judiciary.

Yeas—28.

On motion of Mr. Cornwell, the following resolution received from the House of Representatives, May 5, 1913, was taken up for consideration:

HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTION No. 21.

WHEREAS, Under and by virtue of House Joint Resolution No. 26, of the Forty-seventh General Assembly, adopted by the House of Representatives on the 10th day of May, 1911, and concurred in by the Senate, with amendments, on the 18th day of May, 1911, a commission of ten members was appointed for the purpose of making a careful and exhaustive investigation of the questions of classification of physical conditions of property as a basis of fire insurance rates in the State of Illinois and to consider and arrange a codification of the insurance laws of the State of Illinois, and

WHEREAS, Said Joint Resolution directed that said commission prepare its findings and present the same with its recommendations to the Governor of the State of Illinois and the Forty-eighth General Assembly of this State, and

WHEREAS, Said insurance commission, because of the magnitude of the tasks before it which tasks involve a comparative study of the insurance laws of the principal states of the Union and also of the experiences of insurers and insured thereunder, is unable to present a complete report during this session of the Legislature and, said commission should be given further time to finish its investigation, and complete a codification of the insurance laws of the State of Illinois; therefore be it

Resolved, by the House of Representatives, the Senate concurring therein, That said insurance commission be, and it is hereby perpetuated, and the time given said commission for its investigation and for the codification of the insurance laws of the State of Illinois is hereby extended until the next regular session of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, at which time it is directed to make its report.

The question being, "Shall the Senate concur with the House of Representatives in the adoption of the resolution?" it was decided in the affirmative.

"The Board of Park Commissioners shall have the power to appoint a Superintendent of Parks, a Consulting Landscape Gardener, a Head Gardener and a Head Animal Keeper, which officials shall not be included within the classified civil service of said city, which shall also have power to appoint, or provide for the appointment in accordance with the provisions of "An Act to regulate the civil service of cities," approved March 20th, 1895, of all employees that may be necessary for the efficient management of the department, and to fix their compensation, subject to the power over appropriations vested in the City Council. Said employees shall have credit under "An Act to Provide for the Formation and Disbursement of a Pension Fund in Cities, Villages and Incorporated Towns, having a population exceeding one hundred thousand inhabitants", approved May 31, 1911, in force July 1, 1911, for the time heretofore served, upon the payment into said fund of a sum equal to the amount of money paid into said fund by city employees in the service of the city at the time this Act goes into effect."

AMENDMENT No. 6.

Amend section 13 of Article I on pages 5 and 6 of the printed bill as follows:

Strike out all of section 13, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Except as herein expressly otherwise provided the tenure of office of no officer, and the terms of employment of no employee, of the present city government, or of any of the local governments or corporate authorities hereby consolidated with the city of Chicago, shall be affected by such consolidation, or by the abrogation of the authority under which he holds office, or by the taking effect of this Act, and all the present employees and police officers of the park boards shall be subject to the provisions of the Civil Service law without original examinations."

The question being, "Shall the report of, and the amendments reported from, said committee be adopted?" it was decided in the affirmative.

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

On motion of Mr. Glackin, Senate Bill No. 20, a bill for "An Act providing for the licensing, regulating and inspecting of cold storage warehouses and regulating the sale of articles of food stuffs which have been placed in cold storage warehouses and placing such cold storage warehouses and food stuffs under the control of the State Food Commissioner of this State,"

Was taken up and read at large a second time, together with the following amendment thereto (which has been printed), reported from the Committee on Warehouses and Cold Storage, May 14, 1913:

AMENDMENTS TO SENATE BILL NO. 20.

Reported from Committee on Warehouses and Cold Storage, May 14, 1913.

Strike out all after enacting clause and insert the following:

That for the purpose of this Act, a "Cold Storage Warehouse" shall be defined as a place artificially cooled to a temperature of 45 degrees F. or below, and in which food intended for sale is placed and held for a period exceeding thirty days, but shall not be construed as applying to private houses or to refrigerating cars.

The "Articles of Food" as used in this Act shall be construed to mean and include fresh meat and fresh meat products, except in process of manufacture, fresh food fish, game, poultry, eggs and butter.

Section 2. No article of food intended for human consumption shall be placed in cold storage if diseased, tainted or so deteriorated as to injure its keeping in any way, or if not slaughtered, handled and prepared for storage in accordance with the pure food and sanitary food laws and such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the State Food Commissioner for the sanitary preparation of food products for cold storage, under the authority hereinafter conferred. Any article of food if intended for use other than human consumption before being cold stored shall be marked by the owner in accordance with the forms prescribed by the State Food Commissioners, under authority hereinafter conferred, in such a way as to plainly indicate the fact that such articles are not to be sold for human food.

Section 3. That no person, firm or corporation shall by himself or another, place or store in any cold storage warehouse in this State articles of food as herein defined unless the same shall be plainly marked, stamped or tagged, either upon the container in which they are packed or upon the food itself, with date of receipt: Provided, that all such food in any cold storage warehouse at the time this Act goes into effect shall before being removed therefrom and within thirty days of the time this Act goes into effect be plainly marked, stamped or tagged with the date when it was placed in cold storage or with the date when this Act goes into effect.

No person, firm or corporation shall by himself or another remove such food from any cold storage warehouse unless the same shall be plainly marked, stamped or tagged, either on the container in which it is enclosed or upon the food itself, with the date when such food is removed from the warehouse: Provided, that when such foods are removed for interstate shipment, such marking, stamping or tagging shall not be required.

Section 4. No person, firm or corporation as owners or having control shall keep in cold storage any article of food for a longer period than twelve calendar months, except with the consent of the State Food Commissioner as hereinafter provided. The State Food Commissioner may, upon application, grant permission to extend the period of storage beyond twelve months for a particular consignment of goods, if the goods in question are found upon examination to be in proper condition for further storage at the end of twelve months. The length of time for which further storage is allowed shall be specified in the order granting the permission. A report on each case in which such extension of storage may be permitted, including information relating to the reason for the action of the State Food Commissioner, the kind and amount of goods for which the storage period was extended, and the length of time for which the continuance was granted, shall be included in the annual report of the State Food Commissioner. Such extension shall be for sixty days and not more than one hundred and twenty days in all.

Section 5. It shall be unlawful to sell, or to offer or expose for sale, articles of food which have been held in cold storage without notifying persons purchasing, or intending to purchase the same, that they have been so kept, by the display of a placard marked, "Cold Storage Goods," on the bulk, mass or article, and it shall be unlawful to represent or advertise as fresh goods, articles of food which have been held in cold storage; and any hotel, restaurant, boarding house or dining car which serves foods which have been held in cold storage within the meaning of this Act shall give notice of the same either on the menu card or on a placard placed in a conspicuous place where it can be easily read by the patrons.

Section 6. It shall be unlawful to return to cold storage any article of food which has once been released from such storage and placed on the market for sale to consumers, but nothing in this section shall be construed to prevent the transfer of goods from one cold storage or refrigerating warehouse to another, Provided, that such transfer is not made for the purpose of evading any provision of this act.

Section 7. Any person, firm or corporation desiring to operate a cold storage or refrigerating warehouse shall make application to the State Food Commissioner for that purpose, stating the location of its plant or plants. On receipt of the application the State Food Commissioner shall cause an examination to be made into the sanitary condition of said plant or plants, and if found to be in a sanitary condition and otherwise properly equipped for the business of cold storage, the State Food Commissioner shall cause a license to be issued authorizing the applicant to operate a cold storage or refrigerating warehouse for and during the period of one year. The license shall be issued upon payment by the applicant of a license fee of one hundred dollars ($100.00) to the Treasurer of the State.

Section 8. In the event that any place or places, or any part thereof, covered by a license, under the provision of this Act shall at any time be deemed by the State Food Commissioner to be in an unsanitary condition, it shall be the duty of the State Food Commissioner to notify licensee of such condition and upon the failure of the licensee to put such specified place or places, or the specified part thereof, in a sanitary condition within a designated time it shall be the duty of the State Food Commissioner to prohibit the use under its license such specified place or places, or part thereof, as it deems in an unsanitary condition, until such time as it may be put in a sanitary condition.

Section 9. It shall be the duty of any person, firm or corporation licensed to operate a cold storage or refrigeration warehouse, to keep an accurate record of the receipts and the withdrawals of the articles of food, and the State Food Commissioner shall have free access to these records at any time. Every such person, firm or corporation shall, furthermore, submit a monthly report to the State Food Commissioner, setting forth in itemized particulars quantity of food products held in cold storage. Such monthly reports shall be filed on or before the fifth day of the following month, and the reports so rendered shall show the conditions existing on the last day of the month reported. The monthly reports so made to the State Food Commissioner shall be public records, and shall at all reasonable hours be open to inspection of the public.

Section 10. It shall be the duty of the State Food Commissioner to inspect and supervise all cold storage or refrigerating warehouses in the State and to make such inspection of the entry of articles of food therein as the State Food Commissioner may deem necessary to secure proper enforcement of this Act. The members of the State Food Commission, or its duly authorized agents, inspectors or employees, shall be permitted access to such establishments and all parts thereof at all reasonable times for purposes of inspection and enforcement of the provisions of this Act. The State Food Commissioner may also appoint and designate such person or persons as it deems qualified to make the inspection herein required.

Section 11 The State Food Commissioner may make rules and regulations to secure a proper enforcement of the provisions of this Act, including rules and regulations with respect to the sanitary preparation of articles of food for cold storage, and the violation of such rules shall be punished on conviction, as provided in section 12 of this Act.

Section 12. Any person, firm or corporation violating any of the provisions of this Act shall upon conviction be punished for the first offense by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars ($100.00) and for the second offense by a fine of not exceeding one thousand dollars ($1,000.00) and by imprisonment of not more than six months or by such fine and imprisonment.

Section 13. All acts and parts of acts conflicting with the provisions of this statute are hereby repealed.

RECALL OF HOUSE BILL FROM THIRD READING TO SECOND READING FOR THE PURPOSE OF AMENDMENT.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Clark, House Bill No. 38, a bill for "An Act to authorize the Sanitary District of Chicago to construct, operate and maintain a harbor in Lake Calumet, connecting channels between said lake and other waterways in and adjoining said district and between said waterways, and harbor, sanitation and terminal facilities, and to acquire land and to reclaim and use submerged lands in Lake Calumet therefor."

Mr. Jones offered the following amendments to the bill, which were adopted:

Insert section 3a to read as follows:

"Section 3a. If at any time it shall be necessary to issue bonds for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act, it shall be lawful for the proper authorities to issue bonds in a sum not exceeding one million five hundred thousand dollars: Provided, however, that if at any time it shall be found necessary to issue bonds for carrying out the provisions of this Act, in a sum in excess of one million five hundred thousand dollars, no such bond issue shall be made by the officials charged with the carrying out of the provisions of this Act until the same shall be submitted by said officials to a vote of the electors in the said Sanitary District of Chicago, and shall receive the affirmative vote of a majority of all the electors voting on the question."

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Strike out all following the word "Illinois" in line 15 of section 6 and insert thereafter the two following additional sections:

"Section 6a. The Sanitary District of Chicago may also acquire the lands whether of natural or artificial formation, property and property rights, including riparian rights, of any owner or claimant, whether a person or corporation, private, public or municipal, on the shores of Lake Calumet in, upon or near which it is proposed to construct said harbor or any utility authorized by this Act, and also the title of any such owner or claimant, to the lands lying beneath, adjacent to or adjoining the public waters of said Lake Calumet, without other compensation, by agreeing with any such owner or claimant, upon a boundary line dividing the lands (whether of natural or artificial formation), to be acquired by said Sanitary District of Chicago and the adjacent, adjoining or submerged or other lands (whether of natural or artificial formation) to be taken and acquired by such owner or claimant. The rights and property to be taken and acquired, respectively, by said Sanitary District of Chicago and by any such owner or claimant, shall be specifically described and set forth in the decree to be entered by the court as in this Act provided."

"Sec. 6b. Whenever the Sanitary District of Chicago and such owner or claimant shall have agreed upon a boundary line as aforesaid, such Sanitary District shall file a suit in chancery in the circuit court of the county in which said lands are situated, praying that such boundary line be established and confirmed by the decree of said court. All persons interested as owners or otherwise in said lands, as appearing of record, if known, or if not known, stating that fact, shall be made defendants in said suit. Persons interested, whose names are unknown, may be made parties defendant by the description of the unknown owners; but in all cases an affidavit shall be filed by or on behalf of such Sanitary District, setting forth that the names of such persons are unknown; such Sanitary District shall also give public notice of the filing of each such suit by publication thereof once a week for four consecutive weeks, in a newspaper of general circulation regularly published within said Sanitary District, which notice shall contain the title of the suit and the term of court at which it is made returnable, the last of which notices shall be published not less than ten (10) days or more than twenty (20) days before the first day of the term of court at which said suit is returnable. The defendants who do not enter their appearance shall be served with process in the suit or suits so instituted in the same manner as in suits in chancery, and the proceedings in said cause shall be conducted in the same manner as other suits in chancery. If upon a hearing the court shall find that the rights and interest of the public have been duly conserved in and by such agreement, then the court shall confirm said agreement and establish such boundary line; otherwise the court shall, in its discretion, dismiss such suit. If the boundary line agreed upon shall be so established and confirmed by the decree of said court, it shall thereafter be the permanent dividing and boundary line of said lands, and shall not be affected or changed thereafter, either by accretions or erosions.

"The establishment of such boundary line as aforesaid shall operate as a conveyance and release to such Sanitary District of Chicago of all the right, title and interest of such owner or owners to any and all lands, property and property rights, including riparian rights, lying upon the outer or water side of said boundary line when so established. Said Sanitary District is hereby granted by the State of Illinois the title to any and all lands, property and property rights, including riparian rights, lying upon the outer or water side of said boundary line when so established. Such owner or owners of said shore lands are hereby granted by the State of Illinois the title to the adjacent, adjoining or submerged or other lands, whether of natural or artificial formation, as specifically and particularly described in said decree, lying upon the inner or land side of said boundary line when so established, and such owner or owners shall have the right to fill in, improve, protect and use, sell and convey said submerged or other lands lying upon the inner or land side of said boundary line free from any adverse claim in any way arising out of any question as to where the shore line was at any time in the past, or as to the title to any existing accretions."

AMENDMENT No. 3.

Add to printed House Bill No. 38, the following section to be known and designated as section 6c:

"Sec. 6c. At any time subsequent to July 1, 1918, the city of Chicago shall have the right to acquire and take over the lands and public utilities acquired by the Sanitary District pursuant to this Act, upon the passage of an ordinance by said city of Chicago to that effect, and the payment to the Sanitary District of Chicago of the amount invested and paid by the said Sanitary District for such lands and utilities with legal interest on the said amount to the time of the transfer of the said lands and utilities. The city of Chicago shall thereupon become vested with the title and all rights and interest in said lands and utilities and shall become possessed of all powers, rights and privileges then possessed by the Sanitary District of Chicago pursuant to this Act, and shall be subject to all duties and obligations imposed upon said Sanitary District of Chicago by this Act."

AMENDMENT No. 4.

Was recalled from the Committee on Judiciary and referred to the Committee on Labor.

President pro tempore, Walter I. Manny, now assumed the duties of the chair.

Mr. Ettelson, from the special committee, appointed pursuant to Senate Resolution No. 68, made the following report, which was read and, on his motion, was adopted unanimously:

REPORT OF SPECIAL SENATE COMMITTEE APPOINTED PURSUANT TO SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 68.

Your committee, appointed pursuant to Senate Resolution No. 68 to investigate the averments contained in a certain affidavit then in the custody of the Secretary of the Senate containing allegations reflecting upon the conduct or character of one of the members of the committee of the Senate appointed by virtue of Senate Resolution No. 25 and to inquire as to all matters properly pertaining to said affidavit, report as follows:

On Tuesday, May 6, 1913, Barratt O'Hara, Lieutenant Governor of the State of Illinois and President of the Senate, rising to a question of personal privilege, made a public statement to the Senate as follows:

"Mr. President: A man enters public service with but one thing to preserve, his character and his reputation. In the Springfield Register of Thursday May 1st appears the following article:

'I have an affidavit' declared Sullivan last night. 'I want them to summon me so I will have the opportunity of laying this affidavit before the Senate. Tuesday afternoon Investigator Coan came to my office and stated I was wanted at the session of the Senate at 5:00 o'clock that afternoon. I told him I was not only willing but anxious to appear, but for some reason the session adjourned without calling upon me.'

Since the publication of this article, the Chair has heard that a slanderous rumor has circulated reflecting upon members of the Illinois Senate Welfare Commission, a body created by this Senate and acting for this Senate.

I would most respectfully ask that the Senate have a summons served forthwith upon Mr. Sullivan and that he be requested to bring any or all affidavits reflecting upon any member of this commission, and that he be brought before this Senate immediately. If Mr. Sullivan has any affidavit reflecting upon the Chair, the Chair would most respectfully request that he bring that affidavit first."

Thereupon a resolution was passed by the Senate instructing the Sergeant-at-Arms to subpoena and bring before the bar of the Senate the said Richard M. Sullivan, deputy sheriff of Sangamon County, Illinois; the said Sullivan appeared before the bar of the Senate on May 7, 1913, and upon request was allowed the benefit of counsel, and thereupon interrogated. Said Sullivan submitted the affidavit executed by Maude Alberta Robinson referred to in the foregoing statement of the Lieutenant Governor.

Said Sullivan testified that he had procured the affidavit the preceding evening after having been subpoenaed to appear before the bar of the Senate, that he was not a party to the procuring or the execution of the affidavit and did not know the party executing it but had secured the affidavit for his own protection.

Thereafter your committee examined before the Committee of the Whole of the Senate, M. B. Coan, investigator for the Illinois State Senate Vice Commission appointed pursuant to Senate Resolution No. 25, of which said Barratt O'Hara is chairman. Said Coan testified in substance that the said Sullivan, deputy sheriff of Sangamon County, had requested said Coan to convey a message to the Illinois Senate Vice Commission to the effect that an affidavit was extant charging immoral conduct against the said O'Hara, which affidavit would be used in case the Vice Commission proceeded further with its investigation of certain vice conditions alleged to exist in the city of Springfield.

Thereafter, Senate Resolution No. 68 was adopted by the Senate, which reads as follows:

SENATE RESOLUTION No. 68.

WHEREAS, By virtue of Senate Resolution No. 25, duly adopted February 4, 1913, a certain committee was heretofore appointed consisting of the President of the Senate as chairman thereof and four Senators; and,

WHEREAS, Said committee in pursuance of the provisions of said Senate resolution has been conducting certain investigations; and,

WHEREAS, There is now in the custody of the Secretary of the Senate a certain affidavit containing allegations which reflect upon the conduct or character of one of the members of said committee; and,

WHEREAS, The evidence tends to show that the work of said committee was obstructed or was attempted to be obstructed by the use of said affidavit; be it

Resolved by the Senate, That a committee consisting of Senators Ettelson, Jones, O'Connor and Dailey, be and they are hereby appointed by the Senate as a committee to investigate forthwith the allegations contained in the aforesaid affidavit and to inquire as to their truth or falsity and to make such further inquiries in relation to the subject matter of said affidavit and all matters properly pertaining thereto as in the judgment of the last-mentioned committee shall be deemed advisable or proper; and, be it further

Resolved, That said committee shall report its findings, conclusions and recommendations to this session of the Senate at as early a date as practicable; and, be it further

Resolved, That said committee shall have the power to administer oaths, subpoena witnesses, take evidence, compel such witnesses to testify, compel the production of books, papers and documents, and do any and all other lawful acts to carry out the foregoing purposes; and, be it further

Resolved, That said committee may appoint such clerks or investigators as it may deem necessary.

Your committee examined under oath at various meetings held by it in the city of Chicago and in the city of Springfield the following witnesses, to wit:

Maude Alberta Robinson.

Barratt O'Hara.

Frank Joseph Jacobson.

Frank Herbert O'Hara.

Edward D. Dennahy.

John Zacharias.

Garnett Campbell Eubank.

Jay Cairns.

Clarence Synder, Jr.

Everett Jennings.

G. F. Parker.

Richard H. Colby.

Bernard J. Larkin.

Thomas D. Vredenburg, II.

Sam Davis.

James H. Paddock.

The inquiry in the opinion of your committee presents two distinct questions for consideration:

(1) Was Barratt O'Hara, as inferentially charged in the Robinson affidavit, guilty of immoral conduct?

(2) Was Davis justified in procuring the Robinson affidavit for the purpose which he intended to accomplish?

With respect to the first inquiry, that is relating to the charge of immoral conduct on the part of Barratt O'Hara, we quote the pertinent testimony as follows:

"Maude Alberta Robinson—

"Q. Now, during those three days, at any time did you and Barratt O'Hara occupy the same bed?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. At any time during those three days did you have sexual intercourse with Barratt O'Hara?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. And have you at any time—

"A. No, sir.

"Q. (Continuing)—had sexual intercourse with him?

"A. Positively no.

"Q. You are the same Maude Robinson that made a certain affidavit in Springfield?

"A. Yes, sir."

"Barratt O'Hara—

"Q. Did you register with this woman—?

"A. I did not.

"Q. (Continuing)—Maude Robinson as man and wife?

"A. I did not.

"Q. Or with the other woman in this party?

"A. I did not.

"Q. And you knew nothing about that registration, if there was such a registration?

"A. I knew nothing at all about it. And furthermore, I have never to my positive recollection during the last year, and to the best of my memory during my entire lifetime, I have never registered at the Hotel Sherman, have never occupied a room there, have never passed a night there, or any period of the night or day.

"Q. Have you ever had sexual intercourse with Maude Robinson?

"A. I never have.

"Q. Or this other woman in the party?

"A. I never have.

"Q. At any time?

"A. At any time."

"Thomas D. Vredenburg, II—

"Q. Do you know of any sexual impropriety that occurred between Barratt O'Hara and a woman named Robinson, or any other woman, in the Hotel Sherman on January 17th last in the city of Chicago?

"A. I do not.

"Q. Do you know of any sexual impropriety that occurred between Barratt O'Hara and a woman named Robinson, or any other woman, in the Hotel Sherman in Chicago on January 18th last?

"A. I do not.

"Q. Just keep your voice up. What is the answer to that?

"A. I do not.

"Q. Do you know of any sexual impropriety that occurred between Barratt O'Hara and a woman named Robinson, or any other woman, in the Hotel Sherman in Chicago on January 19th of this year?

"A. No."

On the second subject of inquiry, that is the purpose for which the affidavit was procured by Davis, and the intended use thereof, we quote the pertinent testimony as follows:

"Maude Alberta Robinson—

"Q. * * * Miss Robinson * * * how did you come to sign this particular affidavit?

"A. Well, I was urged a number of times and asked to by Mr. Davis, and was told that it was for purely a personal reason, that it would never be made public under any conditions. I rather think the main purpose of the affidavit was a bluff, because they felt confident that the mere statement that they had an affidavit would silence Mr. O'Hara and the Vice Commission.

"Q. Yes. Silence him in what way?

"A. On the Vice Commission, the fact that he is the chairman of the Vice Commission and the investigations that he was putting through at Springfield.

"Q. What talk did you have with Mr. Davis, if any, about the investigations of the Vice Commission?

"A. Well, only in a general way. Of course, it is understood that he was subpoenaed to appear before the commission, and he feared that he would be attacked, as the Lieutenant Governor had attacked this man in the shoe factory—I don't recall the name, and he of course was indignant about it, and told me that he wanted this affidavit so that if he started to say anything—talk to him like he did to this other party that he would not be able to go through with it. That is what he didn't want done. He didn't want him to defame his character. He told me that it was purely to protect his own interests.

* * * * *

"Q. In your talk with Davis relating to this affidavit, prior to its execution, did you discuss with Davis the question of intercourse?

"A. No. No, sir. Never was discussed.

"Q. With O'Hara, I mean?

"A. No, sir.

"Q. Intercourse with O'Hara?

"A. It was not discussed.

"Sam Davis—

"Q. What is your business?

"A. Wholesale liquor.

"Q. What is the style of the firm?

"A. Davis, Ensel & Company.

"Q. Do you know a woman named Maude Robinson?

"A. I do.

"Q. Did you secure an affidavit recently from Maude Robinson?

"A. I have.

"Q. You have secured such an affidavit?

"A. Yes, Sir.

"Q. How did you happen to secure that affidavit? What was your purpose in so doing?

"A. My purpose in securing the affidavit was for this reason, that while summoned as a witness before the Vice Commission and while sitting there and hearing the testimony given by other witnesses, among one was a man by the name of Derby who is the superintendent of the shoe works—International Shoe Company, I think it is; and I thought in my opinion that the fellow got a terrible grilling from the commission. I thought they were very unfair in dealing with him, and I made up my mind that if they ever attempted to grill me in a like manner that I would be prepared to defend myself from the commission, and that I went out, hearing of the episode and I asked her to make me a sworn statement of the facts as I have heard them.

"Q. When you say 'her' you mean Miss Robinson?

"A. Yes.

"Chairman Ettelson: Let us see the affidavit.

"(Affidavit handed to the committee by Secretary Paddock of the Senate.)

"Chairman Ettelson: Q. Go ahead, Mr. Davis.

"A. And that if I was called on and being grilled the way this fellow was, I wanted to be prepared to defend myself against it for my own personal use.

"Q. Is this the affidavit (handing same to the witness) that you secured from Maude Robinson?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. In whose handwriting is the affidavit?

"A. Mine. (Witness returns affidavit to Chairman Ettelson.)

"Q. And who is Ensel the Notary Public, is he related to you in a business way at all?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. What is the relationship?

"A. Partner in business.

"Q. Well, Mr. Davis, just tell the committee how you intended to use the affidavit?

"A. I intended in event he accosted me in the same manner in which he did that man.

"Q. Who do you mean by 'he'? You say 'he accosted'; whom do you mean by 'he accosted'?

"A. Well, the chairman.

"Q. Barratt O'Hara?

"A. Yes, sir.

"Q. Yes, go ahead; in the event Barratt O'Hara accosted you?

"A. In the manner in which Mr. Derby was accosted there I would naturally be obliged to tell him what I knew of him, and in order to substantiate my assertions to him I had to be prepared in the shape of an affidavit."

Your committee finds in view of the evidence, that said Davis, one of said witnesses, procured said Maude Alberta Robinson to sign and swear to said affidavit which was skillfully phrased and adroitly designed to convey the impression that Barratt O'Hara, President of the Senate, who is chairman of said committee authorized by said Resolution No. 25, had been guilty of improper conduct with said Maude Alberta Robinson; that said affidavit was procured by the said Davis with the idea of using it for the purpose of hampering the said commission in its investigation of vice conditions in said city of Springfield, and that said Davis was moved to do this by what he regarded as unfair and abusive methods in the examination of certain witnesses, particularly the witness Derby, before said commission at its meetings held in the said city of Springfield.

The said improper conduct charged by insinuation in said affidavit was positively denied by the said Maude Alberta Robinson in her testimony above quoted, and it was positively denied by the President of the Senate, who also appeared as a witness and whose testimony on this point is above quoted.

Such denials were fully corroborated by the testimony of the other witnesses, and your committee finds that there was no foundation for the charges inferentially and insinuatingly made in said affidavit that said Barratt O'Hara was guilty of immoral conduct.

This committee further finds that the conduct of said Davis in procuring said affidavit and threatening to use it in the manner and for the purpose as clearly shown by his own testimony and corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses, was improper and unjustifiable, that it was an effort on his part to place himself in a position to attempt to intimidate said President of the Senate and to hamper and obstruct said commission in its work of investigation and to cast discredit upon the members of said committee and particularly upon the chairman thereof.

This committee further finds that the said Senate Vice Commission, so-called, in the conduct of the examination of the witness Derby, as appears from a transcript of its proceedings at its session held in the city of Springfield, April 25, 1913, is subject to criticism as exceeding the bounds of judicial propriety; that the said commission did not permit the witness Derby to present fully his side of the question then under consideration and treated with undue severity both the witness and the manufacturing concern which he represented; that the language employed by the commission on this occasion was intemperate.

Your committee, however, finds that such conduct of the commission although subject to criticism was not a justification for the act of the witness Davis in procuring and attempting to use the affidavit of said Maude Alberta Robinson aforesaid; that the said witness in case of improper examination had a proper legal remedy well recognized in legislative inquiries and courts of law and should have invoked the same instead of resorting to the objectionable practice adopted by him as aforesaid.

Your committee therefore reports that said Barratt O'Hara was not, and has not been, guilty of improper or immoral conduct at the time or place mentioned in said affidavit.

Your committee further reports that the action of said Sam Davis in procuring the affidavit in question was reprehensible and should be and is hereby censured and condemned.

Your committee further recommends that in the event said Davis or any other person duly subpoenaed to appear as a witness before said Senate Vice Commission shall endeavor by the same or similar practices to hinder or obstruct the work of such committee, then in that event said person or persons should be brought before the bar of the Senate and punished for contempt or otherwise dealt with in accordance with law.

SAMUEL A. ETTELSON, Chairman.

WALTER CLYDE JONES,

JOHN M. O'CONNOR,

JOHN DAILEY.

RECALL OF BILL FROM THIRD READING TO SECOND READING.

By unanimous consent, on motion of Mr. Chamberlin, Senate Bill No. 133, a bill for "An Act in relation to the semi-monthly payment of wages and salaries, by corporations, and all employers of laborers and servants, and providing penalty for violation of same,"

Was recalled from the order of third reading to the order of second reading for amendment.

Mr. Chamberlin offered the following amendments to the bill, which were adopted:

AMENDMENTS TO SENATE BILL NO. 133.

AMENDMENT No. 1.

Amend the title of Senate Bill No. 133 to read as follows: "For an Act in relation to the semi-monthly payment of wages and salaries by corporations for pecuniary profit, and providing penalty for violation of same."

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Amend Senate Bill No. 133, by striking out in line 8 of the printed bill, the word "on" and insert in lieu thereof, following the word "thereafter," in line 8 of the printed bill, the words "at any time upon six days."

AMENDMENT No. 3.

Amend Senate Bill No. 133 by adding, following the word "employment," in line 10 of the printed bill, the words "at any time upon three days demand."

AMENDMENT No. 4.

Amend Senate Bill No. 133, by adding at the close of section 1, the following paragraph:

"And each and every employee of any corporation coming within the meaning of this Act shall have his or her right of action against any such corporation for the full amount of his or her wages due on each regular payday as herein provided in any court of competent jurisdiction of this State."

AMENDMENT No. 5.

Amend Senate Bill No. 133, by adding after the word "offense," in line 4, of section 2, of the printed bill the following words: "and each and every failure or refusal to pay each employee the amount of wages due him or her at the time, or under the conditions required in section 1 of this Act, shall constitute a separate offense."

The question then being, "Shall the bill, as amended, be engrossed and printed for a third reading?" it was decided in the affirmative.

The President of the Senate announced the next special order to be the consideration on second reading of Senate Bill No. 162, a bill for "An Act to regulate the civil service in counties containing one hundred and fifty thousand or more inhabitants."

The bill was taken up and having been printed, was read at large a second time, together with the following amendments reported from the Committee on Civil Service, May 8, 1913:

AMENDMENT No. 1.

Strike out all of section 3b and insert in lieu thereof, the following:

Sec. 3b. PERSONS IN COUNTY SERVICE WHEN ACT APPLIES.] In any county which is now, or which hereafter may become, subject to the provisions of this Act, all persons who at the time when this Act takes effect, or becomes applicable, hold offices or places of employment which this Act provides shall be classified, shall be included under the provisions of this Act and shall become members of the classified civil service of such county without original examination: Provided, that no person appointed after the passage of this Act shall be included in the classified service without examination.

AMENDMENT No. 2.

Amend section 4 of printed bill by adding the following after the word "rules" in line 6: Provided, that no rule shall be made which shall deprive any person in the classified service of any political right enjoyed by any other citizen, except as hereinafter provided in this Act.

AMENDMENT No. 3.

Insert after section 10a of printed bill a new section to be designated as section 10b, which shall read as follows:

Sec. 10b. LAY-OFFS AND RE-INSTATEMENTS.] Whenever it becomes necessary through lack of work or of funds to reduce the number of officers or employees in the classified service in any department, the employee to be laid off shall be determined by the efficiency markings for the six months preceding the time of the lay-off, the least efficient being laid off first. Where there are no efficiency markings covering the preceding six months, the judgment of the department head as to relative efficiency shall control. Employees so laid off shall be placed on a preferred reinstatement list and shall be preferred for appointment to vacancies before any other eligibles. They shall take rank on such preferred reinstatement list in the order of their efficiency ratings, and shall be certified for reinstatement in such order: Provided, that the head of the department may specify that certifications to vacancies in his department from such reinstatement list shall be made in order from persons on such list who were laid off from his department, or have had experience in his department, if there be any such persons on such list.

AMENDMENT No. 4.

Amend section 11, line 9, of printed bill by inserting after the words "all assistant state's attorneys" the words, "and other employees."

On motion of Mr. Magill, a separate vote was ordered taken on the first amendment.

The question then being, "Shall the first amendment be adopted?" and the yeas and nays being called, it was decided in the negative by the following vote: Yeas, 22; nays, 25.
